P R E F A C E.

DURING the time I set myself the pleasurable task of investigating the early history of Child's Bank, I had occasion to look through a vast quantity of old cheques, bills, and cash-notes, extending in time close upon two centuries; when I observed that all drafts passing through the hands of a goldsmith or banker were endorsed by such goldsmith or banker, and that in most cases the endorsements were witnessed by one of the clerks.

I applied myself, therefore, to the collection of all these drafts, or a fair sample of them, with a view to seeing how far they would throw light upon the early history of bankers. This done, the next step was to refer to the List of Goldsmiths keeping running-cashes, published in the "Little London Directory" of 1677, and to extract lists of all goldsmiths and bankers from the London Directories at the British Museum. The first of the set—a thin volume—was published in 1677; the second did not appear until 1736; and the next dates were 1738, 1740, 1754, 1759, 1763, and so on, with occasional intervals of a few years, down to the present date. To these I have added lists compiled from data at my disposal for the years 1670, 1687, 1700, 1725; the latter-list will show what a thinning-out there was after the disastrous times of the South Sea Bubble. Upon turning again to the documents at my disposal, however, I discovered that the missing data, not to be obtained from the British Museum, Guildhall Library, and other likely sources, could be supplied by the endorsements to the old drafts and cash-notes in the possession of Messrs. Child and Co. In addition to these materials, I have been enabled to obtain information respecting early goldsmiths and bankers from other quarters, of which due acknowledgment is made in the course of these pages.

My design further embraces the complete series of Lists of Bankers as published in the various London Directories. These lists generally have been obtained from the British Museum; individual media are specified at foot of those otherwise derived. It is a matter of regret to me that an unbroken sequence of dates cannot be obtained owing to the Directories for many years not having been preserved in the National Library.

Having regard to greater convenience for reference, I have elected to compile this volume after the style rather of a dictionary than of a running chronological account. The names of goldsmiths and bankers of whom no information can be gathered are omitted, unless such goldsmiths' or bankers' names do not appear in the lists at the end of the volume, as they would simply amount to needless repetition.

The various firms are described under the styles by which such banks last flourished or were familiarly known, the names of the firms being from time to time mentioned with references to the heads under which they are recorded.

During the period that has elapsed since the publication of the "Handbook of London Bankers" in 1876, which was the first edition of this work, I have been able to correct errors, make large additions, and add a great deal of new material to my former statements relating to the various banks. As far as regards Lombard Street, my sincere thanks are due to all the Bankers, the owners of the various houses (including, in some cases, the Corporation of the City of London and the Livery Companies), and the other inhabitants for generously giving me access to their title-deeds, which have enabled me to record the signs and former occupants of nearly every house in that street. This has been largely supplemented by reference to the Registers of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth, in which so many goldsmiths and bankers have resided, also to the books of the parish of St. Edmund the King and Martyr, kindly placed at my disposal by the Rev. Canon Benham. Much interesting and valuable history has also been gleaned from the Public Record Office, the London Gazettes, and other old newspapers, likewise from various works, the titles of which I transcribe on the next page.

The old goldsmiths, whose names I have obtained from various sources before the Commonwealth, were for the most part simply workers in the precious metals, who were styled plate-workers. From about the year 1710 I have (with few exceptions) omitted chronicling them, as after that date, had they kept running-cashes, they would have called themselves bankers.

After the closing of the Exchequer in 1672, several fresh names appear as goldsmiths keeping running-cashes, who had been for the most part servants, that is to say, clerks to big men, such as Backwell, Vyner, and others, who had been forced to suspend their payments in consequence of the confiscation of their deposits in the Exchequer, which amounted in the aggregate to £1,328,526.

I take this opportunity of thanking all the Bankers and other friends who have so generously supplied me with information when solicited.

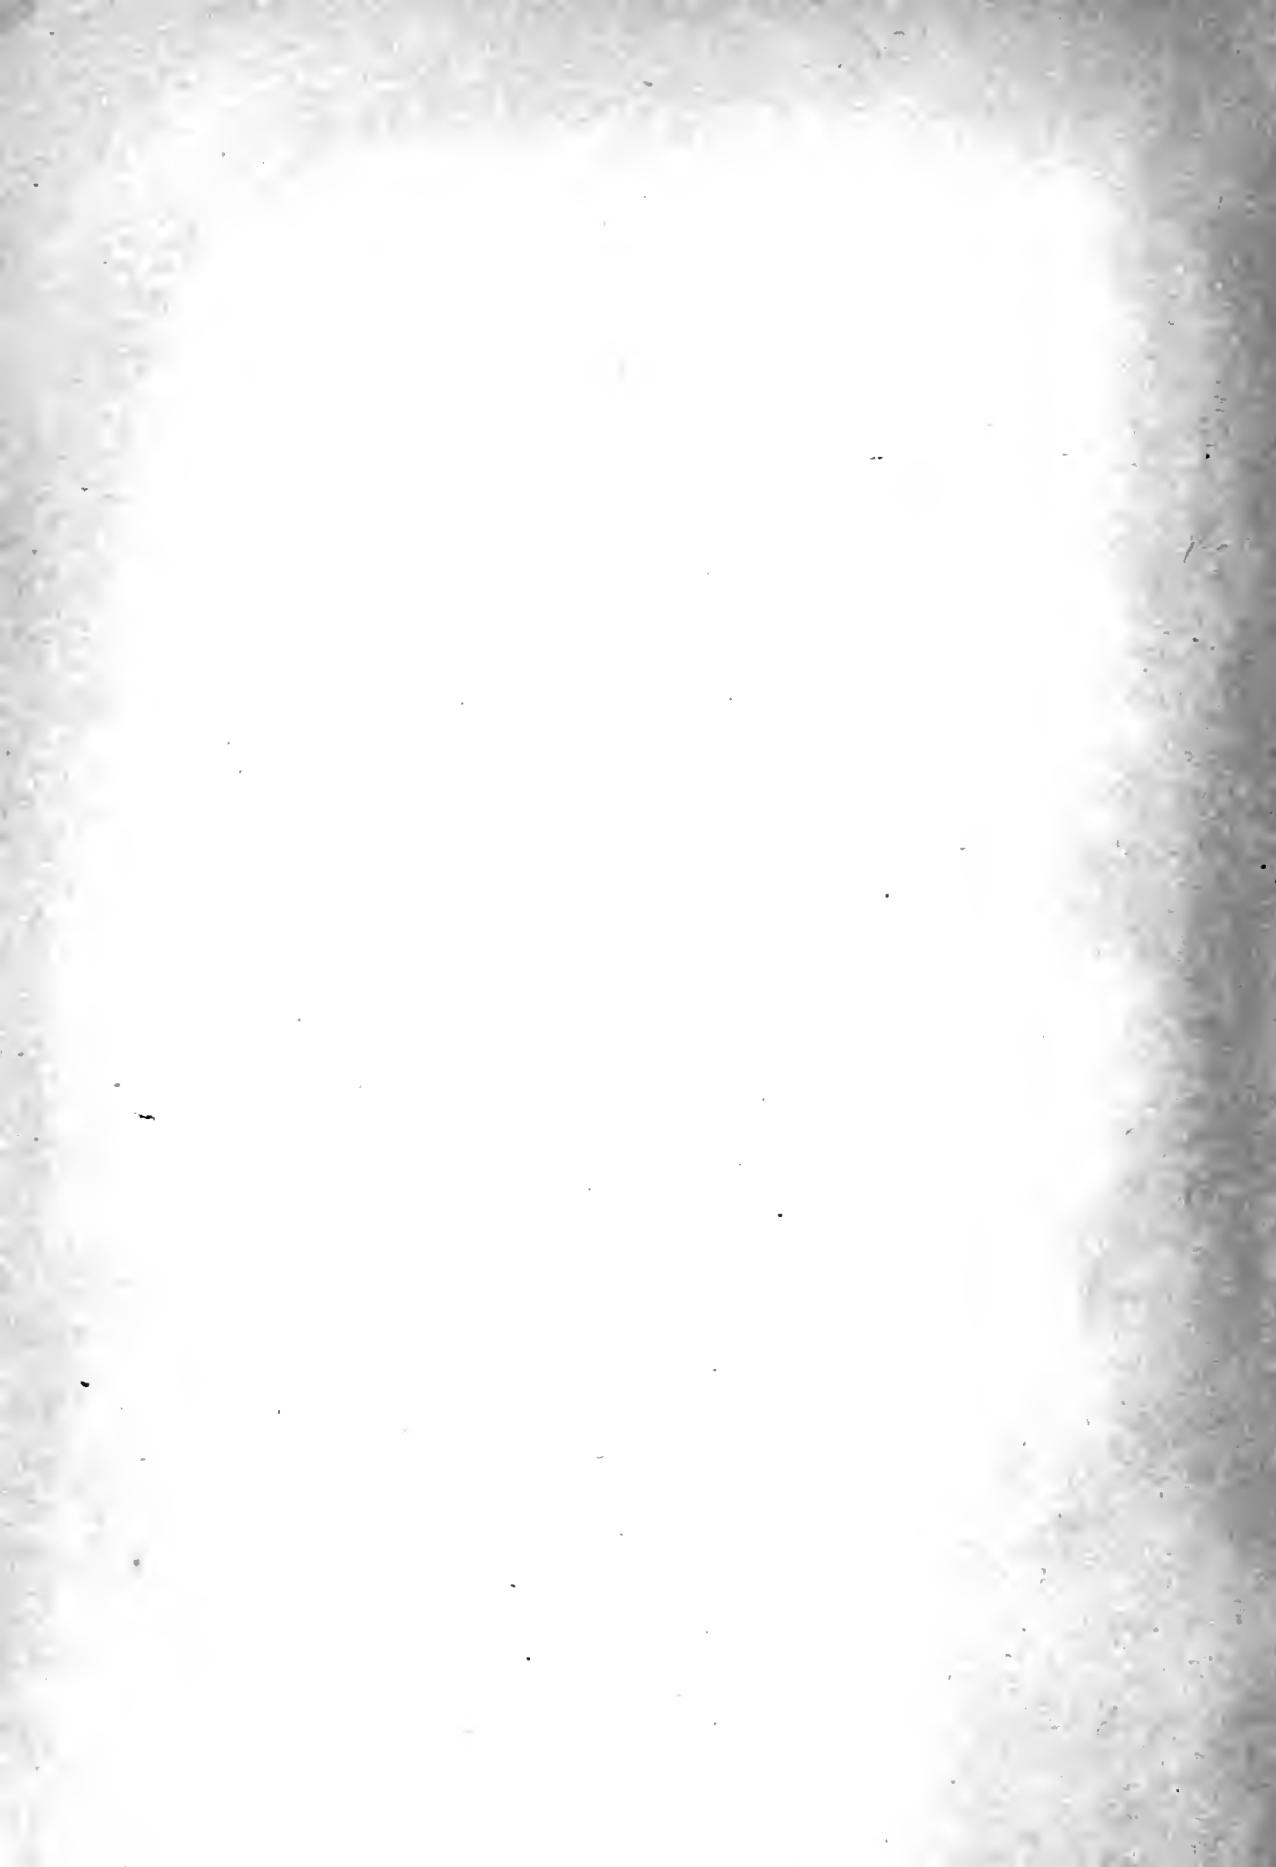

The copious reference Index will be found useful.

A HANDBOOK OF

LONDON BANKERS.

Acton, John,

Goldsmith to Charles I., circa 1600-31. He lived in the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Adams, Richard,

Was a goldsmith. In 1682 he was located at the Black Horse, in the Strand, near Charing Cross. In the "Little London Directory" of 1677 we find that Mr. Ketch, a goldsmith, was keeping running-cashes at this same house. Richard Adams was at this sign in 1711, as we see by the Spectator of July 5. A gold snuff-box had been lost, and the finder was desired to bring it to Mr. Adams, or to Mr. White's Chocolate House, in St. James's Street. This was the origin of "White's Club."

Ade.

Goldsmith to King Edward I. Many of the gold and silver vessels made for the sideboard of that king are said to have been his work.

Adey.

The firm of Adey, Macgeorge, and Co., which was started at 22, Old Bond Street, in 1800, was of short duration, as it does not appear in the list of bankers for 1805. The name of Adey had been associated with the firm of Boldero, Kendell, and Co., from the year 1770 up to 1800, which rather points to the conclusion that he left the latter firm to start a bank in Old Bond Street.

Adis, John,

A goldsmith, 1400. Stow relates that there was a monument to him and Margaret, his wife, in the church of St. John Zachary. He died 1461.

Addis, John, and Co.

Were keeping running-cashes at the Sun, in Lombard Street, in 1677. The London Gazette of September 20, 1683, announces a meeting of their creditors.

Agra and Masterman's Bank.

Established in 1855, with a paid-up capital of £1,500,000, and a reserve fund of £500,000. It stopped payment in the crisis of May, 1866, at which time its liabilities were £15,582,002. (See MASTERMAN.)

Albion Bank, 1864-71. (See CHALLIS.)

Aldworth, Thomas, 1772,

Of the Wheatsheaf and Star, in Cheapside. Nothing is known of him.

Alexanders and Co.,

Of 24, Lombard Street, bankers and bill-brokers, started in business in 1806, by Mr. William Alexander joining John Rickman, the style of the firm being J. Rickman and Co. This firm was dissolved in 1810, and Mr. Alexander carried on the business by himself, under the style of Alexander and Co., at 33, Lombard Street.

In 1819 William Alexander died, and from that time George William Alexander, his eldest son, who had been a clerk in the house for several years, took the management, he being only seventeen years of age, and the firm being Ann Alexander and Co., representing the widow of William Alexander. When he came of age in 1824, he became a partner, and the style was changed to Messrs. A. and G. W. Alexander and Co. In 1862 the firm was joined by the partners of the firm of Cunliffes and Co., as Alexanders, Cunliffes, and Co. This firm was again dissolved in 1877, and was carried on by George William Alexander and his two sons, Robert Harry Alexander and William Cleverley Alexander, as Alexanders and Co.

The present firm consists of—

George William Alexander.
Robert Harry Alexander.
William Cleverley Alexander.
Robert Ernest Alexander.
William Geoffrey Alexander.
Henry David Anderson.

Allen, Thomas,

Goldsmithe, 1678, of St. Foster, London.

Alliance Bank (Limited),

Bartholomew Lane, was established in 1862, and reconstructed in 1871. It has a paid-up capital of £800,000, with a reserve fund of £255,000. This bank has several branches.

Allyn, James,

Goldsmithe, 1572–90, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Alsopp, John,

Goldsmithe and citizen of London, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth: buried in 1563 in the church.

Amades, Robert, 1518,

Was goldsmith to Cardinal Wolsey, and master or keeper of the jewels to Henry VIII. He died in 1533, and desired to be buried in the church of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Ambresbure, Geoffrey de,

Goldsmithe, circa 1272. By his last will he gives and assigns houses, gardens, and rents in the parishes of St. Giles without Crapplegate and St. Michael de Wodestrate for the purpose of founding a chantry; the said rents to be collected by the wardens of the Fraternity of St. Dunstan (the predecessors of the Goldsmiths' Company). To his brother he devises certain houses; and to the monks of Clerkenwell certain rents for maintaining a chantry in their church ("Calendar of Wills, Court of Husting, London").

Amson, Edward, 1706,

Residing at the sign of the Ring, Fleet Street, was a goldsmith. He died in 1720, and his goods were advertised, to be disposed of, in the London Gazette.

Amyand, Staples, and Co., 1762. (See DIMSDALE.)

Anderson, John and Alexander,

Appeared in the list of bankers in 1793 as carrying on business at 17, Philpot Lane. They are not found in the Directory after 1812.

Anthony, Charles,

Goldsmith, circa 1592-3, of St. John Zachary, London.

Arch (William) and Robinson (Benjamin).

The earliest mention of them is in 1701; they failed in 1707. The firm was sometimes styled Robinson and Arch.

Archer, Hyde, and Co., 1776. (See DIMSDALE.)

Asgill, Sir Charles, and Co., 1755. (See NIGHTINGALE.)

Ashley, James,

135, Regent Street, 1827-39.

Asschingdone, William de,

Goldsmith, of St. Leonard in St. Vedast Lane, circa 1307.

Atkins, Honeywood, and Fuller,

Of Lombard Street, 1738. (See FULLER.)

Atkinson, Thomas,

Goldsmith, circa 1610, of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Atwell and Co.

Were bankers and goldsmiths, of whom the earliest mention found is in 1687. They were located in Exchange Alley, Lombard Street. From 1687 to 1705 the firm consisted of William Atwell and Adrian Courtney. The latter died in August, 1705, and was buried in St. Mary Woolnoth's.

In 1714 the firm became Atwell and Hammond; the business was afterwards conducted by William Hammond until April 10, 1722, when the failure of William Atwell and Co., brought about by the panic that ensued upon the collapse of the South Sea Bubble, was announced in the London Gazette.

From the following lines, written by Gay in 1720 to Snow, the goldsmith, we may infer that Atwell was shaky then:

"When credit sank and commerce gasping lay,
Thou stood'st, nor sent one Bill unpaid away;
When not a guinea chinked on Martin's boards,
And Atwell's self was drained of all his hoards."

Austen, Maunde, and Austen.

This firm was of short duration. We have been favoured by the sight of a promissory note of the Horwood Well Company, Wincanton, for £1 1s., domiciled at their house in October, 1807. They were established at 10, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, between 1807 and 1814.

Avenon, William,

Goldsmith, 1631. He is recorded as having built the south doorway of St. Catherine Cree church at his own expense. His recumbent effigy in a winding sheet, which used to be over the door externally, has just been removed.

Ayton and Co. 1774 and 1785–98. (See LEES.)

Backwell, Alderman Edward,

Was an eminent goldsmith and banker. We are unable to trace the origin of his business or the exact date when he began, but have ascertained that he was in a large way of business during the Commonwealth and the reign of Charles II. It would appear from the following extract from the "Royalist Comp. Papers," series 1, vol. viii. p. 609, that in 1653–4 he was in Cheapside : "John Buckner went to a house in Cheapside, where he paid unto Mr. Edward Backwell's servant the sum of four hundred pounds upon a bond."

From the State Papers we find Backwell was employed to carry out some new coinage. In 1656 we read it was the Council's intention to use bullion supplied by Edward Backwell. It was to be taken into the Mint, and made into coin by Peter Blondeau, with milled edge and Cromwell's head. During the next year we find a large quantity of bullion, which Viner and Backwell had contracted with the Council to supply, was coined into money.

Backwell was elected Alderman of Bishopsgate Ward on January 31, 1657.

During the Commonwealth he usually paid 6 per cent. for money on deposit ; and the ordinary price of silver was from 5s. 6d. to 5s. 7d. per ounce.

Backwell was paymaster and treasurer of the Dunkirk garrison from the days of Cromwell until that town was sold to the French king in 1662. All the money expended there was supplied by him, he receiving Exchequer tallies in payment. In February, 1659, he was paid in a very unusual manner. It is recorded in one of his ledgers that he received "of the Committee of Parliament by old plate, 1529 : ii. oz."

His old books are full of interesting and valuable accounts for plate and jewels supplied by him during the Protectorate and reign of Charles II., some of which I have published elsewhere.

On April 29, 1670, Prince Rupert was charged £960 3s. 9d. for various pieces of plate, of which the full particulars are set forth in an old ledger under date. Nine or ten of the Alderman's ledgers are in the possession of Messrs. Child and Co., who, upon the failure of Alderman Backwell, took over many of his customers' accounts ; and with whom a considerable number of their descendants bank to the present day.

State Papers and his own books show that he had large operations with Oliver Cromwell, Richard Cromwell, and other celebrities, of whom the following is a select list :—

King Charles II.

Queen of England.

Queen Mother (Henrietta Maria).

James, Duke of York.

Prince Rupert.

Henry Cromwell.

Charles, Duke of Richmond ; son of the Duchess of Portsmouth, natural son of Charles II.

James, Duke of Monmouth, natural son of Charles II.

Duchess of Orleans.

Countess of Castlemaine.

Prince of Orange.

Samuel Pepys, the Diarist.

The Earl of Sandwich.

Hyde, Earl of Clarendon.

Sir Josiah Child.

Thomas Chaffinch, closet-keeper to Charles II. ; besides a great number of other people of note, who are often mentioned by Pepys in his Diary.

In addition to the above, the ledgers show the accounts of the East India Company ; the Goldsmiths' Company, and other City companies ; Sir Thomas Vyner and Sir Robert Vyner, the goldsmiths ; Thomas Wood of Littleton ; and John Houblon, afterwards Sir John Houblon, Lord Mayor and first Governor of the Bank of England, upon the site of whose house the present Bank of England was erected. All the goldsmiths of that time kept accounts with Backwell's for clearing purposes, as they likewise did with Blanchard and Child and all other goldsmiths, were their books only in existence to prove it.

Backwell removed to Lombard Street about the year 1654. His shop was at the corner of Change Alley, and was called the Unicorn, the site being now occupied by No. 69. Messrs. Martin and Co. are in possession of a deed which shows that Backwell was at the Grasshopper after the Great Fire. His premises were spacious, according to Strype (bk. ii. p. 149), who writes : " It is a large place, vastly improved, chiefly out of an house of Alderman Backwell's, a goldsmith before the Great Fire." After the Great Fire he purchased considerable property in Lombard Street, which Pepys said looked like a little town. Backwell made some very important alterations at the back of his bank in 1663, as we gather from the following entry in Pepys' Diary on July 3 in that year : " Thence to the Change, and meeting Sir I. Minnes there, he and I walked to look upon Backwell's design of making another alley from his shop through over against the Exchange door, which will be very noble and quite put down the other two."

On December 24, 1660, Pepys went to " chose a payre of candlesticks," and on the 27th he called and found them done. On the 29th, having tired of his candlesticks, he took " a brave state plate and cupp " in lieu of them, and carried them off by coach.

After the Great Fire, it will be seen from the following order that the Alderman had lodgings given him by the State. The official letter, or order, which I derive through Mr. T. C. Noble from the State Papers in the Record Office (" Entry Book, No. 23, Domestic Series, Charles II.," p. 228), will serve to substantiate the view I have expressed of the high position of Alderman Backwell as a banker in this reign :—

"Whereas, it have humbly been represented unto us, in favour of Aldⁿ Backwell, that by the late calamity of the fire hapened in our City of London, he is become destitute of a house or fitt abode for y^e management of his affaires. And we, taking into our Princely consideracon the greatest importance it is of, as well to y^e publicke, as more immediately to our owne service, to have him accomodated with a convenient place for y^e dispatch and carrying on his businesse, wee have thought fitt hereby to signify our pleasure to y^e, and very effectually to recommend it to y^e, to accomodate y^e s^t Aldⁿ Backwell wth what lodgings in Gresham Colledge are in y^e power and possession, it being in order to our owne service and y^e better conveniency of our affaires in his landes, in wth if y^e shall happen to be questioned or interrupted, Our pleasure is that you forthwith give notice thereof to one of our Principal Sect^r of State, to the end wee may give further orders therein. And, &c. Sept. y^e 10, 1666.

" By his Mat^{ie} command,

" ARLINGTON.

"To our trusty &

" Dr. Jonathan Goddard."

On December 30, 1668, the Great Fire Commissioners certified that Edward Backwell was to rebuild the premises destroyed in the fire—" All that were shopp at the south end of the new alley, called Exchange Alley, next Lombard Street, in the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth"—having a frontage of twenty-six feet to Lombard Street, thirty-six feet in the rear, and a depth of sixty feet. The lease was enlarged by an additional term of forty years, and the rent was fixed at £70. The lease of the premises was formerly held by Charles Everard, goldsmith, in 1662 ; next by John Wasson, goldsmith ; and in August, 1666, by Joseph Hornby, who transferred it to Backwell.

" He was frequently sent for by the King when he was in need of money ; which it seems was a chronic state with that monarch.

Pepys mentions the name of Edward Backwell no less than twenty-six times.—On July 6, 1665, he records: “Alderman Backwell is ordered abroad upon some private score with a great sum of money; wherein I was instrumental the other day in shipping away. It seems some of his creditors have taken notice of it, and he was like to be broke yesterday in his absence; Sir G. Carteret telling me that the King and the Kingdom must as good as fall with that great man at this time; and that he was forced to get £4000 himself to answer Backwell’s people occasions, or he must have broke; but committed this to me as a great secret.”

A few days afterwards (on the 26th) Pepys says: “Whilst Backwell is still in Flanders, poor Robin Shaw, his right-hand man, died of the plague.”

The King himself inquired about Shaw, and, being told he was dead, said he was very sorry for it.

And again, on November 23, 1665, Pepys was with Alderman Backwell, talking of the new money, which he believes will never be counterfeited: “but it is so deadly inconvenient for telling; it is so thick, and the edges are made to turn up.”

On June 13, 1667, Pepys records a run upon Backwell’s house: “They are so called upon for money that they will be all broke, hundreds coming to them for money: and they answer him, ‘it is payable at twenty days:—when the days are out, we will pay you:’ and those that are not so, they make tell over their money and make their bags false, on purpose to give cause to retell it and so spend time. I cannot have my 200 pieces of gold again for silver, all being bought up last night that were to be had, and sold for 24s. and 25s. a piece. So I must keep the silver by me, which sometimes I think to fling into the house of office, and then again know not how I shall come by it, if we be made to leave the office.” The house weathered that storm, as the same authority states that he called on Backwell on May 3, 1668, when the banker told him how he had bought an estate at Buckeworth, within four miles of Brampton in Hunts.

By a Privy Seal issued October 21, 1661, in the favour of Backwell, £26,156 was ordered for the pay of the garrison of Dunkirk. The garrison consisted of 4400 soldiers, besides officers, and six troops of horse; and the monthly charge thereof was £8718 13s. 4d. per month of twenty-eight days. Upon the plea of expense, and owing to Clarendon’s fear that in case of war with France we could not hold it, Dunkirk was ordered to be sold, and Backwell was directed by a royal warrant, dated October 20, 1662, to repair to Paris for the purpose of receiving 4,500,000 livres from his Most Christian Majesty, the French King. He afterwards was ordered to have this sum struck into coins by the mill and press, which, as we have already stated, he found so deadly inconvenient for telling.

Backwell also brought out several large loans for the King. I have seen Privy Seals directing the Commissioners of the Treasury to pay him various large sums for interest on the money he had advanced. The rate he received was 6 per cent., including a gratuity of two-thirds for his seasonable supply of the money. On September 14, 1667, the King made him a free gift of £8000 in consideration of large advances to the Exchequer. The Privy Seal records that this sum was given, as he was forced to admit larger sums of other men’s money into the bank, upon which he had to allow interest greater than he otherwise would.

There is much interesting matter that I could add concerning this banker, which I am forced to omit in consequence of want of space; but, for the information of those who would know more of him, I would refer them to a paper I read before the London and Middlesex Archaeological Society (vol. vi.), entitled, “Some Account of the Business of Alderman Edward Backwell.”

A Privy Council having been called on January 2, 1672, the Exchequer was closed, when the Crown’s indebtedness to Backwell amounted to no less a sum than £295,994 16s. 6d. In lieu of this the King settled upon him an annuity of £17,759 13s. 8d. The original bond for the payment of this annuity, bearing the autograph of the King, is now the property of Mr. Charles Tyringham Praed, who is a descendant of the Backwells. A copy of this curious and interesting document may be seen in “Ye Marygold,” and in the Appendix to this book.

This was a great blow for Backwell, who apparently had great confidence in the honour of the King, as on July 23, 1666, when Pepys met him, he complained of some hard usage he had been subjected to ; "but he says he has a good master, the King, who will not suffer him to be undone, as otherwise he must have been, and I believe him." Of course, it caused him to suspend payment ; still, we find he continued in his business for a short time. He was probably able to satisfy the claims of his creditors by allowing them some small interest, as we find from Privy Seals he received considerable amounts from the Exchequer from time to time ; but, as the principal was never paid in his lifetime, he became a bankrupt.

He was afterwards employed by the King on several occasions after 1672 to go abroad to conduct negotiations for money, and he retained the office of Comptroller of his Majesty's Customs at the Port of London, at a salary of £250 per annum until 1674. From 1678 to 1681 he sat as member of Parliament for Wendover.

The London Gazette of June 1, 1682, announced :—"The creditors of Edward Backwell, Esq., are desired to take notice that the said Edward Backwell hath published his proposals, and that they will be delivered to them or any they shall please send for them by Mr. Richard Snagg or by some other person at Mr. Valentine Duncombe's shop, where the said Edward Backwell formerly dwelt in Lombard Street, and such as live remove in the country are desired to write," etc.

Several other notices appeared this year. Shortly after this he retired to Holland, and there died. He was buried June 13, 1683, in St. Mary Woolnoth's, Lombard Street ; and on October 20, 1685, his body was removed to T�rringham, Bucks.

Backwell and Co. (See DEVAYNES.)Baker, Francis,

Goldsmith, 1732, behind Royal Exchange.

Ballard, John,

Was keeping running-cashes at the Unicorn in Lombard Street in 1677, the house formerly occupied by Alderman Edward Backwell. The London Gazette of 1682 tells us he was still there ; but the same journal of September 3, 1694, records he was bankrupt.

Bamme, Adam,

Goldsmith, Lord Mayor in 1390, also in 1396 ; but, he dying during his mayoralty, the celebrated Richard Whittington took his place. Stow records that in a great dearth he procured corn from parts beyond the seas, to be brought thither (to the Tower) in such abundance as sufficed to serve the City and the countries near adjoining ; to the furtherance of which good work he took out of the orphans' chest in the Guildhall two thousand marks to buy the said corn, and each alderman laid out twenty pounds to the like purpose.

Bank of England (The)

Was founded in 1694. It grew out of a loan of £1,200,000 advanced to the Government of the day for the public service. The idea of forming a National Bank originated with Mr. William Paterson, an enterprising Scotchman, who commenced his exertions for the establishment of such an institution as early as 1691.

The Bank was incorporated into a Society on July 27, 1694, and styled the Governor and Company of the Bank of England. It was enacted that the management and government of the corporation should be committed to the Governor and twenty-four Directors, to be elected between the 25th day of March and the 25th day of April in each year, from among the duly qualified members of the Company. The qualification for Governor is £4000 stock ; Deputy Governor, £3000 ; and Director, £2000.

On January 1, 1695, the Bank of England commenced active operations at Grocers' Hall, in the Poultry ; and on February 11 in the same year, the following advertisement appeared in the London Gazette :

"The Court of Directors of the Bank of England hereby give notice that they have empowered their cashiers, Mr. Thomas Speed, Mr. Robert Hedges, and Mr. Thomas Madolees, and one of them and no other, to give notes on behalf of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, either for payment of money or bills, for which they are to be accountable."

None of the notes issued by them at this time were for a less sum than twenty pounds. The Bank also commenced to discount bills of exchange, usually between 4½ and 6 per cent.

In May, 1695, they advertised in the Gazette that they would advance money on pawns.

As early as August 15, 1695, the Bank called in their "marbled notes," some of them having been forged.

The first Governor was Sir John Houblon, who was Lord Mayor in 1695, and a Lord of the Admiralty. He was the son of James Houblon, an eminent London merchant, remarkable for his piety and plainness ; of whom there is frequent mention by Pepys in his Diary. His surviving representative is Mr. John Archer Houblon, of Hallingbury, in Essex.

The Bank of England stopped payment in 1696, during the great recoinage, owing in a great measure to the failure of the Land Bank, when Bank notes fell to a heavy discount. In June, 1797, they were at 13 and 14 per cent. discount. Mr. H. D. Macleod, writing to the Daily News on the subject of Banks of Issue on May 8, 1875, says : "In 1697 a statute was passed to increase the capital of the Bank, and it was enacted that, during the continuance of the Bank of England, no other bank, or any other corporation, society, fellowship-company, or constitution in the nature of a bank, should be erected or established, permitted, suffered, countenanced or allowed by Act of Parliament within England."

This clause only refers to banks established by Act of Parliament ; it did not prohibit any private bank from existing, or issuing notes, or consisting of any number of partners. There were numerous private banks * issuing notes in London ; and, if they had chosen, they might have assumed any number of partners, as many as the Bank of England itself.

It did not take long to get the money that was required to start the Bank ; ten days seem to have sufficed. In return for the loan of £1,200,000, Government guaranteed to pay the Bank of England annually the sum of £100,000, which was 8 per cent. upon the capital ; and an additional £4000 a year for the expenses of management.

Capitalists indeed evinced great eagerness to invest their surplus money, as appears from the following interesting letter written to Sir Francis Child by the first Duke of Leeds, dated June 25, 1694 : "Sir, I am informed that the subscription to the Bank do fill so fast that there is att this day neare £700,000 subscribed, so that it must now necessarily be a bank : I therefore desire that you will subscribe four thousand pounds for mee, and pay in one thousand pounds on my account as the Act directs."

There is another curious letter written about the same period, by Mr. Locke to a friend at Amsterdam, which I quote from Mr. Martin's "Stories of Banks and Bankers":—"Your friend J. F. (John Furley) has taken £300 to the new bank, which has already got a capital of £1,000,000. I shall myself subscribe £500 at once, and it will be full to-night."

After the crisis of 1696, in order to prevent any further suspension of money payments, the capital was increased to £2,201,171.

Were I to write a full account of the Bank of England, it would occupy far more space than I have at my disposal. Those who desire to study its constitution and various charters, and the several events connected with this great institution, should consult the "History of the Bank of England," by John Francis, a most valuable, readable, and useful book, replete with anecdote; Lawson's "History of Banking;" Macleod's "Theory and Practice of Banking;" "The Bank of England," by the author of the "People's Blue Book;" and other works. I content myself by noting a few of the principal events.

The charter was renewed in 1697 until 1711; in 1708 it was further continued to 1733; in 1712 to 1743; in 1742 to 1765; in 1763 to 1786; in 1781 to 1812; in 1800 to 1833; in 1833 to 1855; and in 1844 to August 1, 1855, and longer, if the debt due from the public to the Bank (£11,015,100) with interest, etc., be not paid after due notice.

The Bank suspended cash payments in 1797. On February 26 of that year the Gazette announced that a French frigate had landed troops in Wales; the general alarm thereupon being intense.

There was every prospect of a run on the next day, when an Order of Council was issued, prohibiting the Directors from paying cash for their notes. Parliament concurred on this point; and the Restriction Act, prohibiting the Bank from paying cash except for sums under twenty shillings, was passed at this time.

On April 6, 1797, through this panic, the 3 per cent. consols had fallen to 47½, and Bank stock to 121½; whereas in March, 1792, consols were at 97½, and Bank stock at 219.

Ten-pound notes were first issued in 1759, five-pound notes in 1794, and one-pound and two-pound notes in 1797; the last two subsequently discontinued, owing to so many forgeries having been perpetrated.

The first forgery of a Bank of England note was in 1758. It was committed by a linen-draper of the name of Vaughan, living in Stafford, who was convicted and executed.

The business of the Bank continued to be carried on in Grocers' Hall in the Poultry until June 5, 1734, when they moved into their new premises then just completed.

The following account of the new premises of the Bank, which occupy the site of the house and garden of Sir John Houblon, is taken from Lawson's "History of Banking":—"The original extent of the Bank comprehended the site of the house and garden formerly belonging to Sir John Houblon, one of the first directors, and was comparatively a small structure, quite invisible towards the street, the entrance being through an arched court, surrounded by many other buildings: viz., a church called St. Christopher le Stocks, three taverns in Bartholomew Lane, and two on the south side, and upwards of twenty private houses; the whole of which have been removed."

The garden in the Bank, which is now enclosed, was the original churchyard of the church of St. Christopher; and one of the clerks, of the name of Jenkins, who was seven feet six inches in height, was interred within it, to save his corpse from the resurrectionists.

The original Bank was built from the designs of Mr. George Sampson, the east and west wings being added by Sir Robert Taylor, between 1766 and 1786; and Sir John Soane afterwards made considerable alterations.

The Bank of England joined the Clearing House in April, 1864.

In the early days of the Bank, people were permitted to demand only part of the value of a bank-note, the clerk endorsing upon it the amount that had been paid on account. This plan was adopted by many, who received instalments until the whole amount due on the notes they held was absorbed. It was also frequently adopted by those who held Child and Co.'s notes. It may therefore be surmised that it was a common practice with bankers generally.

Bank of London

Was established about 1856, at 52, Threadneedle Street, and 450, West Strand. It had a paid-up capital amounting to £400,000, and a reserve fund of £302,324.

At the period of its failure, in 1866, its liabilities amounted to £4,335,877. Its business was taken over by the Consolidated Bank.

Barclay, Bevan, and Co.

The business of Messrs. Barclay, Bevan, Tritton, Ransom, Bouverie, and Co. was certainly founded prior to the year 1694, as at that date we find John Freame a goldsmith in Lombard Street, and in 1698 Freame and Gould were at the Three Anchors in the same street, and remained there until 1702, according to an advertisement in the London Gazette of December 7 in that year, offering a reward for one of their cash notes which had been lost. Messrs. Freame and Gould moved their shop between the latter date and 1728, when they were located at the sign of the Black Spread Eagle, now No. 56, part of the premises occupied by Messrs. Barclay. The bank premises now consist of the whole block between George Alley and George Yard, which comprised the old signs, the Black Horse, now No. 53, where Pepys' friend, little Stokes, lived, and whose descendant, John Bland, remained there until 1749; the Bible, No. 54, which was the residence of a goldsmith named George Braithwaite in 1728; and the Three Kings, No. 55, the banking-house of Messrs. Smith, Wright, and Gray, who left it in 1773. The Black Spread Eagle continued to be the sign of the house No. 56 until 1770, when all the houses were numbered, and the quaint old signs were removed.

For the following account I am indebted to Mr. J. H. Tritton, of this firm:—

"In 1728 Joseph Freame purchased the freehold premises in Lombard Street, at the corner of George Yard, from one Currier, 'citizen and a scrivener,' who had in all probability conducted the same business on the same spot up to this time. The sign of the banking-house in 1728 was the Black Spread Eagle.

"Joseph Freame, who was described in 1728 as 'citizen and goldsmith,' was in partnership with Thomas Gould, under the style of Gould and Freame, until 1736, when James Barclay took the place of J. Gould, and the firm became Freame and Barclay. In 1768 Silvanus Bevan joined, and two years later the name of Freame disappeared on the death of Joseph Freame in 1770, his son John having died in 1762. In 1786 John Henton Tritton became a partner, and from that date up to his death in 1833 the style of the firm was Barclay, Tritton, Bevan, and Co. Since then the names ran as Barclay, Bevan, Tritton, and Co. until 1865, when the business of Messrs. Spooner, Attwood, and Co. was taken over, and the name of Twells was added; Mr. Philip Twells, one of the members for the City of London, then joining the firm.

"The James Barclay, whose name first appears as a banker in 1736, was the son of David Barclay, and the grandson of Robert Barclay, the "Apologist." The main line of the Scotch family of Barclay of Mather and Urie, whose pedigree is traced back to Saxon times, and who have intermarried with the descendants of Edward III. of England and Robert III. of Scotland, was carried on, in default of male issue by him, through his young brother Alexander; and it is now represented by Robert Barclay, of Bury Hill, a member of the firm of Barclay, Perkins, and Co.

"The name of Silvanus Bevan (the elder) appears among the clients of the firm in 1728. The family is of Welsh extraction, and trace their pedigree even further back than the Barcleys.

"David Barclay, the father (by his first wife) of James and Alexander, was a merchant in Cheapside, and was also one of the principal connections of the early banking house. He is recorded to have received successively on Lord Mayor's Day, at his house in Cheapside, Queen Anne, George I., George II., and George III. David and John, his two sons by his second wife, Priscilla Freame, succeeded to the banking business. The former had only one child, a daughter, married to Richard Gurney, father of the late Hudson Gurney, and the latter was father-in-law to John Henton Tritton, and great-grandfather to the present Joseph Gurney Barclay. It is well perhaps to add that the present members of the firm are all the direct descendants of the above-named gentleman, and that the banking-house is still at the corner of George Yard, Lombard Street, on the site of the Old Black Spread Eagle of 1728."

The earliest cash note bearing the name of Joseph Freame in my possession is of the year 1730, and is witnessed by J. Topper.

A fact worth noticing is that a Mr. Silvanus Bevan, who was probably an ancestor of the Mr. Bevan in the firm of Messrs. Barelay and Co., banked with Child's in the year 1704. I have seen a draft upon the latter firm drawn by him, dated from Swansey (sic).

The following amusing anecdote relating to Mr. David Barclay I transcribe verbatim from Lawson's "History of Banking":—

"On the occasion of the State visit of George III. to the City, on the first Lord Mayor's Day after his accession to the throne, and when the cavalcade had reached Cheapside, the acclamations of the people were so great 'as to pierce the air with their shouts ;' added to which, the dismal noise made by the creaking of the various signs which hung across the streets caused one of the horses attached to the King's carriage to become very restive and unmanageable when opposite Bow Church, causing considerable confusion to the procession and alarm to their Majesties.

"A certain Quaker named David Barclay, a linendraper in Cheapside, who was viewing the procession from the balcony of his first-floor window, perceiving the embarrassed situation of the King and Queen, descended to the street. At this moment the procession halted, and our friend approaching the carriage addressed the King, saying, 'Wilt thee alight, George, and thy wife Charlotte, and come into my house and view the Mayor's show ?' The King, who had on many occasions before he came to the Throne evinced a strong partiality for Quakers, and who, from the plainness of his manner, would no doubt have been one himself, had he not been born to a throne, condescended to accept the invitation of the worthy linendraper ; and in the balcony of the first-floor of the house exactly opposite Bow Church the King and Queen stood during the remainder of the procession.

"Our friend David introduced to their Majesties the whole of his family. His eldest son, Robert, who was then a young man about twenty years of age, received especial notice from their Majesties. On their taking their leave to proceed to Guildhall, his Majesty said, 'David, let me see thee at St. James's next Wednesday, and bring thy son Robert with thee.' Accordingly David Barelay and his son Robert attended the levée ; and on his approaching the royal presence, the King, throwing aside all regal restraint, descended from the Throne and, giving the Friend a hearty shake of the hand, welcomed him to St. James's. He said many kind things both to the father and son : among the rest, he asked David what he intended to do with Robert, and without waiting for a reply, said : 'Let him come here, and I will provide him with honourable and profitable employment.'

"The strict and cautious Quaker, with many apologies, and with much humility, requested permission to reject the proposal, adding : 'I fear the air of the Court of your Majesty would not agree with my son.'

"The King, who had seldom witnessed a similar rejection of intended royal favour, said : 'Well, David, well, well ; you know best, you know best ; but you must not omit to let me see you occasionally at St. James's.'

"Soon after this, David Barclay saw his son Robert established as a banker in Lombard Street, who, instead of becoming a courtier, a position for which Nature never intended him, became the founder of one of the most eminent banking firms of the present day."

Towards the end of the last century it is recorded* that the staff at Barclay's consisted of three clerks ; and we are told, upon the third clerk coming to the shop for the first time, he was thus dressed : "He wore a long flapped coat, with large pockets ; the sleeves had long cuffs, with three large buttons, something like the coats worn by the Greenwich pensioners of recent days ; an embroidered waistcoat reaching nearly down to his knees, with an enormous bouquet in the buttonhole ; a cocked hat, powdered hair, with pigtail and bagwig, and gold-headed cane, similar to those carried by footmen of ladies of rank during the early part of this century.”

The following are the changes that have taken place in the style of the firm, as deduced from the list of bankers in the Directories :—

- In 1736 Freame and Barclay.
- 1759 Freame, Barclay, and Freame.
- 1766 Freame, Smith, and Bening (the latter had been a clerk in the firm for some years).
- 1770 Freame, Smith, Bevan, and Bening.
- 1771 Smith, Bevan, and Bening.
- 1776 Barclay, Bevan, and Bening.
- 1785 Barclay, Bevan, Barclay, and Tritton.
- 1791 Barclay and Tritton.
- 1797 Barclay, Tritton, and Bevan.
- 1810 Barclay, Tritton, Bevan, and Co.
- 1834 Barclay, Bevan, Tritton, and Co. until 1865, when the amalgamation with Spooner, Attwood, and Twells took place, and the style was altered to Barclay, Bevan, Tritton, Twells, and Co. ; the firm consisting of—
 - Robert Cooper Lee Bevan.
 - Henry Tritton.
 - Joseph Gurney Barclay.
 - Joseph Tritton.
 - Francis Augustus Bevan.
 - Philip Twells.
 - Henry John Tritton.
 - Robert Barclay.
 - Joseph Herbert Tritton.

On July 2, 1888, Messrs. Barclay, Bevan, Tritton, and Co. amalgamated with Messrs. Ransom, Bouverie, and Co., of Pall Mall East, under the style of Barclay, Bevan, Tritton, Ransom, Bouverie, and Co. The business is conducted as heretofore in Lombard Street and Pall Mall East. The partners are : Robert C. L. Bevan, J. Gurney Barclay, Francis A. Bevan, Charles T. Murdoch, M.P., Robert Barclay, J. Herbert Tritton, Lord Kinnaird, Henry H. P. Bouverie, Wilfrid A. Bevan, and Edward E. Barclay. Messrs. Seymour P. Bouverie, and Roland Y. Bevan hold the signature of the firm. (Mr. R. C. L. Bevan died in July, 1890.)

Barentine, Sir Dru,

Goldsmith, was a refounder of the Goldsmiths' Hall about 1410, Sheriff in 1393, Lord Mayor in 1398 and 1408. His name is sometimes written Drew Barentyn.* Stow states that he gave fair lands to the goldsmiths ; he dwelt right against the Goldsmiths' Hall ; between which and his dwelling-house he built a gallery thwarting the street, whereby he might go from one to the other.

* He died in 1415, and was buried in the church of St. John Zachary, as was Christian, his wife, in 1427.

Barnett, Hoare, and Co.

This was probably one of the oldest banking businesses in London, as it occupies the site of the premises known by the sign of the Black Horse, which continued to be the sign of the house. Mr. Samuel Hoare favoured me with an impression of that sign done in sealing-wax. It represents a horse prancing, with his head turned to the right, and with flowing mane and tail.

Upon reference to the "Little London Directory" for 1677, it will be seen that a goldsmith of the name of Humph. Stocks was at the Black Horse, in Lombard Street.

Now it appears from Pepys' Diary that Mr. Stokes, as he was pleased to call him, was in existence in his time fully twelve years earlier. He was probably Samuel Pepys' own goldsmith, and it was with him most likely that he kept his private account. That he bought his plate, etc., of him is proved by the following extracts from his Diary.

The account Pepys kept with Alderman Backwell looks more like an official one than one of a private character.

Under date January 10, 1665, he writes: "Seeing and saluting Mrs. Stokes, my little goldsmith's wife in Paternoster Row, and there bespoken a silver chafing dish for warming plates." It would thus appear that he was formerly in Paternoster Row. "On 13 Aug. 1666, after dinner, I abroad to Stokes, and there did receive £1000 worth in gold, paying 18*1d.* and 19*d.* for others exchange." And on September 2, 1666, the same authority states: "And among others, I now saw my little goldsmith Stokes receiving some friend's goods, whose house itself was burned the day after." On November 12, 1666, Pepys records: "This day I received 450 pieces of gold more of Mr. Stokes, but cost me 22*1d.* change; but I am well contented with it, I having now nearly £2800 in gold, and will not rest until I get full £3000." Again, on December 18, 1667, he writes: "To look after the providing of £60 for Mr. Moore towards the answering of my Lord Sandwich's bill of exchange, he being come to be contented with my lending him £60, in part of it, which pleases me, and this, which I do do, I hope to secure out of plate, which was delivered into my custody of my Lords, which I did get Mr. Stokes, the goldsmith, last night to weigh at my house, and there is enough to secure £100."

Pepys evidently had a view to the main chance.

Nothing further can be ascertained of Stocks or Stokes, or of the Black Horse, until the year 1700, when we find by the London Gazette that Robert Stokes was at the Black Horse, then on the site of the present 53, Lombard Street. From an original deed in the possession of the Vintners' Company I find that John Bland was at the Black Horse in 1728. He must have remained there until 1749, when the two houses, the Black Horse and the Bible (now 54), were let to Devereux Bowly, and John Bland and Son removed not only their business but likewise their sign to the corner of Birch Lane, afterwards numbered No. 62.

1761 is the first year in which the name of Barnett is met with in conjunction with this firm, when it was Bland, Barnett, and Co. In 1763 it became Bland, Barnett, and Bland. In 1766 the style of the firm was Bland and Barnett. In 1770 the sign of the Black Horse became known as 62, Lombard Street. And about 1772-3 they assumed a fresh partner in the person of Mr. Samuel Hoare, when the firm became Bland, Barnett, and Hoare. The present Mr. Samuel Hoare (who is the fifth of his name) informs me that his family came from Cork about 1730. In 1768 Samuel

Hoare was apprenticed to Henry Gurney at Norwich. He was anxious to become a banker, so he looked through the London Directory, and there he found that only one bank in the list had two partners, that of Bland and Barnett. He offered himself to them, and he became a partner. He was the son of Samuel Hoare, a partner in the firm of Gurnell and Hoare, merchants, who lived in Broad Street, where he had a "pleasant garden."

In 1780 Mr. Hill was admitted into the firm. In 1790 Mr. Bland's name disappeared from it, and Mr. Barnett, junior, was admitted as a junior partner, the firm then standing as Barnett, Hoare, Hill, and Barnett. In the year 1800 the style of the firm changed to Hoare, Hill, and Barnett; and in 1804 Mr. Hoare, junior, became junior partner. The list of 1808 shows that Mr. Hill had left them, and the firm had become Hoare, Barnett, Hoare and Co. In 1826 the style of the firm changed again to Barnett, Hoare, and Co.; which style continued until 1864, when the old banking firm of Messrs. Hanbury, Lloyds, and Co. amalgamated with them; and thenceforth it was known as Barnetts, Hoares, Hanburys, and Lloyd, the business being conducted in both houses, which adjoin, i.e. 60 and 62, Lombard Street, the former being that of Messrs. Hanbury.

On March 4, 1884, this old-established business was taken over by Lloyd's Banking Company, and simultaneously with it the business of Bosanquet, Salt, and Co.; and the style of the house became Lloyds, Barnetts, and Bosanquet's Bank, Limited.

Goldsmith, of Wood Street, 1349. He left some tenements in the parish of St. Laurence Jewry to be devoted to the maintenance of chantries in the church of St. Michael de Wodestrete, and other legacies to his family ("Calendar of Wills, Court of Husting, London").

Basyngstoke, Thomas de,

Goldsmith, directed his body to be buried in the Church of St. Michael de Wodestrete. After the decease of his wife, all his tenements in the City of London were to be sold for pious and charitable uses, January 25, 1349 ("Calendar of Wills, Court of Husting, London").

Beauchamp,

Goldsmith, Cheapside. The only record we have of this man occurs in Pepys' Diary, November 14, 1660: "I went into Cheapside into Mr. Beauchamp's the goldsmith, to look out a piece of plate to give to Mr. Fox from my Lord, for his favour about the £4000, and did choose a gilt tankard." Again, on June 2, 1663: "To Mr. Beacham, the goldsmith, he being one of the jury to-morrow in Sir W. Batten's case against Field. I have been telling him our case, and I believe he will do us good service there."

Berkinge, William de,

Was goldsmith to Queen Isabella, the wife of Edward II.

Berkynge, Thomas de,

Goldsmit. By his will, dated August 10, 1329, he left to Alice, his wife, sixty pounds sterling and the things belonging to her chamber, comprising beds, chalons, sheets, cloths, napkins, a nut garnished with a silver foot, a small cup of mazer (de mucro) corresponding with the said nut, silver spoons, empty chests, etc. To Matilda, his mother, one hundred shillings. To Roger, his son, twenty pounds sterling, and a small case of stones and pearls not set in gold, all utensils and implements appertaining to his shop and the craft of a goldsmith, a brass weight of sixteen marks, and one steelyard. To Idonea and Alice, his daughters, twenty pounds sterling and a cup of mazer respectively. Also to his aforesaid wife and daughters houses and shops in Wodestrete in the parish of St. Michael, and also in the parish of St. Alban de Wodestrete. In the event of all his children dying under age and before advancement and marriage, he directs the chattels and money so left to them to be divided by his executors and four wardens of the Goldsmithery of London for the time being into four parts: one part for the good of his soul, another for Alice his wife, a third to be given to the neediest of his relations, and the fourth part to be divided among the poor of the Goldsmithery aforesaid ("Calendar of Wills, Court of Husting, London").

Berkynng, Simon de,

Goldsmit, 1348, of St. Peter de Wodestrete. In the event of all his children dying without heirs he leaves his mansion house in Wodestrete to the Almonry of St. Dunstan of the Goldsmithery, London, for the maintenance of a chantry in the said church of St. Peter de Wodestrete, under the supervision of the wardens of the said Goldsmithery ("Calendar of Wills, Court of Husting, London").

Bettoyne, Richard de,

Goldsmit. He was Mayor in 1326; and member of Parliament for the City of London in 1327-8, and reputed to be wealthy. Mr. Lostie, in his "History of London," states that a curious petition was made by him in 1338, the year of the outbreak of the French war. In his petition, addressed "To our Lord the King, and his Council," he sets forth that he attended at the coronation as Mayor, and performed the office of butler, with three hundred and sixty valets, each carrying a silver cup; but he complains that the fee which he received from the King on this occasion—the fee, in fact, appended to that service, which was always a gold cup and cover, with a gold enamelled ewer—was made the subject of a charge from the Exchequer. The Sheriffs had been called upon to levy an estreat upon the goods and chattels of the said Richard, to the appalling amount of £89 12s. 6d. We may be sure Edward did justice to his unfortunate petitioner; but the fact is not recorded.

Blackford, Anthony, 1713,

Of the Cup and Crown, Lombard Street, advertised for some lost jewels in the Daily Courant. In the Post Boy, in 1713, he advertised for a grey gelding he lost from grass. In 1716 he was dead, and Thomas White, his apprentice, gave notice he hath withdrawn from the service of the widow, Mrs. Dorothy Blackford.

Blackmore, Henry,
Goldsmith, of Lombard Street, 1614–51.

Blanchard, Robert, 1676. (See CHILD.)

Bland, Gray, and Co., 1759. (See SMITH AND WRIGHT.)

Bland, Hugh,
Goldsmith, was one of the Sheriffs in 1243.

Bland, John, and Co., 1741. (See BARNETT.)

Bland, John, and Matthew Dove,

Of Lombard Street, described as bankers, were advertised in the London Gazette of November 29, 1720, as bankrupts.

Blount, Ralph Le,

Goldsmith, circa 1275, and warden of the Goldsmiths' Company. He was Alderman of Bassishaw Ward, and in 1267 he was engraver to the Mint.

Bloxham and Co.

This firm originated in the year 1795, when Messrs. Wilkinson, Polhill, Pinhorn, Bloxham, and Bulcock started a banking-house at St. Margaret's Hill, Southwark. In the next year Mr. Pinhorn retired from the firm to start a fresh one, for particulars of which see "Young." The style of this firm in 1796 was Wilkinson, Polhill, Bloxham, and Bulcock. In 1799 it was Wilkinson, Bloxham, Bulcock, Wilkinson, and Taylor; and in 1805 it became Sir Matthew Bloxham, Wilkinson, Taylor, and Bloxham. They were then carrying on business at 27, Gracechurch Street, where they remained until 1809, in which year I believe they failed.

The following amusing anecdote I insert under the head of this firm, as it probably applied to its head partner. It is extracted from The News of January 4, 1829:—

"A LONDON BANKER.—At the present moment, when so much is said about bankers and banking business, the following anecdote of a deceased member of the craft may not be unacceptable. Those persons who were well acquainted with the facetious old Knight—and there are many living—will vouch for its authenticity. 'The late Sir M—— B—— always used to say, "D—n banking! I hate banking. When I was a banker I never slept soundly, and there never was a day I was not afraid of stopping payment." Some years after he failed he used to tell humorous stories of the numerous escapes his bank had had from time to time; take the following as a specimen:—"One afternoon," said he, "just as we were shutting up for the day, at five o'clock, our head cashier came running to me, and said, 'Lord, sir, here's a man just come in with a cheque for £540, and I do not know what to do; we have only £500 and a little silver and copper in the till.' 'Oh!' said I, 'never mind; do you close the doors, and then run out and borrow £40 and I'll keep the chap in jail;' and so we saved the bank that night; next morning, luckily, a customer paid in, as soon as we opened shop, £2000, which made all right. The fatal day, however, was to come, and come it did, with a vengeance; we were run upon most unexpectedly, and, long before I had breakfasted, the house was shut up, and a large mob was round the doors. For a long time I could not account for it; at last it came across me like a flash of lightning. We had, only a week or two before we stopped, taken in a new clerk to replace one that had died, and the cashier, when he went to dinner, by mistake left him at the counter. The chap was a Yorkshireman, and at once saw how things were, and, not having been used to our ways, he told some friend, that friend told a third, and so we were run out. This, however, I will say for all the other clerks, we paid them well, dined them well once a week—they knew our secret, and kept it for full ten long years. My first toast after dinner always was, "D—n banking! Curse banking! B—t banking!" and the next was, to the clerks, "Come, boys, hear, see, and say nothing!"'"

Boldero and Co.

This banking business was established by Thomas Minors at the Vine, in Lombard Street. His name first appeared in the list of bankers in the year 1738; and he was probably a goldsmith in the earlier part of his career. In 1742 he took a partner of the name of Boldero, and the style of the firm became Minors and Boldero. In 1760 the firm became Boldero, Carter, and Co.; in 1770 a rupture appears to have taken place, as the Directory shows that Boldero, Carter, Barnston, Snaith, and Carter moved to 5, Mansion House Street, while Boldero, Kendell, Adey, and Co., remained in Lombard Street at the old house, which was then numbered 77. In 1800 the name of Adey disappeared from the partnership; and in the year following I find by the Directory that a new firm had been started at 22, Old Bond Street, under the style of Adey, Macgeorge, and Co., which became extinct before 1805.

In 1787 the firm of Boldero, Adey, and Co. left Lombard Street, and removed to 30, Cornhill. In 1801, after Mr. Adey retired from the partnership, the style of the firm became Boldero, Lushington, Boldero, and Lushington. This firm ceased to exist in 1812.

As to the other firm, which severed its connection with the above, many changes in the names of the partners took place. In 1786 it was Boldero, Snaith, Sikes, and Boldero, and in 1790 the style of the firm became Sikes, Snaith, and Snaith, which continued to be the designation until December 15, 1825, when they stopped payment.

Bolitho, John, and John Wilson

Were goldsmiths, keeping running-cashes at the Golden Lion, afterwards numbered 85, in Lombard Street, in 1677, where they had been established since 1673. In a private letter, dated December, 1682, in the possession of W. J. Legh, Esq., who has favoured me by its communication, the writer states: "Thear is a fearfull Rout in Lombard Street amongst y^e Bankers, yesterday went of Mr. Bolitho and Mr. Wilson of y^e Golden Lyon and Mr. Capell and Mr. Kilborne from y^e King's Head and if Reports be true severall others will follow." It was announced in the London Gazette of August 23, 1683, that Bolitho and Wilson were prepared to make an agreement with their creditors.

Bolton, Job,

Was a goldsmith, keeping running-cashes in 1677, at the sign of the Bolt and Tun, in Lombard Street. Very little is to be ascertained about him; but a curious advertisement was published in the London Gazette of October 1, 1683, concerning a robbery. I will transcribe it in full:—"William Bateman, a young man about 25 years of age, being disfigured with the small pox, a flat bottle nose, somewhat bow-legged, went away in a light cloth coloured suit lined with black sattin, and black buttons, having a Prize sad coloured coat over it; Took away out of Lombard Street a considerable sum of money, with some guineas, a seven stone diamond ring with several diamond rings and about 36 diamonds, and a parcel of small gold rings, a gold watch and one silver watch. If any person can give notice of the said Bateman, so as he may be apprehended to Job Boulton, at the Bolt & Tunn in Lombard Street, shall have £20."

Bond, Sons, and Co.

Were established at 2, Change Alley, Lombard Street, about 1791, by John Bond and Son. In 1805 they took a partner, and the firm became John Bond, Sons, and Tattishall, which continued to be the style until March 28, 1831, when they stopped payment.

Bonny, Francis.

His name is met with in the London Gazette of February 27, 1689: "Whereas Francis Bonny, late of London, goldsmith, died £1100 indebted to the Crown. These are to give notice thereof to Debtors of the said Bonny, that they may not make any payment to their own prejudice." In another Gazette of the same month, Hester Bonny, his widow, inserts a notice that Thomas Bonny had some time since "fraudulently and deceitfully got into his hands, several trunks, wherein was writings of great value, Jewels, Plate, Linnen, etc., of Francis Bonny dec^d and other persons. And all persons are cautioned against buying the said goods."

Booth, William,

Goldsmith, circa 1589, of St. Botolph's, Aldgate.

Boothby, George,

Goldsmith, also described as a banker, of the Parrot, in St. Clement Danes, Strand. His earliest date is 1720. The London Gazette of October 24, 1741, in which he is styled "Silversmith and Banker," declares him a bankrupt.

Bosanquet and Co.

The firm of Bosanquet, Salt, Harman, Salt, Bosanquet, and Whatman originated (according to particulars kindly supplied to me by that firm) between the years 1770–80, when the style of it was Bowles, Beachcroft, and Reeves. But I fail to find any mention of them in the Post Office Directory before the year 1796, when the style of the firm appears to have been Bowles, Beachcroft, Brown, Reeves, Collins, and Co., who were carrying on business at 18, Exchange-Alley, Cornhill.

About 1800 Mr. Samuel Bosanquet, who had till then been a partner with Messrs. Foster, Lubcock, and Co., left that firm and entered into partnership with Messrs. Beachcroft and Reeves, who had been partners in the firm of Bowles, Beachcroft, and Co. The style of the firm in 1801 appears as Bosanquet, Beachcroft, and Reeves, at No. 73, Lombard Street. This house was formerly known by the sign of the Fox, and afterwards the Union. The firm of Messrs. Bowles, Brown, Ogden, Cobb, and Co., from which Messrs. Beachcroft and Reeves seceded, appears to have undergone another change in that year, a division being recorded therein, the particulars of which will be found under the head of BROWN.

In 1810 the firm became Bosanquet, Beachcroft, Pitt, and Anderdon. In 1817 it was Bosanquet, Pitt, Anderdon, and Franks. In 1822 the present Mr. James Bosanquet joined the firm. In 1843 Mr. Samuel Bosanquet died; and in 1845 Mr. William Godfrey Whatman joined the firm, and shortly afterwards Mr. John Harman.

In 1867 Mr. Franks retired, and the firm amalgamated with the old Staffordshire Bank of Messrs. Stevenson, Salt, and Co., and the style became Bosanquet, Salt, Whatman, Harman, Salt, and Bosanquet.

The bank of Messrs. Stevenson, Salt, and Co. appears to have been established by Mr. William Stevenson, at 85, Queen Street, Cheapside, in 1788; and about 1799 he moved to 80, Lombard Street. From 1801 to 1818 they were known as Messrs. Stevenson and Salt, when they moved to No. 20, Lombard Street. In 1839 the firm became Stevenson, Salt, and Sons; and on June 1, 1867, they amalgamated with Messrs. Bosanquet and Co.

I have been favoured by Mr. John Salt with a copy of a circular, which was issued by Messrs. Stevenson, Salt, and Co., of Stafford, to their customers, when they had determined to amalgamate their country business with Lloyd's Banking Co. (Limited), the existing representatives of the firms of Messrs. Lloyds and Co., Messrs. Moilliet and Sons, and Messrs. P. and H. Williams.

From that document I learn that "the firm of Stevenson and Co. is said to have been established by Mr. Stevenson, an ancestor of the present Salt family on the maternal side, in the year 1737." This was a very early date for the establishment of a country bank. It is mentioned in Macleod's "Dictionary of Political Economy," that in the year 1750 there were not more than twelve banks established out of London. A great number of private banks were formed in the country between the year 1750 and the close of that century.

The Stafford Bank has never been without a member of the Stevenson or of the Salt family in its management. For many years the Webb family also have been associated with it.

The firm of Stevenson, Salt, and Sons, of 20, Lombard Street, which continues its operations as a private family bank, has always been exclusively confined to the Stevenson and Salt family. It was established somewhat later than the Stafford Bank, and had a valuable country connexion in the South of England.

This bank was at one time given up, in consequence, we believe, of a dispute between two brothers of the Stevenson family. It was shortly after reopened, with as much of its old connexion as could be recovered, by Mr. John Stevenson Salt, the father of the present Mr. Salt, of Weeping Cross. Mr. J. S. Salt was for many years the head of the London and Stafford banking-houses. On his death they were separated, and continued separate until the death of Mr. John Salt, of 29, Gordon Square, early in the year 1865, when they were at once united in consequence of the limited number of partners living. Of course they are now again separated. Many persons regret the loss of the old and familiar name of Stevenson, Salt, and Co. from the list of Staffordshire firms, for the bank has always enjoyed the personal attachment of its supporters in a remarkable degree. Yet it is probable that the wisest course has been taken for the interests both of the partners and their clients.

During the last twenty years banking has assumed a new form. The vast activity and development both of the internal and foreign trade of the country—the enormous transactions in the monetary system; the vigorous competition existing in all branches of trade; the delicate and uncertain condition of the money markets; the tendency of all commercial enterprise to achieve greater success in combined and extended operations, and the general tone of public feeling in favour of joint stock trading—are gradually, but surely, carrying the banking business out of the hands of private individuals, and placing it on a wider basis, and on a system more congenial to the habits and feelings of the day.

Moreover, private bankers, who have usually been gentlemen of fortune and position, though ready enough formerly to conduct and to reap the fruits of a quiet, old-fashioned business, hesitate, not unnaturally, to sacrifice time and comfort, and to incur the risks and anxieties which appear to be incidental to the financial business of the present times.

On March 4, 1884, this business, together with that of Barnett, Hoare, and Co., was taken over by Lloyd's Banking Company, both firms having formerly acted as their London agents, under the new style of Lloyds, Barnetts, and Bosanquets' Bank, Limited.*

Bossall, Henry,

Goldsmith, 1538–1546, was residing in the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Boswell, James,

Goldsmith, of Bishopsgate Street, bankrupt 1696.

Boteler, William,

Goldsmith, circa 1679, of All Hallows, Bread Street.

Botham, Peter,

8, Old Jewry, 1789–97.

Boughton, Thomas,

Goldsmith, residing in the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth between 1538–44.

Boulton, John,

Goldsmith, 1651.

In the Calendar of State Papers, 1651–2, is a copy of an assignment by John Walker, gent., to John Boulton, goldsmith, both of London, of a warrant for £200, due to him from John Hunt and Humphrey Jones, treasurer for the sale of the late King, Queen, and Prince's goods.

This Boulton was probably the predecessor of Samuel Boulton, of the Fox, in Lombard Street, or of Job Bolton, of the Bolt and Tun, in the same street.

Boulton, Samuel,

A goldsmith, between 1689 and 1694, located at the Fox, in Lombard Street, afterwards numbered 73.

Bouverie and Co.

This firm appears to have been started in the year 1813, at 33, Craven Street, Strand, by the Hon. F. Pleydell Bouverie (who had been a clerk in the bank of Messrs. Bosanquet and Co.) and E. Antrobus.

In 1827 it became Bouverie and Lefevre; and in 1830 they removed to 11, Haymarket. Two years later the firm consisted of the Hon. P. Pleydell Bouverie, Henry Norman, and James Gordon Murdock. In 1851 the style of the firm was Bouverie, Murdock, and Bouverie; in 1853 Bouverie, Murdock, Bouverie, and James; and in 1856 they amalgamated with Messrs. Ransom and Co., under the style of Ransom, Bouverie, and Co.

Bowdler, Thomas, 1677–1736. (See SHALES.)

* No. 73, Lombard Street forms part of the property bequeathed to the Merchant Taylors' Company in 1615 by Sir William Craven, and was at that time known by the sign of the Bishop's Head.

Bowen, Thomas,

Goldsmith, circa 1623, of St. Margaret's, Lothbury.

Bowers, George,

Goldsmith, at the sign of the George, near Salisbury Court, in Fleet Street, flourishing between 1678 and 1688. He struck a medal of the famous Protestant martyr, Sir Edmondsbury Godfrey, whose body was found at the back of Primrose Hill, supposed to have been murdered in October, 1678. The alleged murderers were Green, Berry, and Hill; thus Primrose Hill was long afterwards known as Green Berry Hill. In the London Gazette of February 26, 1679, the following advertisement is to be found:—

"Whereas the effigies of Sir Edmund Bury Godfrey hath of late been exactly done to the life in a medal. These are to give notice that the said medals are to be had of Mr. Bowers at the sign of the George, a goldsmith's shop, near Salisbury Court, Fleet Street."

Cunningham mentions that there is a contemporary medal of Sir Edmondsbury, representing him, on the obverse, walking with a broken neck, and a sword in his body; and on the reverse, St. Denis, bearing his head in his hand.

Bowes.

Sir Martin Bowes, of Abchurch Lane in Lombard Street, a goldsmith of some renown, flourished during the reigns of Henry VIII., Edward VI., Mary, and Elizabeth. He was member of Parliament for the City in 1547-1552-3, 1554, and 1555.

He is stated by Herbert, in his "History of the Goldsmiths' Company," to have lent Henry VIII., in 1544, the sum of £300, which nowadays appears a very insignificant sum for so great a monarch to borrow. He was a generous benefactor to the Goldsmiths' Company; among other gifts, he bequeathed them a property situate in Lombard Street, now No. 67, formerly known by the sign of the White Lion, the banking-house of Messrs. Glyn, Mills, and Co. In the Committee-room of Goldsmiths' Hall is a portrait of Sir Martin Bowes, with the cup he bequeathed them. Queen Elizabeth is said to have drunk out of it at her coronation.

When Lord Mayor, in 1546, he was accused of rooting up all the gravestones in the Grey Friars, and selling them for £50. He is stated by Hawkins to have coined shillings, in the reign of Edward VI., at the mint in Durham House, Strand. They were marked with a swan, rose, arrow, or bow. The coins marked with a bow in the reign of Henry VIII. were coined by Sir M. Bowes. Hawkins says the swan also, perhaps in reference to his armorial bearings. It must be noted that this mark occurs only in the years 1549-50; and we cannot find the name of Bowes later than the first year of Edward.

He died in 1566, and was buried in the church of St. Mary Woolnoth, Lombard Street.

Bowes, Thomas,

Goldsmith, of Lombard Street, son and heir of the late Sir Martin Bowes. He died June 14, 1591, and was buried in the Church of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Bowes, Thomas,

Goldsmith, of St. Michael Bassishaw. In 1594 he married Dorcas, daughter of James Harman, of the same place, a goldsmith.

Bowles and Co., 1796-1808. (See BROWN AND CO.)Bowman, John, 1696,

Described as a goldsmith, of the Flower de Luce, in the Strand. In May of that year an advertisement appeared in the London Gazette, to the effect that two gentlemen had left their cloaks in a coach; one a scarlet one with broad gold lace, and the other a blue cloak with gold edging.

A reward of two guineas was to be paid by John Bowman. We find that this goldsmith was at the same place in 1714.

Boylston, Thomas,

Goldsmith, circa 1666, of St. Botolph's, Aldgate.

Braithwaite, George,

A goldsmith, was, in 1728, at the sign of the Bible, afterwards numbered No. 54, now part of the premises of Messrs. Barclay, Bevan, and Co.; but in 1732 we learn from the Daily Journal that George Braithwaite was at the Crown and Thistle, in Lombard Street.

Brand, Thomas,

Goldsmith, at the Rose, in Lombard Street, in 1705.

In 1714 he advertises that he has reversionary annuities for sale, issuable out of the Exchequer.

Brandon, Joseph,

Goldsmith, in 1685, at the Unicorn, in Fenchurch Street; and in 1690 we find he had moved to the Morocco's Head, in Lombard Street.

Brandon, Robert,

Goldsmith, 1548, residing in the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth. His name appears, in conjunction with Affabel Partridge, for purchase of plate for Queen Elizabeth's New Year's gifts.

Brandone, Hugh de,

Goldsmith, 1348.

Branfield, John,

Of the Globe and Anchor, in Lombard Street, was probably a goldsmith, but this is uncertain.

In the Daily Courant, February 2, 1714, the following advertisement appeared:—"Taken from a house three silk purses, containing 120 Sun Pistoles, 50 old Pistoles and £50 in guineas, and some silver in a bag;" Branfield offering a reward for their recovery.

Brasey, Thomas,

Goldsmith, probably of Lombard Street, became a bankrupt in 1696.

Brassey and Co., 1707-59. (See LEES.)Brauncestre, John de,

Goldsmith, 1348, of Friday Street.

Breakspeare, William,

Goldsmith, died 1461, and was buried in St. John Zachary's.

Breakspere, William,

Goldsmith, 1461.

Bret, Richard le,

Goldsmith, of Westcheppe, circa 1310.

Bret, Robert Le,

Goldsmith, 1334. He resided in the Goldsmithery, in the parish of St. Matthew de Friday Strete ("Calendar of Wills, Court of Husting, London").

Brice, Sir Hugh,

Goldsmith; Lord Mayor in the first year of Henry VII., 1485 ; Keeper of the King's Exchange in London ; and one of the Governors of the King's Mint in the Tower of London, under William Lord Hastings, the fifth of Edward IV. He built, in the church of St. Mary Woolnoth, Lombard Street, a chapel, called the Charnell, as also part of the body of the church and of the steeple, and gave money toward finishing thereof, besides the stone which he had prepared. He also bequeathed a rent-charge on his house in Lombard Street. He was buried in the body of the church, 1496.

Bricheford, John de,

Goldsmith, probably of Friday Street, 1334.

Brickwood and Co., 1803. (See BROWN, COBB, AND CO.)Briscoe, Stafford, Goldsmith, 1732, at the Golden Ball, the corner of Friday Street, Cheapside.

Bristow, Richard,

Goldsmith, at the Three Bells, in Fleet Street, advertised in the Daily Journal, 1732, that he sold and delivered to any part of the town, Bristol, Pancras, and Bath water. I note this as it is a strange commodity for a goldsmith to deal in.

Britaine, or de Betaigne, Richard,

Goldsmith ; Mayor in 1326.

Broad, John,

Goldsmith, circa 1579, of St. Giles', Cripplegate.

Bromley, John,

Goldsmith, 1732, St. Michael's Alley, Cornhill.

Brooke, Richard,

Goldsmith, 1580–1607, of St. Mary Woolnoth's parish. He was buried in that church in 1607.

Brooks and Co., 1814–24. (See DIXON.)Brooks and Co.,

Bankers, opened a London branch at 81, Lombard Street, in 1864. The banking business was established in Blackburn, towards the close of the last century, by William Brooks, who descended from a long line of yeoman farmers. He took into partnership with him a wealthy friend, named Roger Cunliffe, of Blackburn. Messrs. Cunliffe and Brooks continued to prosper. They have now several branches in the Manchester district, and at Blackburn, Altringham, and Sale in Cheshire, and Darwen in Lancashire. Mr. Samuel Brooks was admitted a partner when he attained the age of twenty-one, and lived to be sole partner, and in due course his son, William Cunliffe Brooks, M.P., who was created a baronet, in 1886 entered the firm.

It now consists of the following partners :—

Sir William Cunliffe Brooks, Bart., M.P.

Samuel Burd Brooks.

John Brooks Close Brooks.

Brown, Cobb, and Co.

The firm of Messrs. Bowles, Beachcroft, Brown, Reeves, and Collins appears to have started as bankers about the year 1796, at 18, Exchange Alley, Cornhill, where they remained until 1800, when a dissolution of partnership took place; the Directory showing that Messrs. Beachcroft and Reeves retired, and joined partnership with Mr. Samuel Bosanquet, who left the firm of Messrs. Foster, Lubbock, and Co. in the same year.

In 1801 Messrs. Bowles, Brown, Ogden, Cobb, and Stokes were at 67, Lombard Street; but in the year following another dissolution took place, and Messrs. Bowles and Ogden left the firm to start a fresh concern, under the style of Messrs. Bowles, Brickwood, Ogden, and Wyndham, at 11, Lombard Street; which in 1808 became Messrs. Brickwood, Morgan, and Starkey, who ceased to exist after 1810. Messrs. Brown, Cobb, and Stokes, from whom they seceded in 1802, continued the business in the same premises, i.e. 67, Lombard Street, and afterwards in No. 66—until 1816; after which date they cannot be further traced.

Brown, Collinson, and Tritton.

This firm was founded by Henton, Brown, and Son, about 1748; at least, that is the earliest date that can be found for them. In 1754 it was Brown and Son. The style of the firm, as shown by the Royal Annual Kalendar of 1765, was Brown, Henton, and Son, who were carrying on business in Lombard Street, facing the Castle Tavern. In 1770 this house was numbered 58, Lombard Street, and the style of the firm was altered to Brown and Collinson. In 1778 the London Directory shows that it was Brown, Collinson, and Tritton,* which firm appeared for the last time in the list of bankers in 1781.

Brown, Janson, and Co.

This firm originated about 1813, when it was established by Messrs. Thomas and Stephen Nicholson, Janson, and Co., at 75, Threadneedle Street. In 1815 they moved to their present house, 32, Abchurch Lane. In 1823 the style of the firm became Messrs. Brown, Janson, and Co., which it has been ever since.

It consists of the following partners:—

Samuel James Brown
Henry Oxley.
James Walker Oxley.
Thomas Harrison.
John Whitaker Cooper.
Basil Braithwaite.

Brown, John, and Co.,

Were established at 25, Abchurch Lane, about 1851, so far as can be proved by the Directories. The present firm consists of the following partners:—

Joseph John Brown,
Edward Stanton.

Brown, Langhorn, and Brailsford, 25, Bucklersbury, from 1811-20.Browne, Richard,

Was described as a goldsmith, in 1731, at the Three Angels, against George Yard, in Lombard Street.

* John Henton Tritton joined the firm of Barclay, Bevan, and Co. in 1785.

Bruce, Simson, and Co.

This banking firm was started in 1802 by Messrs. Were, Bruce, Reed, Simson, and Taylor, at 2, Bartholomew Lane.

The name of Reed does not appear in any subsequent list. In 1812 the style was changed to Bruce, Simson, Freen, and Mackenzie. During 1817 and 1818 this firm was not found among the list of bankers. They may have suspended payment (?). In 1819 the firm of Bruce, Simson, and Co. is found in the Directory as bankers carrying on business at No. 9, Austin Friars. They continued until 1825, when they ceased to exist.

Brun, Nicholas le,

Goldsmith, circa 1309, who had property in Fletestrate ("Calendar of Wills, Court of Hustling, London").

Buck, John, 1714,

A goldsmith at the Black Boy, London Bridge.

Bull, John, and Co.,

50, Bartholomew Close, 1774-76.

Bullock, Robert,

Goldsmith, 1702, of Cheapside.

Bult (James), Son, and Co.

First appear in the London Directory as bankers in 1841, at 85 and 86, Cheapside; the firm consisting of James Bult, James Philip Bult, and George Frederic Bult. They do not appear in the Directory after 1852.

Burde, or Bird, John,

Goldsmith, 1568, is recorded as having been a maker of maser bowls. St. Giles', Cripplegate, has an interesting example inscribed with his name as the maker.

Burdeyn, John,

Goldsmith, 1341.

Burgh, Simon de,

Goldsmith of St. Botolph parish, without Aldersgate, circa 1315. Amongst other bequests named in his will, he left to his wife, Matilda, all his cups of silver and de mucro ("Calendar of Wills, Court of Hustling, London").

Butler, John,

A goldsmith, of the Golden Cup, in Lombard Street. All that can be gleaned concerning him is that he advertised in the London Gazette, December 9, 1689, that he had stopped some plate which was supposed to have been stolen.

Butler, Thomas,

Goldsmith, 1657, of St. Botolph's parish.

Call, Marten, and Co.

This firm originated in 1773 as Pybus, Hyde, Dorset, and Cockell, at 148, New Bond Street. In the list of bankers for 1779 the name of Hyde does not appear, but Mr. Pybus, junior, was admitted as junior partner. In 1782 the firm consisted of Pybus, Dorset, Cockell, Pybus, and Hale.

The list of 1785 shows that the name of Call had taken the place of Dorset (who resigned to unite with Sir H. Mackworth in forming a new bank) as second partner; and in this year they are described of 148, Old Bond Street.

In 1791 the firm became Pybus, Call, Grant, and Hale; in 1802, Pybus, Grant, and Hale; and in 1810, Pybus, Call, Marten, and Hale. In 1814 the style of the firm was changed to Marten, Hale, and Call; and in 1816 to Marten, Call, and Arnold. In 1821 they were at 25, Old Bond Street, where they had probably been since 1785; No. 148 most likely being an error.

Sir W. P. Call (Bart.), Arnold, and Marten was the style of the firm in 1827. In and after 1830 the style of the firm again changed to Call, Marten, and Co., by which it was known until March, 1865, when they amalgamated with Messrs. Herries, Farquhar, and Co., of St. James' Street.

Castell, Powell, and Co.

This business was established about the year 1759 in Birch Lane, by John Castell and Son. In 1763 the style of the firm had been altered to Castells and Whately. The London Directory of 1771 shows that they assumed a partner of the name of Powell, the firm thus becoming Castell, Whately, and Powell, carrying on business at 66, Lombard Street, formerly the sign of the Spread Eagle. In 1785 it became Castell, Powell, Summer, Powell, and Willson. In 1798 Mr. Summer's name disappeared from the firm, and it then became styled Castell, Powell, Son, and Wilson (sometimes spelt Willson). It is not seen among bankers after the year 1802; but on April 28, 1807, S. Castell and W. Powell paid a dividend.

Castell, Powell, and Co.—continued.

It is recorded in the Annual Register that on December 11, 1773, a duel was fought in Hyde Park between Mr. Whately, banker, of Lombard Street (brother to Mr. Whately, late Secretary to the Treasury), and John Temple, Esq., Lieutenant-Governor of New Hampshire, when the former was dangerously wounded. The cause of the quarrel was the disclosure of the confidential letters written by Messrs. Hutchinson, Oliver, Paxton, and Co., which had been laid before the Assembly at Boston, and had also been published in most of the London papers.

Caswall and Mount.

This business, carried on in Lombard Street, originated in the firm of Elias Turner and Caswall (the latter of whom had formerly been in partnership with Mr. Brassey), who were flourishing certainly as early as 1713, and were commonly called the Sword-Blade Company. It is very probable that they were descended from Turner and Tookie, who were keeping running-cashes at the Fleece, in Lombard Street, in 1677. They were the cashiers of the South Sea Company, a sketch of which will follow. In 1715 an advertisement in the Daily Courant notifies the loss of a note of Turner and Caswall's, which was signed by Mr. Mount.

Robert Surman also signed for them in 1715, but he left to found a bank of his own. From the London Gazette of April 16, 1720, we learn that they had been robbed; George Davis, a small-sized man, aged 28, with a bandage under his chin, and George Crooke, a porter, being advertised as having gone away with some effects of their masters, Elias Turner, Sir George Caswall, and Co., who offered a reward of fifty guineas for their apprehension.

In 1720, the South Sea Bubble year, a customer of theirs made £250,000 in differences in the South Sea stock through their hands. Sir George Caswall, who was an M.P., was expelled the House and ordered to pay the said sum of £250,000, and was committed to the Tower as a South Sea director.

The South Sea Company was brought out in the year 1711. During the war with France in the reign of King William III., the payments to the sailors of the Royal Navy being neglected, they received tickets instead of money; and they were frequently obliged by their necessities to sell these tickets at 40, and sometimes 50, per cent. below the amounts which they represented. By this and other means the debts of the nation, unprovided for by Parliament, amounted altogether to £9,471,325. Mr. Harley, at that time Chancellor of the Exchequer, and afterwards Earl of Oxford, proposed a scheme to allow the holders of these tickets or debentures, and the other portion of the floating debt, 6 per cent. per annum interest, and to incorporate them for the purpose of carrying on a trade to the South Seas. They were accordingly incorporated under the title of the Governor and Company of Merchants of Great Britain, trading to the South Seas and other parts of America, and for encouraging the fisheries.

Thomas Guy, the bookseller, of 1, Cornhill, at the corner of Lombard Street, known as the "lucky corner," made a very large fortune by buying up these tickets and by purchasing South Sea stock when low, and selling out before the bubble burst. He was the generous founder of Guy's Hospital, the building of which cost him £18,793 16s. 1d., and at his death he endowed it with the sum of £219,499 os. 4d.

The fluctuation in this stock during the year 1720, when all the world was speculating in the most absurd and even impossible schemes, was excessive. On April 7 the South Sea stock was 310 per cent.; on the next day it was 290. On May 23 it stood at 500, on June 2 at 890, and on June 3 at 640 per cent. The committee then invited a third subscription, and four millions of stock was taken at 1000 per cent., and before the end of June this rose to 2000 per cent. Then came the collapse. On September 2 the stock was down to 700, and on the 13th to 400 per cent. This of course caused ruin to thousands. A great many goldsmiths having advanced large sums upon the stock, a run was made upon them when it fell, and many stopped payment, among them being the Sword-Blade Company, Turner, Caswall, and Co. The Bank of England also was sorely pressed, and had to resort to numerous artifices to delay the payment of money. One of these is explained in Macleod's "Theory and Practice of Banking :" "It employed a number of clerks to tell out the money which was demanded, as well as what was brought in. Payments were made in light sixpences and shillings, and large sums were paid to particular friends who went out with their bags of money at one door, to deliver them to people placed at another, who were let in to pay the same money to tellers, who took time to count it over. These persons were, of course, always served first. By this means time was gained ; the friends of the Bank rallied round it, and made large subscriptions to support the company ; the festival of Michaelmas, at which it was usual at that time to shut up the Bank, came, and when it was opened again, the public alarm had passed off."

The South Sea Company were permitted to sell annuities to the value of £200,000 a year. The Bank bought them at twenty years' purchase, and was allowed to add £4,000,000 to its capital.

After the failure of the Sword-Blade Company and of the South Sea Bubble, we find that this business was conducted by John Caswall and John Mount, the latter of whom had signed the notes of Turner and Caswall in 1715. This firm continued until January, 1742, when we learn from the London Magazine they had been announced as bankrupts.

The office of the Sword-Blade Company was on the east side of Birch Lane, looking out on the churchyard of St. Edmund, King and Martyr. They had a doorway and lights opening on to it, for which George Caswall paid the parish ten shillings a year. No. 19 now occupies the site.

Appear to have established themselves at 37, West Smithfield, about 1851. In 1864 this business was merged into the Albion Bank, which failed in 1871. The London Joint Stock Bank appears to have lost no time in opening a branch in the Metropolitan Cattle Market.

Chambers, Abraham, 1683–93,

Was a goldsmith at the Golden Eagle, sometimes called the Golden Falcon, over against St. Dunstan's Church, in Fleet Street. He was brother of James Chambers, the founder of the banking-house of Goslings. Abraham Chambers' daughter, Hester, married Richard Nicholls, a goldsmith, at the Golden Key. A. Chambers died in 1693, and his son Abraham, who was in the business with him, died in December, 1733, leaving a son of the same name and three daughters, one of whom married Edward Usborne. In the Daily Courant, August 16, 1710, was the following notice :— "This day, Mr. Barnaby, an attorney of Clifford's Inn, came to the Managers and Directors of the Lottery at Guildhall, to claim the Thousand Pounds a year, drawn against one of his tickets on Wednesday last. Mr. Chambers, a goldsmith, of Fleet Street, who took out the ticket, came with him."

In 1733 we find Abraham Chambers in partnership with Thomas Usborne ; the business being carried on under the style of Chambers and Usborne until 1749, after which date we see no more of them. Abraham Chambers died in 1756.

Bond Street. The style of the firm became Chambers, Hercy, and Birch in 1776, and in 1785 Hercy, Birch, and Hobbs. In 1791 the name of Chambers appeared as that of the third partner; and in 1796 the firm became Birch, Chambers, and Hobbs. In 1812 it consisted of Birch and Chambers, at 160, New Bond Street. In 1822 the style was Chambers and Son, which firm stopped payment November 3, 1824.

John Hercy, of Cruchfield House, Berks, D.L., died September 15, —, aged 88. He was the eldest son of Thomas Hercy Smallwood, Esq., who assumed by royal license, in 1821, the surname and arms of Hercy, as heir to his maternal uncle, Lovelace Hercy, of Cruchfield, and Newman Street, London, banker.

Chechestr, John de, or Chichester,

An eminent goldsmith and citizen of London, maker of the King's Privy Seal, and of the wedding jewellery for the marriage of King Edward III.'s son and the Lady Blanche.

He was Sheriff in 1359, and Lord Mayor and King's Escheator for the City of London in 1369, in which year the celebrated William Walworth was Sheriff. He died in 1381, and by his will he left his tenement in the parish of St. John Zachary, and his shop in "the Chepe," at the corner of Friday Street, to his kinsman John French; and the bulk of the remainder of his property, including a tenement called the "Sarazynshede," he bequeathed to his wife Alicia, and after her decease to his son William Chichester ("History of the Family of Chichester," John C. Hotten, 1870).

Goldsmith, 1590-1625, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth. He bequeathed £4 annually to the Goldsmiths' Company, to four poor men of the craft.

Cheque Bank (Limited).

This institution, which is altogether a new idea, was invented and originated by Mr. James Hertz, managing director, in July, 1873. It has a guarantee fund of £27,000, and a paid-up capital of £26,190.

Mr. Hertz, writing to me on July 20, 1875, says:—

"We have turned over £1,200,000 this year, and have a balance in hand of £145,000."

That speaks well for so young an undertaking. In giving an account of the objects aimed at in its establishment, I cannot do better than reproduce what has been written by themselves upon the subject. The following extracts I have taken from the first annual report:—

"It has been established on the principle of extending the advantages of banking to small transactions, and to the most numerous classes, to those persons who, from the smallness of the sums which they can at any one time command, have hitherto been unable to bank; and to the numerous small transactions of wealthier persons, which are below the amount for which it has been customary to draw cheques, and which, if drawn, encumber a banking account with a multitude of small entries.

“This is the first feature of novelty: and the soundness of the principle on which it is based is apparent from the analogy of all commercial undertakings, which show that there is a great mine of profit to be worked by addressing one's self to the wants and requirements of the greatest number of persons.

“As no Cheque Bank cheque can be obtained from the bank until the maximum amount for which it can be filled up, and which is stamped on its face, has been deposited, cheques on this bank differ from those on all others in this most important particular:—that they are certain to be paid on presentation. No inquiry into the means or standing of the person who draws them is necessary; they can be taken in payment, and can pass from one hand to another with the same confidence, because they have the same undoubted value as a Bank of England note for the same amount.

“Another most important peculiarity of Cheque Bank cheques remains to be noticed. Ordinary cheques must be presented immediately, or as soon as possible after they are received. If an ordinary cheque is not so presented—in due course, as it is called—the responsibility and risk of non-payment fall on the holder.

“Although a balance sufficient to meet it may exist at the time of the drawing in the hands of the banker, there is nothing to prevent its being drawn out shortly afterwards by another cheque; and the only security to the holder lies in instant presentation.

“The Cheque Bank does not pretend to enter into competition with other existing banks. It is based on a new system; and, as it offers advantages hitherto unknown, it looks entirely to new and untried sources of profit.

“Their intention is that these cheques shall gradually, but surely, supersede the whole system of Post-office orders throughout the country, and eventually, probably those in relation with foreign countries.”

There are no fewer than 984 banks which cash their cheques. Head offices: 4, Waterloo Place, and 3, George Yard, Lombard Street.

Chessheire, Henry,

Goldsmit, 1608, of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Chest, John,

Goldsmit, residing in Chepe, 1429, in the reign of Henry VI., for using slanderous words against the Goldsmiths' Company, was condemned to come to Goldsmiths' Hall, and on his knees ask all the company forgiveness for what he had “myssayde;” and was also forbidden to wear the livery of the company for a whole month.

Child, John,

A goldsmith of London in the reign of Elizabeth.

Child and Co.

This house originated in the goldsmith's business carried on for many years in Fleet Street by a family of the name of Wheeler.

The first record of a goldsmith of this name is met with in the Court Books of the Goldsmiths' Company as far back as 1559; for which information my best thanks are due to Mr. Williams of that distinguished company.

On July 1, 1559, when the Goldsmiths' Company furnished a guard of honour from their livery to escort Queen Elizabeth through the City on her way to Greenwich, the name of John Wheeler, goldsmith, appears as one of the pykemen. He was then resident in Chepe; his son went to Fleet Street. His name likewise occurs on many occasions up to October 18, 1575, when he died, and was buried in St. Giles', Cripplegate. The name of John Wheeler, his son, also a goldsmith, occurs in the Parish Register of St. Dunstan's on October 3, 1600, as follows:—"John Wheeler, goldsmith, buried." After him there were two of the name of William Wheeler, father and son, both goldsmiths, likewise in Fleet Street; the elder of whom, in the early part of the reign of Charles I., moved from his old shop to Y^o Marygold, hitherto a tavern, next door to Temple Bar.

William Wheeler was Comptroller of the Mint in 1627.*

An advertisement for a gold watch shows us that in 1660 Ye Marygold was a goldsmith's shop.

In 1663 the elder William Wheeler died; and in the Court Book of the Goldsmiths' Company we find the following entry, proving that William Wheeler, junior, F. Child's uncle, continued as a goldsmith:—"27th April, 1666—William Wheeler, the sonne of William Wheeler, Goldsmith, deceased, upon the testimony of William Rawson and John Marryott, Goldsmiths, was sworn and made free by Patrimony and paid as of Custome."

Francis Child was the son of Robert Child, of Headington, Wilts, and in 1656 he was apprenticed for eight years to one William Hall, of London, a goldsmith; but we lack information concerning him, either as to his residence or otherwise. On October 2, 1671, he married Mrs. Elizabeth Wheeler, spinster, at St. Clement Danes' Church, in the Strand, with the consent of her mother, Mrs. Martha Blanchard, alias Wheeler.

In 1676 the name of Wheeler is no more seen. The business was then in the hands of Robert Blanchard, as we find that he rented the Marygold for 61 years of John Land and Elizabeth Land. We have good reason to believe that Robert Blanchard was a goldsmith as early as 1664. In the following year, 1677, when the "Little London Directory" was published, we find the names of Blanchard and Child keeping running-cashes at Y^o Marygold.

Francis Child, the industrious apprentice, married Elizabeth, only child of William Wheeler; and Robert Blanchard married the widow Wheeler. Thus, in 1681, at R. Blanchard's death, F. Child became possessed of the whole fortune of the Wheelers and of Blanchard.

Blanchard left £200 to the Goldsmiths' Company to pay £4 a year each to two widows, the first as named in his will, and, as they should die, to such widows of good repute (not under fifty years of age) as should be named by the Assistants of the Goldsmiths. He likewise left a legacy of £100 to Christ Church Hospital, and another £100 to Bedlam Hospital.

About July, 1681, Francis Child took into partnership John Rogers.

In Herbert's "Great City Companies" (vol. ii. p. 203) is a brief sketch of Francis Child, who, according to it, was the "junior of Sir Josiah Child by twelve years, and was apprenticed to William Wheeler, a thriving goldsmith next door to Temple Bar. Seeing the worth of the young man, Wheeler married him to his only daughter, and, on his death in 1663, left him heir to his business."

Francis Child was the first banker who gave up the goldsmith's business. He has been called by Pennant "the Father of the Profession." The old ledgers of the firm prior to the year 1690 were replete with goldsmiths' and pawnbroking accounts mixed up with banking accounts. Indeed, lending money upon pledges must at that time have been a most profitable part of the goldsmith's trade.

Sir Francis Child, Knight, Goldsmith, was elected Alderman of Farringdon Ward Without on October 22, 1689; Sheriff in 1690; and Lord Mayor in 1698-9 (by which office he was out of pocket £4000). Sir Francis Child, together with several leading goldsmiths, was authorized by the Lords of the Treasury, in 1694, to receive contributions for raising £1,000,000 on the new duty on salt and rates of excise. Up to 1695 all persons having bullion were in a position to take it to the Mint, and receive weight for weight in standard coins. In this year, however, it is on record that Sir Francis Child had 41,819 guineas coined; and from Narcissus Luttrell's Diary we gather that he, with two or three other bankers, frequently advanced large sums of money to the Government between 1691-97. He was President of Christ's Hospital in 1702, and represented the City in the first Parliament of Queen Anne. He had a numerous family,† and some of his sons entered the bank ; notably Sir Robert, who was elected Alderman of Farringdon Ward Without on October 22, 1713. He was Colonel of the Hon. Artillery Company, and died in 1721.

Francis (the second son of Sir Francis Child) was elected Alderman of Farringdon Ward Without on October 10, 1721 ; Sheriff 1722 ; Lord Mayor and knighted in 1732 ; and President of Christ's Hospital between 1727 and 1740. He was also M.P. for Middlesex between 1721 and 1740, and a director of the East India Company.

About the middle of the year 1729 Mr. Francis Child introduced a printed form of promissory note, having a vignette of Temple Bar in the left-hand corner. These notes, however, appear to have been discontinued at the end of the last century. They were worded much in the same manner as the Bank of England notes are at the present day, and were probably the first printed bank notes ever known. I have seen notes of Messrs. Child and Co. for the year 1793, proving uncontestedly that they were not discontinued in 1750, as is stated by Mr. Lawson in his "History of Banking."

Mr. Stephen Child (son of the first Sir Francis) joined Mr. Tudman, a goldsmith, "at ye Crown, in Lombard Street," before the year 1708.

Mr. Samuel Child (another son of Sir Francis Child) was for many years head of the firm. He was a member of Parliament, and died in 1752.

Miss Elizabeth Child, the eldest daughter of Sir Francis Child, married Tyringham Backwell,* son of Alderman Edward Backwell, the celebrated banker of Lombard Street, who was ruined by the shutting up of the Exchequer by Charles II. in 1672.

This house is the only bank in London in which the clerks all become partners in order of seniority ; which custom probably originated in the practice of the apprentice, after serving his full articles, being taken into the firm in partnership with his master. When bankers discontinued having apprentices (which was, I presume, about the time they left off the goldsmith's trade), their clerks who had risen from being juniors became head clerks and eventually partners. This practice, as far as this house is concerned, has been continued ever since the latter end of the seventeenth century. In the early part of the eighteenth century it was a common occurrence for London bankers to take their clerks into the firm. The custom has now, however, fallen into disuse.

Messrs. Child and Co. are well known to be the last that adopted the plan of issuing printed cheques, which custom was revived by them about thirty-five years ago. This was only a revival, as has been proved by the discovery of a large number of printed cheques of the year 1762, addressed to Francis Child, Esq., and Co., which are probably the earliest on record. They were continued by his brother, Robert Child, and afterwards by Messrs. Child and Co. ; and they appear to have fallen into disuse about the end of the last century.

In 1683 Prince Rupert's jewels were disposed of by a public lottery, subscriptions for which were paid to Mr. Child, at the Marygold. The King himself mixed the blanks at Whitehall, in the presence of a large number of people.†

The old ledgers of this firm are replete with accounts of people famous in the history of England in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Of these the following may be enumerated :—

Madame Eleanor Gwynne, the celebrated mistress of Charles II., who died in debt to Messrs. Francis Child and John Rogers in 1687. Her executors were Laurence Hyde, Earl of Rochester ; Lord Sydney ; Sir Robert Sawyer, the Attorney-General ; and the eighth Earl of Pembroke. They signed the ledger on January 7, 1687, agreeing to pay 5 per cent. interest on the amount due to the firm, and to sell 14,443 ounces of plate. Messrs. Child and Co. possess her autograph to a draft dated December 11, 1686. Poor Nell was evidently no scholar, as she could only make her marks, which were "E. G." They likewise possess the doctor's receipt for attending Madame Gwynne in her last illness, and for remedies and medicines, amounting to £109.

* Two of their sons, Barneby and William Backwell, were taken into the bank, and they both became partners and heads of the house. Barneby died in 1733, and William Backwell retired from the firm in 1756 (for particulars, see "Ye Marygold"), and established a bank in Pall Mall, at the sign of the Grasshopper, of which details will be found under the name of DEVAVNES.

Another notable name is that of Dr. Stillingfleet, Bishop of Worcester, of whom the following anecdote is told by Count Grammont in his "Memoirs of the Court of Charles II. :"—

"Charles, however, could jest upon his difficulties. He once asked Stillingfleet why he always read his sermons in the Chapel Royal, but preached extempore everywhere else. Stillingfleet answered that it was from the awe of his audience, and begged to know why his Majesty read his speeches to Parliament. 'Odd's fish! Doctor,' said the King, 'tis no difficult question. I always ask for money, and I have so often asked for it that I am ashamed to look the members in the face.'"

Then the following accounts are to be seen in Messrs. Child's ledgers of that period :—

Gilbert Burnet, afterwards Bishop of Salisbury.

Roger, Earl of Castlemaine.

Lord Keeper North.

Executors of Sir Peter Lely.

Laurence Hyde, Earl of Rochester.

John Churchill, the first Duke of Marlborough.

King William III. and Mary.

Prince George of Denmark.

Sir Josiah Child.

Barbara Villiers, Duchess of Cleveland.

John Dryden, the poet, who is said to have deposited £50 in the hands of Mr. Blanchard, goldsmith, next door to Temple Bar, for the discovery of Lord Rochester's bullies.

On December 18, 1679, writes Cunningham in his Handbook, in Rose Street (between King Street and Long Acre), as Dryden was returning home by Long Acre, over against Rose Street, he was barbarously assaulted and wounded by three persons hired for the purpose, as is now known, by Wilmot, Earl of Rochester. Fifty pounds were offered by the King for the discovery of the offenders, and a pardon in addition, if a principal or an accessory would come forward. But Rochester's "Black Will with a cudgel" (the name he gives his bully) was bribed to silence, it is thought, by a better reward. Rochester took offence at a passage in Lord Mulgrave's "Essay on Satire," an essay in which his lordship received assistance from Dryden.

The following advertisement is extracted from the London Gazette, December 22, 1679 :—
 "Whereas John Dryden, Esqr., was on Monday, the 18th instant, at night, barbarously assaulted and wounded, in Rose Street, in Covent Garden, by divers men unknown, if any person shall make discovery of the said offenders to the said Mr. Dryden, or to any Justice of the Peace, he shall not only receive fifty pounds, which is deposited in the hands of Mr. Blanchard, goldsmith, next door to Temple Bar, for the said purpose; but if he be a principal or an accessory in the said fact, his Majesty is graciously pleased to promise him his pardon for the same."

The Dukes of Beaufort, Devonshire, Bolton, (Sheffield) Buckingham, Bedford, Bridgewater, Leeds, Rutland, Ancaster, etc.

The Earls of Dorset, Middlesex, and De La Warr, and Robert Harley, Earl of Oxford, the originator of the South Sea Bubble.

The titular Dukes of Powis and Tyrconnell.

John, second Lord Carteret, afterwards Earl Granville, first Duke of Kingston, who introduced his little daughter, Lady Mary Wortley Montagu, when only eight years old, to the Kit Kat Club.

Oliver Cromwell kept his accounts at "Ye Marygold;" but, unluckily, the ledger which contained his account has been taken away from the bank, and nothing has been heard of it for the last seventy years.

Then the name of Sarah, the celebrated Duchess of Marlborough, the friend of Queen Anne, must ever be remembered with reference to Child's. On one occasion when a rumour was afloat that a run was about to be made on the bank, she collected as much gold as she could and brought it down herself to Temple Bar on the very morning the run was to be made, so enabling the firm to meet all demands upon them.

Some people say that she wrote a cheque upon the Bank of England for £100,000; but that is probably an exaggerated statement, as no entry of such a transaction can be traced. It possibly may be an event that took place much after the one just described, or it may be another account of the same event.

In the "History of the Bank of England," Mr. John Francis, who quotes Ireland as his authority for the anecdote, gives the following account of the run, or "push," as it was then called, made upon Child's by the Bank:—

"He [Ireland] said he received it from an authority not to be doubted; and it is, if true, curiously illustrative of the evil spirit which, only a century ago, influenced public bodies. It is probably a partial statement.

"About 1745 the practice of bankers was to deliver, in exchange for money deposited, an accountable receipt, which they circulated like a modern cheque. Bank notes were then at a discount; and the Bank of England, jealous of Child's reputation, secretly collected the receipts of their rivals, determined, when they had procured a very large number, suddenly to demand money for them, hoping that Child's would not be able to meet their liabilities. Fortunately for the latter, they got scent of this plot, and, in great alarm, applied to the celebrated Duchess of Marlborough, who gave them a single cheque of £700,000 on their opponents.

"Thus armed, Child's waited the arrival of the enemy. It was arranged that this business should be transacted by one of the partners, and that a confidential clerk, on a given signal, should proceed with all speed to the Bank to get the cheque cashed. At last a clerk from the Bank of England appeared with a full bag and demanded money for a large number of receipts. The partner was called, who desired him to present them singly.

"The signal was given; the confidential clerk hurried on his mission; the partner was very deliberate in his movements; and, long before he had taken an account of all the receipts, his emissary returned with £700,000; and the whole amount of £500,000 or £600,000 was paid by Child's, in Bank of England notes. In addition to the triumph of this manœuvre, Child's must have made a large sum, from bank paper being at a considerable discount."

Mr. Francis considers it is most difficult of belief that any body of honourable men could act so disgraceful a part. It might probably have arisen out of a spirit of pique and revenge; as in the year 1707, when the Pretender was expected to invade England from France, where he had made extensive preparations, the people became very excited, and the demand for gold was very great. The result was, that a large sum was drained out of the Bank of England and out of the hands of the goldsmiths.

This was considered an opportunity for two goldsmiths and bankers to make a joint run upon the Bank of England. They were no less personages than Sir R. Hoare and Sir Francis Child. One of them had collected bank bills to the value of £100,000, and the other likewise a large sum; and they demanded payment on presentation. This demand placed the Bank in awkward circumstances; but in the end they came out very well, as the Queen informed the directors that she would allow 6 per cent. interest for their sealed bills for six months.

In addition to this, many of the wealthy nobility advanced large sums to the Bank; and subsequently a call of 20 per cent. was made on the proprietors.

Amongst the many interesting autographs in the collection of the firm, the following may be particularized:—

Nell Gwynne.

Titus Oates (as an endorsement to a cheque of the Duke of Bolton).

Archbishop Tenison (as an endorsement to a cheque of the Duke of Bolton).

Sarah Churchill, afterwards Duchess of Marlborough.

Lady Rachael Russell, widow of William Lord Russell, who was executed in Lincoln's Inn Fields in 1684.

George Evelyn of Wotton.

Sir John Churchill, afterwards Duke of Marlborough.

Roger, Earl of Castlemaine.

Laurence Hyde, Earl of Rochester.

Barbara Villiers, Duchess of Cleveland.

Lady Mary Wortley Montagu ; and a vast number of others of extreme interest.

The following romantic and interesting anecdote may be deemed worthy of a place here :—

Mr. Robert Child, the last of his name and head of the bank in 1782, had an only daughter, Sarah Anne, who married, on May 20 in that year, John, tenth Earl of Westmorland.

Lord Westmorland, it is said, was dining with Mr. Child one afternoon at Temple Bar, and, amongst other subjects upon which they conversed, Lord Westmorland said, "Child, I wish for your opinion on the following case :—Suppose that you were in love with a girl, and her father refused his consent to the union, what should you do ?"

"Why I run away with her, to be sure," was the prompt reply of Mr. Child, little thinking at the time that it was his daughter that the querist was in love with. Either that same night, or a few nights after, Lord Westmorland eloped with Miss Sarah Child in a post-chaise and four, from Berkeley Square House. The duenna, who slept in the outer room of Miss Child's apartment, was drugged by her maid, and her flight was only discovered by the "Charley" (or night watchman) finding the front door open and raising an alarm. Mr. Child at once took a post-chaise and pursued the runaway. Whether Mr. Child had better horses, or whether he had more relays than the pursued, is not known; but he approached so nearly to them near Baldock that Lord Westmorland was compelled to stand up in his carriage and shoot the leading horse in Mr. Child's chaise. This bold proceeding gave Lord Westmorland time to get over the border, where the blacksmith was in readiness, and the pair were married at Gretna Green before Mr. Child could interfere with the ceremony.

The following amusing account of the event appeared in the Morning Herald of May 21, 1782 :—

"Mr. Child, the banker, and his attendants returned yesterday morning to town, after a vain pursuit of the Earl of Westmorland, who carried off that gentleman's daughter early on Friday morning last. Two of Mr. Child's pursuers came up with the amorous fugitives a little on the other side of Baldock, one of whose horses was instantly shot under him by Lord Westmorland's people, to prevent his getting ahead of them, the man's intent being to retain all the carriages at the next stage, and thus stop the lovers' progress. The other servants instantly turned tail, and from that moment the pursuit was abandoned, so that there is not the smallest doubt but the young spirited heroine has before this time been hailed the lovely Countess of Westmorland."

In the same journal appeared the following on dit :—

"The Marquis of G——m is chiefly affected by a late event ; his Lordship being the adopted choice of the young lady's friends ; Mrs. C——d, in particular, was his advocate."

"Mrs. C——d has taken a most active part to frustrate the intended union, being herself among the pursuers. Lord H——b——t, it is said, feels a severe disappointment in the choice Miss C——d has made, as he considered himself on very good terms with the fair deserter and her relatives."

During the short interval between the runaway marriage and his death, Mr. Robert Child never forgave Lord and Lady Westmorland. He died suddenly, in the month of July of the same year, and by his will he left the whole of his immense fortune to the first daughter of the union—Lady Sarah Sophia Fane, who married, on May 23, 1804, George Villiers, Earl of Jersey.*

* The London Packet of October 18, 1784, records the following misfortune that befell a walk-clerk :—

"A few days ago a clerk belonging to Mr. Child the banker, being sent out with a number of notes that were

An anecdote is also told by one of the customers of the bank that, rather more than half a century ago, his grandfather, having a considerable sum of money, was anxious to meet with a London banker to take charge of it. With that view he took a journey to London and visited several bankers, whom he consulted as to the terms upon which they would take his money. The bankers anxious to accommodate him, one said he would allow him 2 per cent.; another said 3 per cent.; while a third hesitated as to what he would do. At last he went to Child's—where he stated his business, and asked what interest they would allow upon so large a sum of money. The reply was: "We shall be happy to take charge of your money, but we will not give you any interest for it." This answer appeared so to gratify and satisfy the old gentleman that he exclaimed, "Then this is the place for me!" and he thereupon opened his account. His descendants still bank with the firm; but Messrs. Child and Co. have given up their old practice of not allowing interest for money on deposit.

The following have been the various changes in the firm since the time of Blanchard and Child, the successors of William Wheeler and Son:—

Robert Blanchard died in June, 1681; and in July of the same year Francis Child took John Rogers into partnership with him, and the firm continued for some years under the style of Child and Rogers.

Sir Francis Child died in 1713, when the firm consisted of Robert Child, Francis Child, Henry Rogers, and Henry Morse, under the style of Sir Robert Child and Co. Sir Robert Child died in 1721; the firm then consisting of Francis Child, Samuel Child, Henry Rogers, Henry Morse, and John Morse, under the style of Francis Child, Esq., and Co. Henry Rogers died on March 10, 1736; upon which the firm comprised Sir Francis Child, Samuel Child, John Morse, and Barneby Backwell. Sir Francis Child died in 1740; the firm then became styled Samuel Child, Esq., and Co., consisting of Samuel Child, Barneby Backwell, and William Backwell, grandsons of Alderman Edward Backwell. Samuel Child died in 1752, when the firm was composed of Mrs. Agatha Child, Barneby Backwell, William Backwell, and Thomas Devon, under the style of Childs and Backwells.

Barneby Backwell died in October, 1754, and John Fludd became junior partner. In 1756 William Backwell retired, and the firm consisted of Agatha Child, Francis Child (her son), Thomas Devon, and John Fludd. The latter died in 1760, and the following change occurred in the firm: Agatha Child, Francis Child, Robert Child, Thomas Devon, and Robert Lovelace, under the style of Francis Child, Esq., and Co.

In 1763 both Mrs. Child and Francis Child died, when the style of the firm became Robert Child, Esq., and Co., consisting of Robert Child, Thomas Devon, Robert Lovelace, Robert Dent, and John Church.

Robert Child died July 28, 1782, when the firm consisted of Mrs. Sarah Child (widow), Robert Lovelace, Robert Dent, John Church, and John Keysall, trading under the style of Messrs. Child and Co.

In 1786 the firm consisted of the following partners:—Mrs. Sarah Child, Robert Dent, John Church, John Keysall, John Edgar, and John Wormald.

In 1788 John Church died; and two years after William Donaldson, who had been a clerk at Sir C. Asgill and Co.'s, was admitted into the firm.

In 1791 Mrs. Sarah Child married Lord Ducie. She died in 1793; and in 1795 John Dent became junior partner. In 1798 the firm consisted of Robert Dent, John Keysall, William Donaldson, John Dent, and John Wormald, junior. Mr. Wormald, senior, had retired the year before.

become due, received payment for one of them for £10 at a house in Piccadilly; after which he went to another house for the like purpose, when on examining his pocket book, he missed a note for £50. He immediately hurried away to stop payment, but was too late, a man having, about half an hour before, received payment of it all in cash, he absolutely refusing to accept any paper; and, what is remarkable, signed the receipt with the name of the gentleman from whom the clerk had received the payment of the £10."

John Dent, who was of a Westmoreland family, introduced the dog tax, which was passed under Pitt. From this circumstance he was universally known as "Dog Dent." He frequently received large hampers, freely garnished with hare's legs, pheasants' tails, grouse and partridge wings, etc., but invariably filled with dead dogs.

Harry Smith entered the firm in 1800; and in 1805 Robert Dent and William Donaldson died, the firm then being John Keysall, John Dent, John Wormald, and Harry Smith. On March 4, 1806, John Keysall retired, and Sarah Sophia Child, Countess of Jersey, became head partner. In 1808 the firm was represented by the Countess of Jersey, John Dent, John Wormald, Harry Smith, William Fuller, and James Wood. Harry Smith died in 1817; and in the year following John Lister became junior partner.

John Dent died in December, 1826; and in March, 1827, William Shepherd and Ralph Addison entered the firm, which was then composed of the Countess of Jersey, John Wormald, William Fuller, James Wood, William Shepherd, and Ralph Addison.

In 1835 John Wormald died, and, William Shepherd retiring, William Whelan became junior partner. In the following year John Brown was admitted, and in 1837 William Henry Smith; when the firm was the Countess of Jersey, William Fuller, Ralph Addison, William Whelan, John Brown, and William Henry Smith. William Whelan was the last to wear powder. Mr. Wormald, who died in 1835, wore a short brown pigtail wig. At this time the partners and senior clerks wore knee breeches, shoes and buckles, blue coats with brass buttons, and white neck-cloths. When they went out they wore gaiters or top boots. In 1840 William Whelan retired, and Ralph Addison died, and John Wormald became junior partner. In 1842 William Fuller retired, and in 1843 John Brown died; the business was then carried on by the Countess of Jersey, William Henry Smith, John Wormald, William Wood, and John Copp. The latter died in 1848, and William Wood retired in 1849; and in March of that year William Shepherd, George Addison, and Edward Robinson became partners. In March, 1859, Mr. Smith retired, and in 1860 Thomas Hiram Fraser was admitted junior partner. Mr. Shepherd died in 1862, and Alfred Mortimer was admitted to the firm. In 1866 Mr. Fraser died, and Frederick William Price became junior partner.

The Countess of Jersey died on January 26, 1867, and Mr. Mortimer retired in the course of the same year, when Charles Thorold Fane filled the vacant place. In 1868 the firm consisted of the Hon. F. W. C. Villiers (trustee for the Earl of Jersey), John Wormald, George Addison, Edward Robinson, Frederick William Price, and Charles Thorold Fane. In 1872 the Hon. F. W. C. Villiers died, and George Addison retired; whereupon the Earl of Jersey became head partner, and Robert Hughes Potter junior partner. In March, 1874, Edward Robinson retired, and in November of that year John Wormald died, and Edward Prichard Evans became junior partner; and in March, 1875, Frederick Littlehales was admitted into the firm.

In 1883 E. P. Evans retired, and George Gunning was admitted into the partnership. In 1886 R. H. Potter retired, and in 1887 Frederick George Hilton Price became a partner; F. Littlehales retired, and George Lionel Dashwood was admitted into the firm. On January 31, 1888, F. W. Price died, and in 1889 John Hall became junior partner. Thus in 1890 the business is carried on by the representatives of the Right Honourable Sarah Sophia Child, Countess of Jersey, deceased (Earl of Jersey and Charles Thorold Fane, representatives and partners in respect thereof), Charles Thorold Fane, George Gunning, Frederick George Hilton Price, George Lionel Dashwood, and John Hall, under the old style of Child and Co.

Clearing House.

The system of clearing, as first adopted, was certainly primitive and unsafe. Mr. Lawson says : "The clerks of the various banking-houses used to perform the operation of exchanges at the corners of streets and on the top of a post ; they then met by appointment at a public-house ; but, from the insecurity of these arrangements, it was at last thought advisable that the principal City bankers should rent a house near the Post-office in Lombard Street. This house was called the Clearing House. To it bankers send all their bills, cheques, etc., which have been paid in since the clearing of the previous day." In the "Grasshopper," Mr. J. B. Martin says that for clearing they very often resorted to a banking-house, which had a large recess in the window, which they found convenient ; but the house in question found it to be just the opposite, and the noise made such a hindrance to business that, as it is said, they were often summarily turned out. This led to a house being taken in 1810.

Mr. Martin thinks it quite possible that the Grasshopper was the rendezvous referred to ; but an entry in 1773, "Quarterly charge for use of clearing-room, 19s. 6d.," gives an earlier date to its establishment.

I have observed that in the middle of the seventeenth century it was the practice of goldsmiths to keep running accounts with each other, for the convenience of being able to transfer money from their respective accounts to those of others, as directed by their customers having cash accounts with such goldsmiths or bankers. Thus an early system of clearing was established, which has since become such a vast and important element in the banker's business.

In the ledgers of Alderman Edward Backwell (in the possession of Messrs. Child and Co.) covering the years 1663 and 1672, and in the early books of Messrs. Blanchard and Child of the same period, may be seen accounts testifying to the prevalence of this custom among most of the principal goldsmiths of that time.

In Messrs. Child and Co.'s clearing books for about the year 1753, I have noticed that bankers' clerks, calling to collect the various cheques they had upon the house, were occasionally paid by cheques or cash notes that Messrs. Child chanced to have upon such bankers in part payment, the remainder being settled for by a cash-note or coin. For instance, suppose that Messrs. Martin and Co. had a charge of £500 upon Child and Co.—Child's happening to have drafts on Martin to the extent, say, of £400, the walk-clerk would take such drafts, and the balance would be paid by bank notes or coin.

The present system of the Clearing House is a vast improvement. Here every banker, whom the committee of bankers agree to receive into the house, has a desk in it, with his name affixed; and clerks from the various bankers come in from time to time, when the house is open for business, and deliver all the cheques they have received since the previous day to the desks of the several bankers upon whom they have drafts or bills,—first of all writing their names across each cheque. This was the origin of crossed cheques, a practice now generally adopted as a security against fraud. The amounts of these drafts are taken down upon sheets of paper by the clearing-clerk, and the cheques are then sent over to their respective banks to be cancelled by the firm. At this establishment they settle the whole amount delivered during the day by receiving or paying the difference by a transfer on the Bank of England; all the clearing bankers keeping an account with that institution. On May 15, 1889, the vast total was reached of £71,090,000. The largest cheques upon record were for £2,062,907 10s. and £2,012,680 respectively. Messrs. Martin and Co. informed me that they received the one and paid the other on July 4, 1888.

Before May 11, 1854, the clearing was settled by bank notes; for which purpose an average amount of £200,000 was required to adjust its transactions.

The joint-stock banks were admitted to the Clearing House on June 8, 1854.

This reform was followed by another of equal consequence to the banking community, namely, the establishment of the Country Clearing House on November 22, 1858; an undertaking devised by Sir John Lubbock, Bart.

The governing body of this house is as under—

R. C. L. Bevan, Esq., Chairman.

Were at 4, Whitehall, from 1825-48. In 1846 the names of the partners were George Cockburn and Benjamin Williams.

Cocks, Biddulph, and Co.,

Of 43, Charing Cross, have informed me that they started in business about 1750. The firm then consisted of Francis Biddulph, James Cocks, and Thomas Somers Cocks. Their names do not appear in the list of bankers before the year 1763, when we find that Biddulph and Cocks were at the New Buildings, Charing Cross.

In the following year the name of George Ridge is met with on cash-notes, signing for the firm. Mr. Ridge had formerly been an army agent, and his ancestor had been Paymaster-General to the Parliamentary army, and subsequently he became an army agent. The iron chest in which he kept his cash for the soldiers is still in the possession of the bank. In 1776 the firm was Biddulph, Cocks,

Eliot, and Praed (Mr. Eliot afterwards became Lord St. Germans); and in 1785 they took Mr. Ridge into partnership.

In the list of 1792 two of the members had left the firm, and the style became Biddulph, Cocks, and Ridge, which continued until 1820, when the style changed, and it became Cocks, Cocks, Ridge, and Biddulph. From 1827 until 1845 it was Cocks and Biddulph; afterwards it became Cocks, Biddulph, and Co.

In 1860 it was Biddulph, Cocks, and Co., and that continued to be the style of the firm until 1865, when it reverted to Cocks, Biddulph, and Co., which is its present designation.

Amongst their earliest accounts were John Berwick, of the Old Bank, Worcester, and Brasenose College, Oxford; both of which connections are kept up to the present day. The present premises were built in 1873. The firm consists of the following partners:—

Reginald Thistlethwayte Cocks.

Michael Biddulph.

George Tournay Biddulph.

Thomas Somers Vernon Cocks.

Codd and Co.,

Bankers and navy agents, of Craven Street, Strand. Their banking business was transferred to Messrs. Cocks, Biddulph, and Co., May 1, 1886.

Coggin, Henry,

Late Controller of the Mint, had four ingots of silver belonging to the late King, brought to the Mint by — Foster, a goldsmith of Lombard Street, November 9, 1649 ("Books of Comm^{ee} for the advance of money").

Coggs, John,

Was a goldsmith keeping running-cashes, according to the Little "London Directory" published in 1677, at the King's Head, in the Strand. He evidently had been in business long before this, as he kept an account with Blanchard and Child for purposes of clearing, as early as 1664, which account is headed "Brother Coggs."

I have seen his signature on the backs of drafts as early as 1685–87. The following draft, of which I submit a copy, is dated London, August 18, 1685:—

"I pray the bearer hereof, Mr. John Cogs, goldsmith, the sum of foureteene pounds, and put it on the account of Dr. Edward Chamberlayne."

"For Capt. Child, Goldsmith,

"Temple Bar."

In 1696 we find that Coggs had a partner, Charles Holloway, and that John Dann signed for them.

The following interesting advertisement appeared in the London Gazette of July 6, 1696, and gives a date for the commencement of that grand institution, Greenwich Hospital:—

"The Treasurer of Greenwich Hospital for Seamen, having appointed Mr. Cog's against St. Clement's Church in the Strand and Mr. Nathaniel Hornby's in Lombard Street, goldsmiths, to be places of his receipt; All Persons who have subscribed thereto, are desired to pay in their money; the Foundations of the Building being begun the 30th past in the presence of the Commissioners, and many hands at work."

Upon another draft drawn in 1707 by Laurence Hyde, Earl of Rochester, in favour of the Earl Deloraine, the following endorsement occurs:—

"Witness Wm. Wilson, for Messrs. Coggs and Dann."

Thus it will be seen that Mr. Coggs had taken a partner at this period. 1708 is the last year in which I have been able to find the name upon any document.

The following interesting letter, which is in the possession of Messrs. Child and Co., was addressed to Henry Morse (one of the partners in that firm) by the Earl of Litchfield, proving that customers, before the days of pass-books, were in the habit of calling at their bankers' to check their accounts, at foot of which they subscribed their names with—"I allow this account." It is of frequent occurrence in the ledgers of Messrs. Child and Co.

"SIR,

"I love to go on in old formes if there be no reasons of consequence to y^e contrary, and therefore I send you y^e writing that was allwayes put to y^e foot of y^e accounts between Mr. Coggs and I when they were passed for every halfe yeaeres rents, and to this writing Mr. Dann and I sett our hands.

"LITCHFIELD."

In addition to the Earl of Litchfield, and Earl Deloraine, the Earl of Ailesbury banked with them, as is proved by a draft of Mr. Edw^t Ryder's in 1687, addressed to Mr. Cratford, desiring him to pay Mr. John Coggs for the use of the Rt. Hon^{ble} the Earl of Ailesbury the sum of three hundred pounds.

The following interesting advertisement appeared in the London Gazette of May 7, 1702:—"Lost on the day of Her Majestie's Coronation, in or near Westminster Hall, a diamond stomacher with a row of rose diamonds down the middle, with knots of small rose diamonds on each side; in the setting their being a joint betwixt each knot. They were all set in silver and sewed on black ribbon, also a large rose diamond set in silver and fastened to a bodkin. Whoever brings them to Messrs. Coggs and Dann, goldsmiths, over against St. Clement's Church in the Strand, shall have 40 guineas for the stomacher and 20 guineas for the large stone."

Messrs. Coggs and Dann failed, and a meeting of creditors was called on January 26, 1709. I have seen an account in Messrs. Child and Co.'s ledgers of 1742, headed, "The Trustees of the Estate of John Coggs and John Dann, late Bankers in the Strand." In that year a dividend of 3*s*. 6*d*. in the pound was paid, the trustees being the Rt. Hon^{ble} John Tylney, Esq., commonly called Lord Castlemain; Peter Walter, Charles Compton, Edward Compton, William Granville, and William Draper, Esquires; and William Townsend and George Sherwood, Gentlemen.

Colebrooke and Co.

The earliest date at which any mention is made of the firm of James Colebrooke and Co., bankers, is 1706, when their name is found upon an old cash-note.

In May, 1720, they advertised thus in the London Gazette: "James Colebrooke and Co. being in possession of considerable parcels of Reversionary Annuities on the 14 per cent. and £3700 per week, give notice they are ready to treat with the nominees or Proprietors of the orders for life, it being the mutual interest of both to have them joined together." James Colebrooke was called a scrivener in 1722.

They appear in the London Directory of 1736 as Colebrooke, Rooke, and Harvey, behind the Royal Exchange; and, in another list, as near the Antwerp Tavern, Threadneedle Street. In 1740 the style of the firm became Colebrooke and Lightfoot; and in 1743 it was Sir James Colebrooke, Bart., and Co. In 1756 a customer's signature is witnessed by W. Binns for James Colebrooke, Esq., and Co.* In 1771 the Directory shows further changes; the firm standing as Sir George Colebrooke, Lessingham, and Binns. The latter had been their clerk, and their house was then numbered 62, Threadneedle Street, which in 1778 was taken by Prescott, Grote, and Co. They stopped payment March 31, 1773.

On May 4, 1773, we learn from the "Annual Register": "At a meeting of the creditors of Sir George Colebrooke, the trustees, who at a former meeting were appointed to enquire into the estate and effects of that gentleman, made their report, by which it appeared, that the balance in favour of Sir George was £315,000; that from that balance the trustees had thought proper to write off £120,000 on account of Sir George's engagements for his brother-in-law, Mr. Gilbert, and £89,000 which had been settled on Lady Colebrooke and her family, which reduced the balance to £106,000, besides the eventual chance of the Chilham estate in Kent; that notwithstanding this balance, by reason of the diffuse state of Sir George's effects, it must be near two years and a half before the creditors could be paid their principal and interest; but that 7s. in the pound should be advanced within the space of two months. With this promising state of Sir George's affairs the creditors seemed well satisfied; and it was proposed by some gentlemen present, that Sir George should again resume the banking business with his old partners; but others were of opinion that it would be proper to associate a new partner, who would have an interest in keeping the old debts distinct."

Again, on April 24: "Eleven pictures sold at Sir George Colebrooke's sale for near £2000. The two capital were the view of Nimeguen, £304 10s.; Cardinal Triest, £241 10s."

Nothing is known of him further than that he was one of those unfortunate goldsmiths who had money in the Exchequer when it was shut up by Charles II. on January 2, 1672. It is recorded that he lost the sum of £1784 6s. 4d., for which he received a bond from the King agreeing to pay £107 1s. 1d. per annum as interest.

of Richard Colvill, of Newton Colvile, in the Island of Ely. He was a friend of Samuel Pepys, by whom he is mentioned several times in his Diary. The first transaction he records as having had with him apparently did not much please him. It was on May 24, 1665 : "After dinner Creed and I to Colvill's, thinking to shew him all the respect we could by obliging him in carrying him 5 tallys of £5000, to secure him for so much credit he has formerly given Povy to Tangier, but he, like an impertinent fool, cavills at it, but most ignorantly that ever I heard a man in my life."

On another occasion, in October of that year, he went to Lombard Street : "But Lord ! how Colvill talks of the business of publique revenue like a madman, and yet I doubt all true ; that nobody minds it, but that the King and Kingdom must speedily be undone."

On June 2, 1665 : "In the afternoon went with my tallys, made a fair end with Colvill and Viner, delivering them £5000 tallys to each and very quietly had credit given me upon other tallys of Mr. Colvill for £2000 and good words for more." Then again, on June 29, 1665 : "After dinner to my little new goldsmith's, whose wife indeed is one of the prettiest, modest black women that ever I saw. I paid for a dozen of silver salts £6. 14. 6." On August 28, 1665 : "To Mr. Colvill the goldsmith, having not for some days been in the street, but now how few people I see, and those looking like people that had taken leave of the world." This was during the time of the Plague. On July 23, 1666, he went out to the Excise Office about business, and then homewards met Colvill, "who tells me he has £1000 ready for me upon a tally; which pleases me, and yet I know not now what to do with it, having already as much money as is fit for me to have in the house, but I will have it." He went again on August 11, and to his great joy he will make above £100 by one transaction. On August 13 he went "back again to Colvill's and there did end our treaty, to my full content, about my Exchequer assignment of £3600 of Sir W. Warren's, for which I gave him £170 to stand to the hazard of receiving it. So I shall get clear by it £230, which is a very good jobb. God be praised for it."

His house in Lombard Street was destroyed by the Fire. Pepys went to see him on October 15, 1666, and found he then lived "in Lyme Street and with the same credit as ever, this fire having not done them any wrong that I hear of at all."

And again, on February 29, 1667, Pepys records : "Wrote to my father, and sent him Colvill's note for £600 for my sister's portion." This is one of the earliest records we have of a goldsmith's note, which was issued by the goldsmith for the amount of money deposited with him. It was the origin of bank notes. On March 11, 1668, Pepys says : "Meeting Mr. Colvill, I walked with him to his building, where he is building a fine house where he formerly lived, in Lombard Street ; and it will be a very fine street."

This John Colvill had deposited £85,832 17s. 2d. in the Exchequer, and that sum he lost by the King's shutting it up in January, 1672. The amount was fourth in magnitude ; and he must have been in a large way of business to have been able in those days to deposit so much at interest at one time.

His Majesty granted the usual bond, dated April, 1677, unto John Lyndsey, as due to Dorothy his wife, administratrix to John Colvill, her late husband, deceased. The total of interest directed to be paid was £5149 17s. 4d. per annum. As he died between 1672 and 1674, it is quite possible that this severe loss was the cause of his death.

Commercial Bank of London

Came into existence about 1841, at 3, Moorgate Street. It subsequently moved to Lothbury, and occupied the premises in Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, vacated by Messrs. Wright and Co. This bank stopped payment in 1861, and the business was taken over by the London and Westminster.

Consolidated Bank (Limited),

52, Threadneedle Street, was established in 1863. It has a branch in West Strand and in Manchester. Its paid-up capital is £800,000, and the reserve fund amounts to £226,279. This bank has absorbed the old private banks of Messrs. Hankeys, and Messrs. Heywood, Kennard, and Co.; and it likewise took over the business of the Bank of London, when that bank failed in 1866; but the Consolidated Bank, not being quite strong enough then, was pulled down by it, and suspended payment for a short time. In about a fortnight, however, it resumed operations.

Cook and Cary.

Thomas Cook and Nicholas Cary were goldsmiths keeping running-cashes at the Griffin, in Exchange Alley, in 1677. I have seen their names frequently between that date and 1683 as paying into accounts with Blanchard and Child.

Cooke, Francis,

Goldsmith, circa 1671, of St. John Zachary.

Cooke and Gurney,

Goldsmiths and plate-workers, 1733, at the Golden Cup, Foster Lane.

Cooke, Samuel, and Stephen Venables,

Bankers in Lombard Street. We find one Samuel Venables described as a goldsmith in 1690. The next record is the following announcement in the London Gazette of July 12, 1720:—"The Person possessed of the reversion after the life of Margaret Soper, in the 14 per cent. No. 5573, and will sell it, or buy her life, or any person that hath lost a permit of £4000 in Mr. Stogdon's General remittance, etc., let them apply to Mr. Willis at Messrs. Cooke and Venables, Bankers, in Lombard Street, and describe the Permit and pay this charge may have it again." We may assume that speculation in the South Sea Bubble was too much for them, as we find they failed December 19, 1721.

Cooper, Gissingham

(Often spelt Giffingham in the directories), a goldsmith and banker in the Strand, at the corner of Arundel Street. The earliest date that I can meet with is 1735, when his name appears as an endorsement to a draft. I have seen it on others up to 1761, in which year one is endorsed: "Pay the contents to Mr. Gis^m Cooper, Banker, in the Strand." His name appears for the last time in a list of bankers published in 1768.

Cooper, Robert,

Was a goldsmith at the Golden Lyon, at the corner of Arundel Street in the Strand, as we learn from the London Gazette of May 28, 1694. He was probably succeeded in his business by the above.

Coote, Henry,

Coutts and Co.

The widely known banking-house of Messrs. Coutts and Co. was originally established by a goldsmith of the name of George Middleton, who kept a shop near St. Martin's Church, St. Martin's Lane. The first mention of this goldsmith occurs in or about 1692, when he had a partner of the name of John Campbell. Thus in that year Messrs. Middleton and Campbell were carrying on business as goldsmiths and bankers.

John Campbell was at the Three Crowns, in the Strand, near Hungerford Market, in 1692. In 1694 an advertisement for something lost directs the inquirer to apply to Mr. "Camels," at the Three Crowns. We also see by the London Gazette that he was there in 1696 and 1702. When he left St. Martin's Lane cannot now be ascertained; it might have been a few years earlier. It is interesting to place upon record, on the same authority, that in January, 1683, John Wright, a haberdasher, was at the Three Crowns, near Durham Yard, in the Strand; thus proving that that was the sign of the house before Middleton or Campbell moved to it.

Another early note of this business, exposing a fraud, is to be found in the following advertisement, which appeared in the London Gazette of February, 1706:—

"Whereas on Monday, 27th January, about 10 in the morning, a gentlewoman stept in a hackney coach at Mr. John Campbell's, goldsmith, at the Three Crowns in the Strand, and brought a note of Mr. Campbell's hand for £100 which she there exchanged for a Bank of England of the same value, and about half an hour afterwards the said £100 was paid by the Bank to a woman: If any person will discover the woman to Mr. Campbell so as that the £100 (which was fraudulently received) may be recovered, such person shall receive from Mr. Campbell £40 as a reward." This is certainly one of the earliest instances of a fraud being perpetrated upon a banker by a well-dressed woman.

A very curious advertisement, that appeared in a weekly paper called The British Apollo for March 2, 1711, ran as follows:—

"This day subscriptions are taken in upon Birth and Marriages, at the Three Crowns, next Durham-Yard in the Strand, for 6 weeks, and Servants 3 months upon a dividend. Likewise subscriptions are taken in upon marriages, upon a claim for a month. Trustees being chosen, and undenialable security is given for the performance of the same. Proposals are to be had at the Office Gratis."

The next advertisement selected by us is of a different character. It appeared in the Daily Courant of January, 1714: "To be sold a good brick house, etc., at the end of the five fields going to Chelsea. Apply to George Middleton at the Three Crowns." Apart from the interesting nature of the advertisement, it is valuable as proving the fact that George Middleton was there at that time, he being the sole partner. John Campbell died in 1712, and was buried in St. Paul's Churchyard, Covent Garden; and George Middleton, whom he left as his sole executor, married Mary Campbell. Her sister Elizabeth married John Peagrim, and Middleton took George Campbell into partnership.

It has been my good fortune to see a large number of old cash-notes and drafts of Messrs. Child and Co. (between 1706 and 1748) bearing endorsements of this firm; some of which show the autographs of George Campbell (many of them witnessed by David Bruce, who afterwards was admitted a partner) and of Ralph Bullock,* who signed for the house from 1743 to 1761.

Between 1743 and 1748 George Middleton died, and George Campbell associated himself in partnership with his clerk, David Bruce, who had witnessed the signatures of customers for the past twenty years.

In 1753 the business appears to have been solely in the hands of George Campbell. About 1755, however, he took James Coutts into partnership.

* He had been clerk in turn to Middleton and Campbell, Campbell and Bruce, George Campbell, Campbell and Coutts, and Coutts and Coutts.

This James Coutts was the son of John Coutts, a merchant of Edinburgh, who by his industry and perseverance became Lord Provost from 1742 to 1744. His portrait is in the possession of the Baroness Burdett Coutts, and in it he is depicted in the costume of the time of George II. He had four sons, John, James, Patrick, and Thomas. The two former started business in Edinburgh as corn factors, and had for partner their cousin Stephen; while Patrick and Thomas, with Thomas Stephen, came to London and set up in Jeffrey Square, St. Mary Axe.

It is stated that, when James Coutts came up to London on a visit to his brothers, he happened to meet a Miss Polly Peagrim, the niece of George Campbell, the goldsmith of St. Martin's Lane; and that he fell in love with her, and was married to her. Shortly after this happy event he was taken into partnership by Mr. Campbell, and at the same time he retired from the old business in connexion with his brothers in London and Edinburgh.

The firm now became Campbell and Coutts; and they carried on their trade near Durham Yard, in the Strand.

George Campbell died in 1761; whereupon James Coutts took into partnership his brother Thomas Coutts, who at once gave up his connexion with the business in St. Mary Axe, and the style of the firm became Coutts and Coutts.

Thomas Coutts being the only one left to conduct the business in St. Mary Axe, it was entirely given up, upon his becoming a banker. The Edinburgh branch, however, continued to prosper for many years. Eventually it assumed the style of Sir William Forbes and Co., and finally merged into the Union Bank of Scotland.

Mr. James Coutts, who in 1768 represented Edinburgh City in Parliament, died in 1778. The charge of the bank in the Strand then devolved upon his brother Thomas, who long survived him, and became one of the first bankers in London. However, he never forgot Edinburgh, which he occasionally visited; and he was presented with the freedom of that city.

A characteristic instance both of his shrewdness and of his enterprise is given by Mr. Martin in his "Stories of Banks and Bankers," extracted from Lawson's "History of Banking." "In the early part of his career, Mr. Coutts, anxious to secure the cordial co-operation of the heads of the various banking-houses in London, was in the habit of frequently inviting them to dinner. On one of these occasions the manager of a City bank, in retailing the news of the day, accidentally remarked that a certain nobleman had applied to his firm for a loan of £30,000, and had been refused. Mr. Coutts listened, and said nothing; but the moment his guests had retired, about ten o'clock in the evening, he started off to the house of the nobleman mentioned, and requested the honour of an interview with his lordship the next day. On the following morning the nobleman called at the bank. Mr. Coutts received him with the greatest politeness, and, taking thirty one-thousand-pound notes from a drawer, presented them to his lordship. The latter, very agreeably surprised, exclaimed: 'But what security am I to give you?' 'I shall be satisfied with your lordship's note of hand,' was the reply. This was instantly given, with the remark, 'I find I shall only require for the present £10,000; I therefore return you £20,000, with which you will be pleased to open an account in my name.'" The generous—or, as it may more truly be called, exceedingly well-calculated—act of Mr. Coutts was not lost upon the nobleman; who, in addition to paying in within a few months £200,000 to his account, being the produce of the sale of an estate, recommended several high personages to patronize the Bank in the Strand. Among some of the customers who did so patronize it was King George III., who continued to keep his accounts there, until the following incident took place, as recorded by Mr. Lawson:—

"Mr. Coutts had advanced £100,000 to Sir Francis Burdett towards the expenses of his election for Middlesex. On this fact becoming known to the King, he sent for Mr. Coutts, and, after satisfying himself of the real facts of the case, immediately withdrew his money from the bank, a considerable portion of which he placed in the hands of a banker at Windsor, who, to the great mortification of the King, subsequently failed, considerably in his Majesty's debt."

The King, however, opened an account with Mr. Drummond, at Charing Cross, with whom he banked until his death.

Messrs. Coutts and Co. have in their possession an old guinea, called "the lucky guinea," which when I saw it was in the keeping of the chief cashier. It has an interesting and curious history attached to it. It would appear that old Mr. Thomas Coutts was a man who was negligent of attire; and on one occasion, no less than a Christmas Day, he chanced to be in a tavern, or eating-house, where he met a benevolent gentleman who, concluding from Mr. Coutts's appearance that he stood in need of a good dinner, offered him a guinea. The proffered gift was readily accepted by the wealthy banker, who preserved it as a curiosity; and it is further stated that Mr. Coutts ascertained the name of his benefactor, and invited him to his house, when he related the anecdote to him and his guests, assuring him that he should keep the guinea as long as he lived. It subsequently became the property of the Duchess of St. Albans, his widow, and at her decease it was kept in the bank, where it has been ever since preserved. Another equally amusing story is told of Mr. Coutts going to see a miller in Kent. Upon parting with the banker, the miller said: "Here, my man, is half a crown for you to have a glass of ale." Mr. Coutts thanked him, pocketed the coin, and departed. Shortly afterwards the miller came to the Strand to see Mr. Coutts, and, naturally enough, was greatly horrified at finding he was the man he had treated as a servant. Mr. Coutts, however, begged he would not apologize, as he was very much obliged to him. He had had the glass of ale, and should keep the half-crown.

Mr. Coutts, who had lived as bachelor for many years, married Elizabeth Starkey, a superior domestic servant in his brother's service; and by her he had three daughters, who were called the "Three Graces." The eldest, Susan, married the Earl of Guildford; the second, Frances, married the Marquess of Bute; and Sophia, his third and youngest daughter, married Sir Frances Burdett, Bart.

Mrs. Coutts, after being an invalid for some years, died. Mr. Coutts then married Miss Mellon, the actress; and for some time they were both much annoyed by the unworthy and ridiculous remarks that were passed upon their union. Such criticism, however, is supposed to have strengthened their mutual attachment, for, when Mr. Coutts died on February 22, 1822, at the advanced age of 87, he left his widow the whole of his property, amounting to £900,000; a sufficient proof of the confidence he reposed in her.

Mrs. Coutts afterwards married the Duke of St. Albans. She, however, reserved to herself, by marriage settlement, the sole control of her property; and at her death she left the whole of her great wealth to Angela Burdett, the youngest daughter of Sir Francis Burdett, who was the favourite granddaughter of Mr. Thomas Coutts. This lady then assumed the additional surname of Coutts; and subsequently she was created a peeress with the title of Baroness Burdett-Coutts.

The present banking-house, No. 59, Strand, was built by Messrs. Adam, in 1768, on the site of the old house. In Cunningham's "Handbook of London," under the head of "Strand," the following particulars of the house are given:—"It contains some good marble chimney-pieces of the Cipriani and Bacon school. The dining-room is hung with Chinese subjects on paper, sent to Coutts by Lord Macartney, while on his embassy to China in 1792-95. In another room is a collection of portraits of the early friends of the wealthy banker, including the portrait of Dr. Armstrong, the poet, by Sir Joshua Reynolds. The strong rooms, or vaults of the house, will repay an endeavour to obtain a sight of them. The order in which the place is kept is wondrous."

It would be extremely interesting to see a list of the many historical and distinguished persons who have from time to time kept their accounts with this house. Among them are included the kings and queens of England from the time of George II. down to Queen Victoria, and the various members of the present royal family; the royal families of France; the Jacobite Earl of Nithsdale, who escaped from the Tower on February 28, 1715, disguised as a woman, in the cloak and hood provided for him by his heroic wife; the first Duke of Wellington; William Pitt; Sir Thos. Lawrence;

Sir Walter Scott; the Earl of Chatham; and Lord George Gordon, the leader of the celebrated “No Popery” riots, which caused such great commotion in and about the year 1780.

After the death of Thomas Coutts, the firm became known by the familiar style of Coutts and Co., which it retains to the present day. We may add that Messrs. Coutts and Co. absorbed the banking firms of Messrs. Davison and Co. in 1816, and of Hammersley and Co. in 1840.

The firm at the present time consists of the following partners:—

Hugh Lindsay Antrobus, Edmund Coulthurst, and the Hon. Henry Dudley Ryder (trustees for the persons interested under the will of Harriot, late Duchess of St. Albans).

Cox and Co.

The business of this house originated in 1758, when Mr. Richard Cox, who had been for some time secretary to Lord Ligonier, at that time Field Marshal Commander-in-Chief and Master-General of the Ordnance, was appointed by him agent to the 1st Regiment of Foot Guards. Mr. Cox's office was in Albemarle Street, where he carried on his business alone till 1765, in which year he entered into partnership with Mr. Henry Drummond, when they commenced their joint business in Craig's Court under the style of Cox and Drummond.

In July, 1772, Mr. Drummond left the business to join Drummond's Bank, and was succeeded in the partnership by Mr. Mair; the firm then becoming Cox and Mair. In 1779 Mr. Cox took his only son, Mr. Bethel Cox, into partnership, the firm becoming Cox, Mair, and Cox. In 1783 Mr. Mair died, and was succeeded by his cousin, Mr. Greenwood, who had been assisting in the management of the business for some years, when the firm became Cox, Cox, and Greenwood. In 1790 Mr. Bethel Cox retired from the firm, which then became Cox and Greenwood. In 1800 Mr. Cox's grandson, Mr. Richard Henry Cox, became a partner, and in 1803 Mr. Cox, the founder of the house, died at the age of 86, whereupon the firm became Greenwood and Cox.

In 1806 Mr. Hammersley, Mr. Greenwood's nephew, was taken into partnership, and the firm was then styled Greenwood, Cox, and Co. Mr. R. H. Cox's son, Mr. Henry R. Cox, became a partner in 1828, the name of the firm remaining unaltered. In January, 1832, Mr. Greenwood died; and two years later the name of Greenwood was dropped, and the firm became Cox and Co., by which name it has been known ever since.

During all these years, from 1765 to 1888, the offices of the firm remained in Craig's Court; but in the later year they moved into new and adjacent premises in Charing Cross, still, however, retaining and occupying such portion of the old Craig's Court house as was freehold.

The present firm consists of the following partners:—

Henry Richard Cox.

Charles Hammersley.

Frederick Cox.

George Augustus Campbell.

Arthur Charles Hammersley.

Crockplace, Cuthbert,
Goldsmith, circa 1585, of St. Michael Bassishaw.

Crofts, Richard.

In 1675 he was a goldsmith at the Bear in Foster Lane, against the Goldsmiths' Hall, but described in the Gazette of December 4, 1684, as a bankrupt. The same authority, on February 23, 1692, announces that he is again come to town, and is desirous of meeting all his creditors in order to make all possible satisfaction. A similar notice appeared in July, 1716.

Cunliffe (Roger), Sons, and Co.

Messrs. Roger Cunliffe, Sons, and Co. have informed me that their house was established in London about the year 1815, as a branch of the Manchester House of Cunliffe, Brooks, and Co., who were originally manufacturers.

The firm consists of the following partners:—

Roger Cunliffe.

Roger Cunliffe, Jun.

John Benjamin Charles Heath.

Curries and Co.

This house appears to have sprung into existence in 1773, the year after the failure of the banking-house of Messrs. Neale, James, Fordyce, and Co. They established themselves at 29, Cornhill; the style of the firm being Mason, Currie, James, and Yallowby.

I am of opinion that the Mr. James above mentioned was the same gentleman who was in partnership with Neale and Fordyce. J. Yallowby was their clerk, and had been in the habit of witnessing the signatures of that firm for some few years, as may be seen on some of the old notes of Messrs. Child and Co. In 1781 the firm was Currie, Lefevre, James, and Yallowby; and in 1785 Lefevre, Curries, James, and Yallowby. In 1788 Mr. James' name ceased to appear, and a junior partner of the name of Raikes was admitted into the firm.

In 1807 the style of the firm again changed, by the disappearance of Mr. Yallowby's name from the list, and the introduction of a new partner of the name of Lawford. In 1814 the firm was styled Curries, Raikes, and Co.; and from 1827 until 1864, when they amalgamated with Messrs. Glyn, Mills, and Co., the style of the firm was Curries and Co.

The firm of Dorrien and Co., of Finch Lane, amalgamated with Messrs. Curries in 1842; but that circumstance did not alter the style of the firm.

Curtis, Robarts, and Co., 1818-33. (See ROBARTS.)

Cuthbert, Mathew,

A goldsmith, in 1701, at the Cross Keys, in Little Britain.

Cuthbert, Robert,

Was a goldsmith, keeping running-cashes at the Blackamore's Head, in Cheapside, in 1675, as we find from an advertisement in the London Gazette of the loss of a quantity of plate, a reward being offered to be paid by him for the apprehension of the thief. In the "Little London Directory" his name simply occurs as Mr. Cuthbert in Cheapside, where we find him located down to 1703.

Dale, Hugh,

Goldsmith, circa 1594, of St. Christopher le Stocks.

Davies, Robert,

Goldsmith, circa 1618, of St. Edmund, Lombard Street.

Davies, Robert, and Co.,

Were bankers at 187, Shoreditch, between 1842 and 1860.

Davison and Co.

Messrs. Edwards, Smith, Templer; Middleton, Johnson, and Wedgwood were established as bankers in 1794, at 18, Stratford Place, Oxford Street.

Davison and Co.—continued.

In the following year Mr. Smith's name did not appear among the partners of the firm in the list of bankers. In 1805 the style of the firm became Davison, Noel, Templer, Middleton, Johnson, and Wedgwood, carrying on business at 34, Pall Mall. In 1807 the name of Johnson disappeared from the firm, and the business was carried on by the other partners until 1816, when this banking-house ceased to exist, and many of the customers were recommended to transfer their accounts to Messrs. Coutts and Co., who still have possession of their ledgers, etc. Their premises were taken by Messrs. Hopkinson, who occupied them until 1819, when they were taken by Messrs. Ransom and Co.

Dawson and Co., 1802–14. (See DIXON.)

Day, George,

Goldsmith, of Lombard Street, was assessed at £100 by the committee for raising money for the use of the Parliament, on October 16, 1644.

Daffe, Sir William, and Co.,

Grafton Street, Bond Street, 1774.

Dell, Humphry,

Goldsmith, in 1713, at the Crown and Pearl, in Wood Street, Cheapside.

Delves, Edward,

Goldsmith, at the sign of the Marmayd, in Lombard Street, from 1586 to 1638, when he died and was buried in St. Mary Woolnoth's. There was one Edward Delves, hailing from the same sign in the seventeenth century, who sold patent medicines.

Denison and Co., 1806–50. (See HEYWOOD.)

Denne and Co., 1774–98. (See STRAHAN.)

Denny, William, and Backe, John,

Goldsmiths, 1697–1720, of Dove Court, Lombard Street.

Denys, Richard,

Goldsmith, 1339. After leaving certain vessels of brass, lead, wood, etc., to his wife, he left his best brass pot to his son Richard, also his house in Gutter Lane ("Calendar of Wills, Court of Husting, London").

Dericke, Anthony, 1560–80,

Of the Queen's Arms, Cheapside, was a goldsmith and engraver to the Mint in the reigns of Edward VI. and of Elizabeth. He was a goldsmith to Queen Elizabeth, and brought out the first lottery of which there is any record in 1569; the prizes, which consisted of plate, being exhibited in his shop.

Desse, William,

Of Soho Square, a money scrivener, advertised in The Times of November 11, 1791, to hold a meeting of his creditors at the Guildhall.

Devaynes and Co.

This house was established by Mr. William Backwell, a grandson of the well-known Alderman

Edward Backwell, goldsmith and banker in the reign of Charles II. Mr. William Backwell had been in the bank of Messrs. Child and Co. for many years, having entered that house about 1720 as a junior clerk, and in or about 1740 having been taken into partnership with Mr. Samuel Child and his brother, Barneby Backwell. After Mr. Child's death in 1752, Mrs. Agatha Child became head partner in trust for her two sons. The business was then virtually in the hands of the two brothers Backwell, the firm being known as Messrs. Child and Backwell. It having transpired that they had tried to get the whole business into their own name, ignoring the Child interest, a dispute arose between Mrs. Agatha Child and William Backwell as to the division of profits; and it was referred to, and settled by, the Lord Chancellor in 1755, Mr. William Backwell retiring from the partnership.

The year following (1756) he established a bank at the sign of the Grasshopper in Pall Mall, afterwards numbered 39, the site of the present Army and Navy Club house. I have seen cash-notes in Messrs. Child's possession dated 1756, endorsed "For Messrs. Backwell and Co., John Battye."

In 1765 the Royal Annual Kalendar gives the names of the firm as Backwell, Hart, Darell, and Croft. The latter was Robert Croft, who had been a clerk at Messrs. Child and Co.'s. By an endorsement on a note dated 1767 the name of "Willm. Noble" appears as witnessing the signature of the firm, and he subsequently became a partner.

In 1770 the firm appears from the Directory to have been Croft, Hart, and Backwell, the last gentleman probably being a descendant of William Backwell. In 1778 the firm was styled Croft, Backwell, Roberts, and Croft; and in the following year Crofts, Devaynes, Roberts, and Dawes. In 1782 it was Crofts, Devaynes, Dawes, and Noble. The style of the firm changed several times subsequently; and on July 31, 1810, Messrs. Devaynes, Dawes, Noble, and Co. stopped payment during the great panic caused by overtrading in produce and by excess of exports.

De Vismes, Cuthbert, and Co., 1796. (See MARSH.)Diggle, John,

Goldsmith, at the Red Hat or Cardinal's Cap (both being used as synonymous terms), near Charing Cross, Strand, 1696–1701.

Dimsdale and Co.

The first mention I can find of this old business is in one of Messrs. Child and Co.'s drafts for the year 1762, on which is endorsed: "Witness for Messrs. Amyand, Staples, and Mercer, Geo. Fawell." The Royal Annual Kalendar for 1765 states that Amyard (sic), Sir George Staples, and Mercer were bankers, near Gracechurch Street, the sign of their house being the Golden Helmet and the Golden Bear.

In 1770, when houses were first numbered, they appear in the Directory as at 50, Cornhill. In the same year Messrs. Dimsdale, Archer, and Hyde were at No. 2, White Hart Court, Gracechurch Street. This firm must have been established about the same time as Amyand's, for on the back of one of Messrs. Child and Co.'s notes of 1769 is the following endorsement: "Witness J. Woodville, for Messrs. Dimsdale, Archer, and Hyde."

Sir George Amyand, Bart., married in 1771 Catherine, only daughter and heiress of Velters Cornwall, Esq., of Moccas Court, Herefordshire, whereupon he assumed his wife's name and became Sir George Cornwall. He was M.P. for Hereford and a well-known politician.*

* We derive from Lloyd's Evening Post of April 12, 1773, the following account of a forgery committed on this firm:—

"On Saturday morning a young sharper, well dressed, went to Mr. Barrow's, Ironmonger, in the Strand, and purchased a quantity of goods, to the amount of £20, which he desired might be sent in the afternoon to the Bedford Arms, Covent Garden, and they should be paid for on the delivery, declaring that he was son to an Earl; he then went to Mr. Lawson's, Hatter and Sword-Cutler, in the same street, bought a gold laced hat and a silver hilted sword, and

In the year 1774 Sir George Cornewall, Staples, and Watts were at 50, Cornhill, and Messrs. Dimsdale, Archer, Hyde, Dimsdale, and Co. in White Hart Court.

In 1776 Baron Dimsdale retired from the firm of Dimsdale, Archer, and Co., of White Hart Court, and Sir George Cornewall retired from the firm of Cornewall, Staples, and Watts, of 50, Cornhill. Baron Dimsdale in that year appears to have amalgamated with Staples and Watts, under the style of Staples, Baron Dimsdale, John Dimsdale, and Josiah Barnard. In 1779 Messrs. Archer, Hyde, Maude, and Co. disappeared from the list of bankers.

In 1785 it became Baron Dimsdale, Sons, Barnard, and Staples, which style continued with one or two minor changes until 1814, when it became Barnard, Dimsdale, and Dimsdale. The firm was known as Messrs. Barnard and Co. until 1852, when the old house of Drewett, Fowler, and Co. amalgamated with them. This banking-house of Messrs. Drewett makes its first appearance in the London Directory in 1799, under the style of Joseph Smith and Co. In 1818 it was Smith and Holt; in the following year, William Holt and Co.; and in 1823 it became Drewett and Fowler. Up to the year 1836 they were located at 60, Old Broad Street. In 1837 the Directory shows that they removed their business to Princes Street, Bank, at which house they remained until the amalgamation took place with Messrs. Barnard and Co. in 1852, when the style of the firm became Messrs. Dimsdale, Drewett, Fowler, and Barnard.

In 1866 the name of Drewett is no longer to be seen in the firm. It then was Dimsdale, Fowler, and Barnard; and the present style of the firm is Dimsdale, Fowler, Barnard, and Dimsdale, who flourish at 50, Cornhill, on the original site of the house known by the sign of the Golden Helmet and the Golden Bear. Mr. R. N. Fowler was Lord Mayor and M.P. for the City in the year 1884, and in 1885 he was created a baronet. The firm consists of the following partners:—

Sir Robert Nicholas Fowler, Bart.

Herbert Barnard.

Joseph Cockfield Dimsdale.

John Dimsdale.

Ernest Wyndham Barnard.

Dixon, Brooks, and Co.

The originators of this banking business were Richard Master, Edward Dawson, George Brooks, John Kirton, and Ralph Clayton, who established themselves at 26, Chancery Lane, about the year 1787. They appear in the London Directory for the first time in 1788.

The first change to record is the substitution of the name of Dixon for that of Clayton, as junior partner, in 1791. In 1802 it became Dawson, Brooks, Son, and Dixon. In 1814 the name of Dawson is no longer seen, the style of the firm becoming Brooks, Son, and Dixon, and in 1819 Brooks and Dixon. In 1825 George Brooks's name does not appear; but the names of three new partners occur, the firm thus being Dixon, Langdale, Dixon, and Brooks. In 1831 it was Dixon, Son, and Brooks; and in 1836 Dixon, Brooks, and Dixon, which continued to be the style until 1859, when the business, together with some of the clerks, was transferred to the Union Bank of London, who opened a branch bank at 13, Fleet Street, to carry on the old business, which by good management increased considerably. They subsequently built a new bank in Chancery Lane, where they still conduct the business.

Dodd, James,

Goldsmith, 1710, at the Unicorn, in Fenchurch Street.

gave Mr. Lawson a draft on Messrs. Dimsdale, Archer, and Hyde, Bankers, in White-Hart-Court, Gracechurch Street, and signed the name of Cranbourn: Mr. Lawson sent his servants to the Bankers, when it was found to be forged, on which he was taken up, and carried before Sir John Fielding, who committed him to prison. He said his name was Larkin, and that his father lived in Hertfordshire."

Doe, Charles,

Goldsmith, 1652-66. In the "Exchequer Bills and Answers, London and Middlesex, Commonwealth," in the Public Record Office, is the following case, under the date of June 20, 1652, being the answer of Charles Doe, goldsmith, to the complaint of William Paynter, Esq.

The plaintiff brought to the defendant a jewel, and received £20 "upon it." Plaintiff was to pay interest at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum on the said sum. The interest having long gotten into arrear, defendant broke up the jewel and sold it, but not before having had it valued by two goldsmiths, according to the custom of the City of London.

This is an instance of pawnbroking, which was very usual with goldsmiths during the seventeenth century. In 1666 we find that Sir Charles Doe received the thanks of the Wardens and Assistants of the Goldsmiths' Company for having preserved the company's plate and papers, by taking them to his house at Edmonton during the Great Fire.

Dorriens and Co.

The firm of Dorrien, Rucker, and Carleton started at 22, Finch Lane, in 1770. In 1776 Carleton's name disappeared, and two new partners came into the firm; thus, in that year, it was Dorrien, Rucker, Dorrien, and Martin.

In 1779 it became Dorrien, Mello, and Martin. Subsequently a Mr. Magens entered the firm; and, with a few minor alterations, the style of it continued to be Dorriens, Magens, Mello, and Co., until 1842, when they amalgamated with Curries and Co., of Cornhill.

Mr. Thomas Hiram Fraser, for some years one of the partners at Messrs. Child and Co., Temple Bar, was once a junior clerk in this house. I have likewise heard it asserted that Baron Bramwell was at one time a junior clerk in the bank of Messrs. Dorriens.

In the year 1798, in consequence of the extreme scarcity of silver money, Messrs. Dorrien and Magens sent a quantity of bullion to the Mint to be coined according to law, which had never been repealed, by which it was enacted that any one sending bullion to the Mint might have it coined into money upon payment of certain dues. The whole was actually coined into shillings from dies varying only from those of 1787 in the date 1798; but the very day on which the bankers were, by appointment, to have received the coin, an Order of Council was received, commanding it all to be melted, upon the ground that the proceeding had been irregular, and that no coinage was lawful without the sanction of a royal proclamation (Hawkins on "Silver Coins," p. 246).

Dorsett and Co.

This business, which was of but short duration, was established at 68, New Bond Street, in 1785, by Sir Herbert Mackworth, Bart., Dorsett, Johnson, and Wilkinson. The firm sprang out of the bank of Messrs. Pybus and Co., in which house Dorsett had until that year been a partner. In 1792 the name of Sir Herbert Mackworth is not seen, and the style of the firm became Dorsett, Johnson, Wilkinson, and Berners. In 1796 a junior partner of the name of Tilson was admitted; but nothing can be ascertained about them after 1797, in which year they ceased to exist. They probably stopped payment during the money panic, which arose from the drain of gold sent abroad for subsidies and loans to our allies.

The price of consols (be it noted) on April 6, 1797, was 47 $\frac{1}{4}$ per cent.

Down and Co., 1782-1815. (See POLE.)Doyley, Laud,

Was a goldsmith at the Plough, in Lombard Street, in 1694; possibly continuing the business of White and Churchy. He died in 1696.

Dove, Peter,

Goldsmith, 1696, at the Angel and Crown, Newport Street, Leicester Fields. He was there until 1712.

Drewett and Fowler.

This business originated with Joseph Smith and Co., of 60, Old Broad Street, who started about 1799. In 1801 the firm became Smith and Holt, which continued to be the style until 1818. In the following year William Holt was the sole survivor. In 1823 the firm was William Holt and Co.; in 1824 the style became Drewett and Fowler; and in 1836 they removed to Princes Street, Bank. The same firm continued until 1852, when they amalgamated with Messrs. Barnard and Co. under the style of Dimsdale, Drewett, Fowler, and Barnard.

Drummonds and Co., of Charing Cross.

The business of this bank was established about 1712 by Mr. Andrew Drummond, a goldsmith, who was son of Sir John Drummond of Machany.

In March, 1722, Mr. Andrew Drummond advertised that he would give a reward of five guineas for one of his bank notes lost, and would ask no questions. It was particularized as being for the sum of £100, dated February 9, 1721, and payable to Henry Collett or bearer.

As far as I can ascertain through the lists and the agency of old drafts, Andrew Drummond had the business in his own hands until about 1741. I have a signature of John Drummond, signing for Mr. Andrew Drummond in 1741. When the next list is referred to, that for 1754, it will be seen that the firm was Andrew Drummond and Co.

In 1770 the style of the firm had become John Drummond and Co.; and in 1775 it was Robert Drummond and Co., which continued to be the designation until 1804, when Andrew Drummond became head partner. In 1835 Henry Drummond became head partner, and occupied that position until 1847; in which year Andrew Mortimer Drummond became head of the firm. Since 1804 it has been known by the style of Drummond and Co.

Simon Fraser, Lord Lovat, the rebel, banked with this firm. He was tried for high treason at Westminster Hall, and beheaded on Tower Hill, April 9, 1747, on a new block procured for the occasion, which the curious may see in Queen Elizabeth's Armoury in the Tower. He was the last person beheaded in this country.

When George III. became displeased with his banker, Mr. Coutts, he withdrew his balance, and transferred it to Messrs. Drummond. George, Prince of Wales, likewise kept an account with them for some years; but whether he was too extravagant at that time does not transpire. Suffice it to say that the King desired Mr. Drummond not to make any further advances to his son. This order placed Mr. Drummond in an awkward predicament. If he disobeyed his Majesty, he would lose the accounts and gain the favours of the Prince; on the other hand, he would offend the Prince and lose the royal accounts at the decease of the King. Like a loyal subject, however, he obeyed the command of his Majesty, and, when the Prince of Wales applied for further advances, Mr. Drummond was reluctantly obliged to refuse him; upon which the Prince went to Mr. Coutts, who let him have what he required, and the royal family have banked there ever since.

The Drummonds trace their descent from the noble Scotch family of Strathellan, who lost their title and estates in "the '45," and who were one of the earliest instances of the nobility entering into the commercial world.

A good story is current to the effect that, on its original starting at Charing Cross, the offices of the firm were so small that a sailor who had an order upon them for £20 prize money generously offered to take £5 on account, and to call for the residue in a month or two;—Jack being most solicitous not to overstrain their resources.

The firm now consists of the following partners:—

Edgar Atheling Drummond.
George James Drummond.
Allan Harvey Drummond.
Charles Drummond.

Dryden, Henry,

Goldsmith, circa 1666, of St. Clement Danes.

Ducie, Robert,

Was a goldsmith and banker in the reign of Charles I. He was Sheriff of London in 1620, was created a baronet in 1629, and became Lord Mayor in 1630. Sir Robert Ducie is said to have lost £80,000 by the King; but, having accumulated great wealth, he died, about 1634, worth over £400,000. One of his sons married a Miss Moreton, from whom the present family of the Earl of Ducie are descended.

Duck, John,

Goldsmith, of the parish of St. John Zachary. He was the son of Edward Duck, a barber of Marlborough, 1667–1745.

Ducket, Laurence,

Goldsmith. It is recorded by Stow, in his "Survey of London," that in the year 1284, the thirteenth of Edward I., Laurence Ducket took shelter in Old Bow church, after having wounded one Ralph Crepin in Westcheape. During the night there entered in certain evil persons, friends of the said Ralph, and they slew Laurence and hanged him, placing him as though he had hanged himself, and so it was found by inquisition; by which fact he was drawn by the feet, and buried in a ditch outside the City, but afterwards a boy, who lay with Laurence when he was killed, disclosed the truth, and four men were attainted, a woman named Alice was burnt, sixteen men were drawn and hanged, and a few richer persons, after imprisonment, were hanged by the purse. The church itself was interdicted, and the doors and windows were stopped up with thorns, but Laurence was taken up, and honestly buried in the churchyard.

Ducket,

A goldsmith, in 1597 made a mace for the Merchant Taylors' Company.

Duckett, Abraham,

Goldsmith, circa 1579, of St. Michael-ad-Bladum, or St. Michael the Querne, as it is better known by. It is in the Farringdon Ward Within.

Duncombe, Charles, and } 1669–1705. (See MARTIN.)
Duncombe and Kent,

Duncombe, Valentine, 1684–88. (See MARTIN.)

Dutton, Humfrey,

Goldsmith, circa 1582, of St. Botolph, Aldgate.

Eales, Bernard,

Goldsmith, keeping running-cashes in Lombard Street in 1678. He had been associated with Sir Robert Vyner, in whose service he had probably been as clerk, for he frequently witnessed Vyner's signature to Exchequer warrants. Eales died in 1694, and was buried in St. Mary Woolnoth's.

East, Edward,

Citizen and goldsmith, 1656. Very little is known of him further than that he lodged the following bill in 1656:—

“Complaining, sheweth unto your honours Edward Atkins one of the judges of the Court of Common Pleas at Westminster, Jasper Edwards of Lincoln’s Inn, Gent. Edward East, citizen and gouldsmith of London, Henry Pinckney, citizen and gouldsmith of London, etc. They have been for about last four years past proprietors of the Rectory of St. Dunstan’s-in-the-West in which parish are divers ancient houses from which a sum of money in lieu of tithe is payable. This tithe is withheld. The Defendants plead they are not in the Parish.”

A similar bill is presented in Easter, 1661, so that East and Pinckney were both alive then (“Exchequer Bills and Answers, London and Middlesex, Commonwealth, No. 257.” Public Record Office).

Edward East was possibly the predecessor of John East, of the Sun, without Temple Bar. Henry Pinckney was at the Three Squirrels in Fleet Street.

East, John,

Was a goldsmith at the Sun, without Temple Bar, in the Strand. He was established certainly earlier than 1663, in which year his name appears in Blanchard’s ledgers; and on December 14, 1674, the following quaint advertisement appeared in the London Gazette:—“Run away a Scotch boy aged 16 to 18 with some diamonds etc. from Lyndsey House, Westminster, whoever shall secure the said boy and give notice to John East, goldsmith, at the Sun without Temple Bar shall have £5 for their pains.” This advertisement supplements the “Little London Directory” of 1677, as that only gives “Mr. East, at the — in the Strand.” By the London Gazette of 1687 we learn that William East was a goldsmith at this sign.

Easton, Roger,

Goldsmith, 1580, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Edlin, Samuel,

Goldsmith, 1714, at the corner of St. Mary Axe, Leadenhall Street.

Edmund, John,

Goldsmith, 1389, Engraver to the Mint.

Edwards and Co., 1794-1802. (See DAVISON.)Egleton, Christopher,

Goldsmith, circa 1667, of St. Bartholomew the Great.

Elliot, Christopher,

Goldsmith, was warden of London Bridge from Michaelmas in the twenty-second year of Henry VII. until the Michaelmas ensuing. He died in 1505, and was buried in St. John Zachary’s churchyard.

English Joint Stock Bank.

Established in 1866, with a paid-up capital of £150,000, and a reserve fund of £6000. It suspended payment in the same year. (See OLDING.)

Esdaile and Co.

This banking-house was established in 1781 at 26, Birch Lane, by Sir James Esdaile (who was Alderman for Cripplegate Ward and Lord Mayor in 1777), under the style of Esdaile, Hammet, and Esdaile. In 1782 they moved to 73, Lombard Street.

In 1792 the firm amalgamated with Messrs. Smith, Wright, and Co., of 21, Lombard Street, which firm was originated about 1759 at the Three Kings, afterwards No. 55, Lombard Street, by Messrs. Bland, Gray, and Stephenson. In 1763 their style was Smith, Wright, and Gray, which it continued to be until 1792, when the amalgamation took place with Esdailes. The style of the new firm was Sir James Esdaile, Esdaile, Smith, Wright, Hammet, and Co., and they carried on their business at 21, Lombard Street.

In 1799 the Directory shows us that the new interest had left the firm, and that the style was Sir James Esdaile, Esdaile, Hammett, Esdaile, and Hammet; and this continued to be the style of the firm, with a few changes among the junior partners, who were apparently sons of the senior partners, until the year 1833, when the firm became Sir James Esdaile, Esdaile, Grenfell, Thomas, and Co.

This firm stopped payment in 1837; but they paid all their creditors by a loan of £5000 that was advanced them by all the principal bankers in the City of London, which loan has since been repaid, the last payment having been made on February 3, 1873.

The panic of 1837 was called the American panic, from the circumstance that it originated with mercantile houses connected with the United States. The amount of gold in the Bank of England, it may be noted, was at such a low ebb that that establishment had to maintain its credit by a loan of £2,000,000 from the Bank of France.

Eswey, Ralph,

Goldsmith ; Sheriff in 1239, and Mayor in 1242 and 1243.

Evance and Hales. (See PERCEFULL.)Everard, Charles,

A goldsmith at the Unicorn, in Lombard Street, prior to 1655, but he left it in 1662 and went to the Star, in the same street. He died of the plague in 1665, and was buried in St. Mary Woolnoth's.

Everett and Co.

This house originated in the firm of Newnham, Everett, Drummond, Tibbitts, and Tanner, who started in 1785 at 65, Lombard Street, where they continued to carry on business until 1791, when they removed to 9, Mansion House Street. What appears to be a singular circumstance is that in this year Mr. Tanner, who had been the junior partner in Newnhams, left them to become junior partner in another new firm that started in 1791 under the style of Harcourt, Blake, Sansom, Postlethwaite, and Tanner, who began operations in the very premises, No. 65, Lombard Street, which had been occupied by Newnhams.

In 1801 the number of their house was 2, Mansion House Street ; in the following year the name of Drummond is not seen, and another Mr. Everett became junior partner. In 1810 another change occurred by Mr. Tibbitts' name disappearing from the list, and they were again located at 9, Mansion House Street. I cannot help thinking that the change to 2 is an error in the Directory, as they probably never left No. 9 at all.

In 1812 the style of the firm became Everett, Walker, Maltby, Ellis, and Co., which continued until 1825, on December 14 of which year they failed.

Ewer, John, 1730-54.

He was a banker in Pall Mall, but we have been unable to trace the sign of his house, or what became of his business. In 1715, before he set up for himself, he was clerk to George Middleton, at the Three Crowns, in the Strand.

The London Gazette of 1735 announced that John Ewer, goldsmith and banker, late of Pall Mall, was declared bankrupt. Could he have been the same person as is described above? If so, he soon recovered himself.

Ewing, John, and Benjamin Norrington,

Were goldsmiths at the Angel and Crown, in Lombard Street, in 1677, keeping running-cashes; but nothing further is known of them.

Exnew, Sir Thomas,

Goldsmith; Sheriff in 1508, and Lord Mayor in 1517. He made the water conduit in London Wall by Moorgate. He died in 1528.

Farindon, William de,

Goldsmith, was Sheriff in 1280-81; he gave his name to the City Ward, which still retains its designation. He purchased "all the Aldermanie and the appurtenances within the City of London and suburbs of the same, between Ludgate and Newgate and also without the same gates, which Ankerirus ne Avene held during his life, by grant of Thomas Avene" (see Herbert's "History of the Goldsmiths' Company").

Sir Nicholas de Faringdon, or Farndon, goldsmith, son of the above-named William de Farndon, was elected Mayor of London by Edward II. in 1308. He was also Mayor in 1313, 1320, and 1323. He was Warden of the Goldsmiths' Company in 1338 and in 1352. He lived to a great age, and was buried in St. Peter le Chepe.

Farmer, Noah,

Goldsmith, 1590-1600, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Farndon, Nicholas de,

Goldsmith, London, circa 1311.

Farndon, Thomas de,

Goldsmith, of Wood Street, Cheapside. His will was proved on October 28, 1343 ("Calendar of Wills, Court of Husting, London," part i. p. 474).

Farran,

Goldsmith, 1710, at the Blue Perriwig, Russell Street, Covent Garden.

Faulkner, T.,

Goldsmith, 1731, at the Crown and Pearl, New Street, by St. Martin's Lane.

Fayreman, Robarte,

Goldsmith, was buried in 1565, in the church of St. Mary Woolchurch Haw.

Feake, Henry,

Goldsmith, circa 1618, of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Fells, Joseph,

Goldsmith, at the Bunch of Grapes, near the New Exchange in the Strand. He was there as early as 1680, and his name frequently occurs in the journals of that period. The London Gazette of August 3, 1702, announces that he was a bankrupt.

Feltham and Co.

Had their origin in the firm of Thomas Gill and Co., about 1809, at 42, Lombard Street. In 1831 the style of this firm became Thomas and Feltham, and in 1834 John Feltham and Co., consisting of John Feltham and John Cooper. In 1859 they left Lombard Street and went to No. 2, Ball Alley, in the same street, where they remained until 1864, after which no more is seen of them.

Fenruther, Robert,

Goldsmith; Alderman, Master of the Mint in 1493; Sheriff in 1512; and Prime Warden of the Goldsmiths' Company in 1516-17.

Finen, Tedge,

Goldsmith, circa 1610, London.

Fitzhugh, William,

Goldsmith; Comptroller of the Mint from 1400-18. He died in 1434, and was probably buried in St. Mary Woolnoth's, as he desired to be.

Fitz Otho, William,

Goldsmith, in reign of King Henry III. He was Keeper of the Exchequer. There were several of this name in the thirteenth century, who were Masters and Engravers to the Mint, viz. Edward, Thomas, Hugh, Thomas, and William.

Fitzwilliam, William,

Goldsmith, who founded about 1212, at St. Helen's, in Bishopsgate, a priory of Benedictine Nuns, the ruins of which were pulled down in 1799.

Flael, Ralph,

Goldsmith and Alderman, of the time of Henry II. He held in demesne the ward of Aldersgate.

Fleming, Benjamin,

Goldsmith, in 1710 at the Golden Key, against St. Dunstan's Church, in Fleet Street.

Flint, Thomas,

Goldsmith, circa 1597, of St. Margaret, Lothbury.

Floyer, Peter,

Goldsmith, 1695, of Love Lane. He was also a refiner in a large way of business. In that year he had bullion coined into 139,752 guineas at the Mint.

Folkingham, Thomas,

A goldsmith at the Golden Ball, corner of Bearbinder Lane, in St. Swithin's Lane, Lombard Street. In January, 1710, he advertised in the Daily Courant for a runaway apprentice, one Jabez Tench, "a young man near 21 years of age, of low stature, wears a brown coat and a brown natural wig." His name is spelt variously, Faulkeringham and Falkenham, in the registers of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Fosbrooke, Thomas,

Goldsmith, circa 1616, of St. Sepulchre.

Foster, Lubbock and Co., 1786-1801. (See ROBARTS.)Fowle, Robert,

A goldsmith, in 1675 living at the Queen's Head, at Fleet Bridge. He was probably connected with Thomas Fowle, of the Black Lion, in Fleet Street.

Fowles, Thomas, or Fowle,

Was a goldsmith in the time of Charles II., having a shop at the Black Lion, in Fleet Street, between the two Temple gates.

As early as 1666 his name appears in the ledgers of Edward Backwell and of Blanchard and Child. Judging from the size of his account in the books of the former, he must have been doing a large trade as a banker. He is recorded in the "Little London Directory" of 1677 as keeping running-cashes. In 1686 he served the office of Sheriff.

In 1682 Thomas Wotton signed for his master, Mr. Thomas Fowle, and in 1691 Robert Fowle signed for his master, Sir Thomas Fowle.

In 1691 Sir Thomas Fowles left an annuity, or fee-farm rent, of £10 to the Goldsmiths' Company, from the Bishop of Bath and Wells, to pay 40*s.* yearly, on St. Thomas' Day, to five poor widows of the company during their lives.

The following is an amusing advertisement of the days of James II., when highwaymen were upon every road :—

"Whereas Mr. Herbert Jones, Attorney at Law, in the town of Monmouth, well known by being several years together Under-Sheriff of the same county, hath of late divers times robbed the mail coming from that town to London, and taken out letters and writs, and is now fled from justice, and supposed to have sheltered himself in some of the new raised troops. These are to give notice, that whosoever shall secure the said Herbert Jones, so as to be committed in order to answer these said crimes, may give notice thereof to Sir Thomas Fowles, goldsmith, Temple Bar, London, or to Mr. Michael Bohune, mercer, Monmouth, and shall have a guineas reward."

In the London Gazette of 1694 to 1703 there are several advertisements for articles lost, for which a reward is to be paid by Robert Fowle and Thomas Wotton, goldsmiths, at the Black Lyon, in Fleet Street. In April, 1694, he was authorized by the Treasury, as one of the goldsmiths, to receive contributions for raising £1,000,000 upon the new duty arising from salt and upon the new rates of excise.

It would appear from the following notice in the London Gazette of June 15, 1704, that Fowle and Wotton, and Fowle and Mead, were closely connected. Probably the latter carried on the business.

"Lost or mislaid, two Notes under the hand of Nich. Wentworth, for his masters Robert Fowle and Thomas Wotton, both dated 26 February last, and payable to Mr. Edw. Jones or Bearer, one for £1500 the other for £186. 4. 4. If any such Notes shall come to your hands, you are desired to stop them, and give notice to Mr. Fowle and Mr. Mead, Goldsmiths, at Temple Bar, and you shall have Five guineas reward, Payment being stopt."

Francknel, Thomas,

Goldsmith, 1582; died 1596, and was buried in the church of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Frank, William,

Franklyn, William,

Goldsmith, in Lombard Street; buried 1588 in St. Mary Woolnoth's.

Fraunceys, John,

Also called Sir John Francis, a goldsmith, who was Sheriff in 1390 and Mayor in 1400.

Freame, John, 1694. (See BARCLAY.)Freame, Joseph, 1729. (See BARCLAY.)

Frensshe, John,

Goldsmith, 1382. He was probably a maker of maser cups, as we learn from Riley's "London Life" that he had two of these cups stolen—one bound with silver-gilt, valued at 10s., and another valued at 5s.; an immense contrast, it may be noted, to the prices they fetch now.

Frew, or Frear, Robert,

Frowick, Thomas de, or Frowyke,

A goldsmith, 1270. He was Warden of the Goldsmiths' Company, and Alderman of Cheap Ward in 1279. He is recorded by Herbert, in his "History of the Goldsmiths' Company," to have made a golden crown for Edward's second queen, Margaret. He lived at Old Fold, in the parish of South Mimms. There is much to be learned concerning this old family, who furnished London with several wealthy goldsmiths, in "South Mimms," by the Rev. F. C. Cass (London, 1877).

Frowyke, Roger de,

Goldsmith, was Alderman of Langbourne Ward in 1312. In his will it is stated that his principal house was in the parish of St. Olave, near the Tower. He was Comptroller of the Mint at Canterbury, 5–15 Edward II., and Warden of the Exchequer at Canterbury and Bristol, 28 Edward I.; at London and Canterbury, 6 Edward II., A.D. 1312. He appears to have had property in London and in Hertfordshire. (For further particulars, see "South Mimms," by Rev. F. C. Cass.) The will of Roger de Frowyke was proved in 1328.

Fry, William,

Goldsmith, circa 1637, of St. Andrew's, Holborn.

Frys and Chapman

(Quaker bankers), of St. Mildred's Court, Poultry, started in 1806 as Fry and Sons. In 1815 the style became Frys and Chapman, and it so continued until November 24, 1828, when they stopped payment, at which time a member of the society took his account to Jones Loyd. "We think you right, friend," said the senior partner; "it is wiser to place thy money with a rich sinner than a poor saint."

Fuller, Banbury, and Co.,

77, Lombard Street. The business of this firm originated in that of Atkins, Honeywood, and Fuller, who first appear in the list of bankers in the London Directory for 1738, as carrying on trade at the Ram, now 57, Lombard Street. I have found their name on cash-notes of 1737. The style of the firm became Honeywood and Fuller in 1746, in which year the name of J. Halford is seen witnessing signatures for his masters, Honeywood and Fuller; and this continued to be the style until 1754, when I find that J. Vaughan endorsed drafts for Honeywood, Fuller, and Co. About this time they moved to Birch Lane. It appears to have been a common practice for bankers in the last century to admit their clerks into partnership. It certainly was adopted by this firm, as both J. Halford and J. Vaughan subsequently became partners, as will be presently shown.

Between 1761 and 1764 the name of Honeywood disappeared from connexion with this house, and the style of the firm became Fuller and Cope. In 1770 it became Fuller, Baker, and Halford. About 1774 they moved to 84, Cornhill. The firm then was Fuller, Halford, and Vaughan; and in 1778 Fuller, Son, Halford, and Vaughan. The next change occurred in 1781, when the firm was styled Richard Fuller, Sons, and Vaughan. Richard Fuller was member of Parliament for Steyning in 1768. Between 1781 and 1805 another change took place, as in the latter year the name of Richard Fuller, sen., is not seen, nor that of J. Vaughan, the style of the firm becoming Richard

Fuller, George Fuller, and Co. Subsequently, about 1827, it became Fullers and Co. In 1840 they moved from Cornhill to 65, and, a few years later, to 66, Moorgate Street. The members of the firm in 1847 were Richard Fuller, George Arthur Fuller, and William Walter Fuller; the same style continuing until 1859, when they amalgamated with Sapte, Muspratt, Banbury, and Co., of 77, Lombard Street, when the firm became Fuller, Banbury, Nix, and Mathieson. They still occupy the premises, 77, Lombard Street, which were formerly known by the sign of the Vine.

For the various changes in the firm of Sapte and Co., see under that head.

The firm now consists of the following partners:—

George Arthur Fuller.
William Banbury.
John Hennings Nix.
Edward Winkelmann Nix.
Edward Banbury.

A story is told of an old Mr. Fuller, of Cornhill, who belonged to that very old-fashioned, prim class of bankers, well known in the last century, who were hardly ever absent from their desk in the shop, and who always slept over the bank. He was a careful, economical man, who always had his washing done at home. One day every week, at noon, a pint of beer was brought in and placed at the foot of the stairs for the washerwoman, washing-day being always known in the City by this circumstance. Once, however, this pint became a pot. News of the unheard-of innovation quickly spread, and caused quite a sensation in Lombard Street and Cornhill. Indeed, an old customer called upon him to remonstrate upon his extravagance, telling him that, although he had had great satisfaction in keeping his accounts with him till then, he now hardly considered him fit to take charge of other people's money, since he did not know how to take care of his own.

Fuller and Son, William, 1774-99. (See WHITMORE.)

Furley, Lubbock, and Co., 1785. (See ROBARTS.)

Furzer, Walter,

Goldsmith, died 1631, and was buried in the church of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Futter, Henry,

Goldsmith, 1633, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth. In 1637, according to Ruding, a complaint was exhibited against this goldsmith, with others, in the Star Chamber, for transporting gold and silver out of the kingdom into foreign parts, for culling out the weightiest coins, for melting down his Majesty's money into bullion, and for giving value above the prices of his Majesty's Mint for gold and silver. It came out that he did buy light gold, which he furnished to Violet, another goldsmith. He was found guilty, sentenced to be committed to the Fleet, and fined £500. Futter's name appears in the list of those inhabitants of Langbourne Ward, in 1640, who were able to contribute towards raising a loan of £200,000 for Charles I.

Fynchyngfeld, William,

Goldsmith, 1357. He left twenty shillings to Margaret his sister, a nun of Clerkenwelle; and to the wife of John Adrian, six silver spoons and a small maser cup with silver-gilt band. He also left bequests to Henry de Frouyk and Thomas Frouwyk ("Calendar of Wills, Court of Husting, London").

Gale, Robert,

Merchant, of Lombard Street. On May 20, 1647, he had in keeping £400 of Sir John Mills, a delinquent. From this statement one might suppose him to have kept running-cashes.

Gamble, Ellis,

Goldsmith, lived at the Golden Angel in Cranbourne Alley, in 1712. In his advertisements he professed to make buns, etc., and to sell all sorts of plate, rings, and jewels. His name has become familiar to the world through the circumstance of Hogarth having been apprenticed to him for the purpose of learning the art of silver-plate engraving; and shop-bills of Gamble's, engraved by his famous apprentice, are much sought after by collectors of engravings.

Gardener, John,

Goldsmith, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth, 1539–42.

Gardiner, Philip,

Goldsmith, circa 1624, of St. Dunstan-in-the-West.

Garrard, John,

Goldsmith, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth, died 1521.

Garrett, Thomas,

Goldsmith, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth. On June 28, 1614, he was appointed by the King's letters patent to make farthing tokens; and in 1622 the authority was extended to Ireland.

Gaynfford, Henry,

Goldsmith, 1566, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Gaywood, John,

Also Joseph Gaywod, were goldsmiths at the Golden Cross, near Exeter Change, in the Strand, 1693–97.

Gaywood, Joseph,

In 1712 was at the Dial, near the Savoy Gate, Strand.

Gerrard, Ralph,

A goldsmith, in 1699 residing at the Three Lions, in Lombard Street. Between 1701 and 1706 he appears to have taken a partner, as the firm was then styled Ralph Gerrard and George Newell. They advertised in the London Gazette of October 29, 1702, for a lost note, drawn by Thomas Rowe. They subsequently removed to the Fox, in Lombard Street; after which we lose all trace of them.

Gibbes, William,

Goldsmith, of Aldersgate Ward Within, appeared in the list of the inhabitants of that ward, in 1640, who were able to contribute towards raising a loan of £200,000 for the use of Charles I.

Gill, Thomas, and Co.,

Bankers, established at 42, Lombard Street, about the year 1810. In 1832 the firm was Thomas and Feltham, and from 1834 to 1865 they were known by the style of Feltham and Co. They removed to Ball Alley in 1859.

Gines, George and William,

Were bankers at the sign of the Rose and Crown, in Lombard Street. The first mention of them is on an old cheque of 1754, and the next in the London Directory for the year 1759. In 1770 the Rose and Crown was numbered 50, Lombard Street, and the style of the firm was Gines and Atkinson. They do not appear in the list of bankers after the year 1781.

From about 1714-32 there was a Richard Gines, a goldsmith and plate-worker, who had his shop in Lombard Street. He probably was the forerunner of this business.

Gladwin, Thomas,

Goldsmith, 1719, at Y^o Spotted Dog, in Lombard Street.

Glanfeild, Francis,

Goldsmith, circa 1597, of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Glegg and Vere, 1733. (See NIGHTINGALE.)Glenton, Thomas,

Goldsmith, 1541, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Gloucester, William of,

Was the "King's Goldsmith," Keeper of the Dies, and Master of the Mint in 1298. He made a silver image to be set up on the tomb of Catharine, daughter of Henry III., for which he was paid sixty and ten marks.

Gloucestre, Henry de,

Goldsmith. By his will, dated November 30, 1332, we find that he died possessed of several houses in the parishes of St. Elena (St. Helen's), St. Vedast, St. Michael atte Corne, etc. He left money for the good of his own soul, and for that of other members of his family, for a term of twelve years; likewise bequests to his children ("Calendar of Wills, Court of Husting, London").

Gloucestre, Richard de,

Moneyer, circa 1314, lived in Tower Street.

Gloucestre, Robert de,

Goldsmith, circa 1308.

Glover, Edwards, Embury, Cross, Benbow, and Sandeman,

Established themselves as bankers at 79, Lombard Street, in 1791. Their career was a very short one, as they failed in 1794-5.

Mr. Henry B. Hyde (late General Manager of the National Bank of Liverpool) has favoured me with the sight of a couple of bills drawn upon this firm; one by Messrs. Burman, Glover, Haynes, and Smith, bankers of Stratford-upon-Avon, and another by Cross, Fry, and Co. of Bristol.

Glyn, Henry.

The only record we have of this goldsmith is not very reputable. It is as follows:—"In 1559, on Shrove Tuesday, the wife of Henry Glyn, goldsmith, was carted about London, for being bawd to her own daughter." The punishment for this disgusting offence was to be driven round the parish in a cart, with a paper setting forth the full particulars of the crime pinned to the dress.

Glyn, Mills, and Co.

This firm, which has the reputation of having a larger business than any other private banking-house in the City of London, appears to have commenced at 14, Lombard Street (so far as can be told by the London Directory), between the years 1740 and 1754, the precise date being difficult to ascertain in consequence of no list of bankers being forthcoming for the interval between those two dates. The style of the firm in 1754 was Vere, Glyn, and Hallifax.

There is little doubt but that the firms of Vere, Glyn, and Co., and Vere, Asgill, and Co. had a common origin and were started by Mr. Joseph Vere,* and that between 1752 and 1754 a dissolution took place in the partnership, as we find upon a cash-note of Messrs. Samuel Child and Co., of September, 1752, the following endorsement: "J. Meredith," witness T. Huck for Messrs. Vere, Asgill, and Co.; and upon a similar note of Child and Backwells, in February, 1754: "Robt. Carr," witness T. Huck for Messrs. Vere, Glyn, and Co. The latter firm moved to Birch Lane, whereas Asgill and Co. remained in Lombard Street. In 1754 Henry Mitton witnessed signatures for the firm, and he was subsequently admitted into the partnership.

In 1770 their house in Birch Lane was numbered 18; and the firm consisted of Sir Richard Glyn, knight and baronet, M.P. for the City of London, Alderman of Dowgate Ward, and a colonel of the City Militia (he was Sheriff in 1752, and Lord Mayor in 1758); and Thomas Hallifax, who was Alderman of Aldersgate Ward. Sir Thomas Hallifax, it may be noted, was a native of Barnsley, and was apprenticed to a grocer in that town, but came to London and became a partner in this firm. He was Lord Mayor in 1776–7, and died in 1789. In 1773 Sir Richard Glyn died, and Sir Thomas Hallifax assumed three partners; the firm in that year consisting of Sir Thomas Hallifax, Mills, R. C. Glyn, and Mitton. The next change to be noted was in 1777, when Mr. Charles Mills came into the firm as fourth partner. In 1783 or 1784 Mr. Mills senior's name disappeared from the firm, which became Sir Thomas Hallifax, Richard Carr Glyn, Charles Mills, and Henry Mitton. In 1789 the name of Sir Thomas Hallifax is not seen, and the business was conducted at 12, Birch Lane, by R. C. Glyn, Mills, and Mitton. About 1790, according to the Directory, Richard Carr Glyn was knighted, when he served the office of Sheriff; he was Lord Mayor in 1798. In 1797 the firm was Glyn, Mills, Hallifax, and Co., and it continued until 1811, when the style of the firm became Glyn, Mills, Hallifax, Glyn, and Co.; so continuing until 1823, when another Mr. Mills came into it. In 1826 they moved to their present premises, No. 67, Lombard Street, which house belonged to the Goldsmiths' Company, having been left to them by Sir Martin Bowes, the eminent goldsmith in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, in whose time it was known by the sign of the White Lion, and after the Great Fire of 1666, as the Blue Anchor. Messrs. Glyn, Mills, and Co. have recently purchased the house at an enormous figure.

The style of the firm was again altered in 1830 to Sir R. C. Glyn, Hallifax, Mills, and Co., consisting of Thomas Hallifax, Charles Mills, Sir Richard C. Glyn, Bart., George Carr Glyn, Thomas Hallifax, jun., and Edward Wheler Mills. In 1851 it became Glyn, Mills, and Co., which it continued to be until 1864, when they amalgamated with the old firm of Curries and Co., of Cornhill, since which time the style of the firm has been Glyn, Mills, Currie, and Co.

In 1869 Sir George Carr Glyn was created a peer under the title of Baron Wolverton. The present Lord Wolverton succeeded to the title in 1888.

This firm was converted, in January, 1885, into a joint-stock company, with unlimited liability. They have a paid-up capital of £1,000,000, and a reserve fund of £500,000, and publish a balance sheet half-yearly.

The bank premises are very extensive, occupying the whole frontage from Birch Lane to the passage leading to Change Alley. The names of the signs of the different houses, the sites of which are included in their house, are (commencing with Birch Lane) the Black Bull, the house at the corner of Birch Lane, formerly occupied by Overend and Co.; the Cat and Fiddle; the Black Lion; the Spread Eagle; and the Blue Anchor, which is the sign of No. 67, and therefore the sign of the house. The Salutation Tavern also formed a portion of the site, having been in the rear of the Black Lion.

* A Joseph Vere was clerk to Thomas Martin and Co. in 1719.

The firm consists of the following partners—

Gold, Thomas,

Goldsmith, 1693, in Lombard Street.

Goldsmiths.

Mr. Lawson says, in his "History of Banking," that the private bankers of whom we have the earliest cognizance were in a very different position from that occupied by their representatives of the present day. The first were Jews, aliens in blood and religion; contemned, hated, feared, and despised; who were made victims of more barbarous cruelties and oppressions than any other people whatever. They were originally introduced into England by William the Conqueror. They invented bills of exchange, and their industry and frugality caused them to accumulate vast sums of treasure, which they lent out at high interest to the nobility and others upon the security of their estates.

The Jews continued to be robbed and ill-treated under a succession of sovereigns until their oppression culminated in the reign of Edward I., who robbed 15,000 Jews of their wealth, and banished them all.

The Lombards, or Longobards, came from Italy and succeeded the Jews. They combined the several occupations of goldsmith, pawnbroker, and banker. Stow, describing the streets in the vicinity of the present buildings of the Bank and Royal Exchange, says: "Then have ye Lombard Street, so called of the Longobards and other merchants, strangers of divers nations, assembling there twice every day, of what original or continuance I have not read of record, more than that Edward II., in the twelfth year of his reign, confirmed a messuage sometime belonging to Robert Turke, abutting on Lombard Street toward the south, and toward Cornhill on the north, for the merchants of Florence: which proveth that street to have had the name of Lombard Street before the reign of Edward II."

In the days of Elizabeth the majority of the goldsmiths lived in Chepe; after the Great Fire of London they removed to Lombard Street.

The Court Book of the Goldsmiths' Company for January 1, 1566, in giving the list of the goldsmiths for that year, with their places of abode, shows that out of one hundred and seven, no fewer than seventy-six resided in Chepe, the remaining thirty-one in "Lumberde Streete." On July 1, 1569, there were only eighty-nine goldsmiths, of which number sixty-eight lived in Chepe, against twenty-one who were in "Lumberde Streete."

In 1677 there were thirty-seven goldsmiths keeping running-cashes, resident in Lombard Street. Now there are only twenty-five banks in that street, nine of which are private firms, and sixteen joint-stock banks.

Mr. H. D. Macleod, in his "Theory and Practice of Banking," gives the following definition of the word "bank":—

"It is popularly supposed that the word bank comes from the Italian banco, a bench, or table, because the money-dealers, or money-changers, kept their money piled on benches or tables, whence they were called banchieri. It is also said that when they failed their bench was broken up (banco rotto); hence our bankrupt."

"Nevertheless, there can be no possible doubt but that this derivation is a pure delusion. In the first place, the money-dealers, or money-changers, as such, were never called banchieri in the Middle Ages. They were called Cambiatores, Speciarii, Campsores, Argentarii, Nummularii, Trapezitæ; and those who lent money were also called Danistæ, Collybistæ, and Mutuatores, but not banchieri; and their places of business were called casane and banchi.

"We shall show what the real meaning of 'bank' is, not only in Italian, but as it was understood in English when it was first used, as applied to money dealing.

"Muratori himself says that the Indian banca, or banco, is derived from the Gothic or Scandinavian band, a heap or mound. The true original meaning of banco is a heap or mound; and this word was metaphorically applied to a common fund, or joint stock, formed by the contributions of a multitude of persons.

"As is explained in a subsequent chapter, the State of Venice, being hard pressed in war in 1171, levied a forced loan from its citizens, and promised them interest in perpetuity at 4 per cent.; and this loan, or public debt, was called a banco, or monte. Certain commissioners were appointed to manage the loan who were called the Camera degli Imprestiti, or Chamber of Loans; and their office, where the interest was paid and the stock was transferred, was also called banco or monte. The 'Bank' of Venice was, therefore, nothing but a public debt, managed by Commissioners. Two subsequent loans were made, called Monte Nuovo and Monte Nuovissimo, of the same nature; and it was not till 1587 that these commissioners were appointed to receive public cash on deposit, and became what we call a bank. There is no doubt whatever that the words monte and banco are equivalent in Italian, and were first applied to a public debt, and then afterwards to the office in which it was managed."

Mr. Macleod further adds that the word "bank" means a general contribution received from the public, in exchange for which credit is created, and that the business of a "banker" is to create credit. Charles I., with the weak idea of improving the approach to St. Paul's, determined to clear Cheapside of all but the goldsmiths, those who refused to remove being cast into prison. On November 16, 1634, the following proclamation was issued: "Whereas in Goldsmith's Row, in Cheapside and in Lombard Street, divers shops are held by persons of other trades, whereby that uniform show which was an ornament to those places and a lustre to the City is now greatly diminished, all the shops in Goldsmiths' Row are to be occupied by none but goldsmiths; and all goldsmiths who keep shops in other parts of the City are to resort thither or to Lombard Street or Cheapside." Again, in 1637, the King issued another equally tyrannical order threatening the Lord Mayor and Aldermen with imprisonment if they did not at once enforce his command, that all shops should be shut up in Cheapside and Lombard Street, save those that were goldsmiths' shops.

It was about the year 1645 that the London goldsmiths first began to act as bankers. They received moneys and rents from their customers, to whom they gave some interest for the use of the same. They also lent money on pawns, and issued notes.

When Charles I. was refused a loan by the City of London, he was advised by his ministers to seize upon the money that had been deposited in the Royal Mint, in the Tower of London, by the Lombards and goldsmiths, amounting in all to the sum of £200,000; which operation was the cause of ruin to many. The goldsmiths had up to that time been in the habit of placing their money there for security; but henceforth they were forced to keep it in their own shops, and to lend it out to customers at interest. After this shameful robbery by the King of the goldsmiths' money, it is not surprising that the Goldsmiths' Company should have subscribed cash and men to help Cromwell in the Civil Wars.

During the Commonwealth the number of goldsmiths increased considerably ; and they then received moneys of noblemen and gentlemen who deposited their surplus cash with them for safe custody. The goldsmiths usually issued receipts or cash-notes for the same, payable on demand ; and these receipts passed from hand to hand and were called goldsmiths' notes. A customer wishing to withdraw any sum would draw a note or draft payable to his own or some one else's order ; and this was the origin of cheques.

Charles II. being distressed for money (with him not an unusual circumstance), and unwilling to apply to the House of Commons, summoned his ministers for the purpose of taking counsel as to the best way of obtaining the sum of £1,500,000 without the aid of Parliament ; and, by way of stimulating their ingenuity, he promised the office of Lord Treasurer to any one who could suggest the means.

After the Restoration the goldsmiths were in the habit of depositing in the Exchequer their floating capital, such as they did not require for their business, for the use of which the King gave them high interest, as much as 10 per cent. ; and by private contracts on many bills, orders, tallies, pawned to them by the Government, and by debts of the King, they got as much as 20 per cent., and sometimes even in excess of that rate, to the great dishonour of the Government.

Lord Ashley had unguardedly communicated to Sir Thomas Clifford the expedient of shutting up the Exchequer and seizing these accumulations. Sir Thomas instantly went before the King, informing his Majesty that he had hit on a good notion. "Odd's fish !" cried his Majesty, " I will be as good as my word, if you can find the money." Sir Thomas then informed the King that the bankers had £1,500,000 in the Exchequer, which money he could obtain by the simple process of shutting it up. Accordingly on January 2, 1672, the Exchequer was closed, and all payments to the bankers were suspended ; this novel mode of relieving the royal necessities causing ruin, not only to most of the goldsmiths, but likewise to many of their customers. The exact amount of money in the Exchequer at that time was £1,328,526. As a reward for this robbery, Sir Thomas Clifford was made Lord High Treasurer, and raised to the peerage.

The King originally designed to close the Exchequer for only one year ; but year after year passed, and neither principal nor interest was returned. Public indignation rose to such a height at this injustice that on April 16, 1677, just five years after the seizure, the King caused letters patent to be granted to each of those goldsmiths who had entrusted their money to the Exchequer, covenanting to pay interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum. The obligation was observed up to Lady Day, 1683, when it ceased ; and by James II. it was utterly ignored. In the reign of William III. a great stir was made, and the bankers not only lost all their interest, but in the end were paid only half of their original debt. It was the first item with which the National Debt was charged, and it ultimately became a part of the celebrated South Sea Fund.

These old goldsmiths, besides doing ordinary bankers' and goldsmiths' business, advanced money upon pledges, as the pawnbrokers do now. In the early ledgers of Edward Backwell and of Blanchard and Child, accounts may be seen headed " Pawnes," to which all interest and profit arising from money lent on pledges, or more marketable security, was placed. In the days of Charles II. they frequently charged as much as 20 and 30 per cent. for money, while they never appear to have allowed more than 6 per cent. on deposit.

Goodere, Edmund, and Thomas Matthews,

Were goldsmiths in 1691, next the Fountain Tavern, in the Strand. Edmund Goodere is described as an esquire.

Goodwin, John,

Goldsmith, 1639, of Lombard Street, was buried in the church of St. Mary Woolnoth in that year.

Gorton, John,

Goldsmith, 1668, at the Queen's Head, near Bedford House, in the Strand. In the London Gazette of October 19 of that year, he offered to pay a reward for the restitution of "a plain gold cup and cover, with a gold salver, all about 45 ounces, having on the side of the cup and in the middle of the salver a coat of arms engraven; the coat of arms being 3 bucks' heads with a coronet on the top and a Flourish, belonging to the R^t Hon. the Earl of Devonshire, together with a coat of arms, belonging to His Grace the Duke of Ormond, and on the top of the cover a snake and a leaf."

Goslings and Sharpe.

This bank is of considerable antiquity. It originated, in common with many others, in a goldsmith's business carried on by one James Chambers, the brother of Abraham Chambers of the Golden Eagle, who is described as of the Three Squirrels, over against St. Dunstan's Church, in Fleet Street, as early as 1684, though the real date is probably earlier. In 1650 we find there was a well-known goldsmith of the name of Pinckney at this house; but in 1671 he is described as of the Golden Dragon, near the Inner Temple Gate; from which we may infer that Chambers was located there soon after. Over the centre window of the present house, No. 19, Fleet Street, the old sign of the Three Squirrels may still be seen in the iron work. The original sign, which is of copper, is preserved in the front shop.

The following remarkable circumstance has been noted, namely, that one family of the name of Chambers bears three squirrels in their arms. Might not this family have adopted this coat from the fact of their being located at the house of that sign? Many of the difficulties I had to contend with, and the errors I fell into in the first edition of this work, have been cleared up and rectified by Mr. Robinson, of 19, Fleet Street, through his having discovered a quantity of old papers and books in the bank relating to the early history of the house, which have enabled me to correct errors and show who the Chambers, Wanleys, and Fowlers were, also to prove that Pinckney's must have been a separate business, as was also that of William Gosling, and likewise that of Chambers and Usborne.

In 1695 an advertisement appeared in the London Gazette, in which Mr. Chambers was to pay a reward of one guinea for the recovery of some writings left in a hackney coach. In 1706 we find, by endorsements to bank notes, that George Wanley witnessed his signature. In 1707 the same was witnessed by George Cradock. According to an advertisement in the Daily Courant, January 26, 1714, the firm was Chambers and Wanley, as they advertised for some Exchequer bills lost. From 1713 to 1720 the style of the firm appeared to be George Wanley and Cradock—James Rocke signed for them. From the books in Messrs. Gosling's possession it appears that in 1723 the firm was Abraham Fowler and Rocke; in 1728 James Sympson or Simpson (spelt both ways) was taken into partnership. [It was announced in the Daily Journal, June 13, 1732, that "on Sunday between 9-10 in the evening, Mr. Simpson, a banker in Fleet Street, going with another gentlemen in a Hackney coach to Tottenham, were set upon by a single highwayman by the pond on Stamford Hill, who took from them a gold and silver watch and what money they had."] The style of the firm was Abr. Fowler and Co. until 1735, when it became Rocke and Co. From 1739 to 1741 it was James Simpson and Ward; in 1742 Ward and Gosling; in 1743 Gosling and Bennet; in 1750 and 1752 Gosling and Bennet, described of the Three Golden Squirrels. In 1755 the signature of the firm was witnessed by Mr. Benjamin Sharpe. In 1764 the firm was Francis Gosling, Robert Gosling, and G. Clive; in 1781 Gosling, Clive, and Gosling; in 1789 Robert, Francis, and William Gosling; in 1796 it was Francis Gosling, William Gosling, and Benjamin Sharpe; and the firm has ever since that date been styled Messrs. Goslings and Sharpe.

It would appear that George Wanley was an antiquary, as it is recorded by Peter Cunningham, in his "Handbook of London," that, in 1707, Wanley and Le Neve met at the Young Devil Tavern, adjoining Dick's in Fleet Street, and originated, or gave the first impulse to the formation of, the Society of Antiquaries.*

In St. Dunstan's Church, in Fleet Street, is a monumental inscription to the memory of James Chambers, Esq., citizen and goldsmith, formerly an eminent banker of this parish, who died for Sheriff of London, anno 1730: "A man courteous to his neighbours, Hearty to his Friends, and singularly just to Every Body, very beneficent to his Relations, to whom he parted with upwards of £20,000 in his lifetime. Ob. Sept. 27, 1733, aged 68 years."

"In the same vault lies also interr'd his nephew Abraham Chambers, Senior, Citizen and Goldsmith. A man every way valuable in Life, a loving Husband, a Tender Father, and a sincere Friend. Ob. May 9, 1731, æt. 51.

"To the memory of whom in a gratefull acknowledgment this monument was Erected by their sole Executor, Abraham Chambers."

In my former edition the name of William Gostling was mentioned as probably belonging to this firm. It is now supposed that he had nothing to do with them; he is therefore described under a separate heading.

I have been favoured by Dr. Brace, of Stepney Manor Office, Old Jewry Chambers, with a short pedigree of the Chambers family, which will be found in the appendix. It will there be seen that the two brothers, Abraham and James, were both goldsmiths, carrying on their respective trades in separate houses in Fleet Street.

The firm of Messrs. Goslings and Sharpe consists of the following partners:—

Francis Gosling.
William Cunliffe Gosling.
Herbert Gosling.
John Charles Sharpe.

Gostling, William,

Was a goldsmith of Fleet Street. As early as 1674 his name has been met with. He must have been in business many years at this time.

"The name of Gosling," says Mr. Noble in his "Memorials of Temple Bar," "first became associated with the firm in 1674, for among numerous records of the Secret Service moneys expended in the time of Charles II. and James II., occurs this entry:—

"To Richard Bokenham in full for several parcells of gold and silver lace bought of Wm. Gostling and partners on May 2, 1674, by the Dutchess of Cleaveland for the wedding cloaths of the Lady Sussex and Litchfield, £646 8s. 6d."

"Now this William Gosling was subsequently knighted, and became Alderman of the Ward, 1684 (when he was Sheriff) to 1686. And his descendant, Francis (also knighted), was originally a bookseller, succeeding 'R. Gosling' at the Mitre and Crown, opposite St. Dunstan's Church, who flourished between 1714 and 1740. It was Sir Francis Gosling who was bookseller to Browne Willis, the author of 'The Survey of the English Cathedrals,' who, having left off bookselling in 1756, was elected Alderman, became Sheriff in 1758, and died at Fulham, 29th December, 1768, before he had reached the Mayoralty."

I do not think that the William Gostling above-mentioned had anything to do with the present house of the Three Squirrels, but hold that he was a goldsmith and bookseller, and finally bookseller only. The name Gosling first appeared at the Three Squirrels in 1742, the style of the banking firm then being Ward and Gosling.

* On November 20, 1728, John Sawbridge, Esq., was married to — Wanley, daughter of Mr. George Wanley, an eminent banker in Fleet Street ("Historical Register").

Gould, Samuel,

Banker, 1733, described in the Daily Journal for February 23 in that year as late of Cornhill, gave notice to all persons indebted to him to pay their debts to Messrs. R. Dyer and Thomas Jackson, "or they will be sued." He was a bankrupt.

Gould, Thomas,

Banker, of Cornhill. All that is known of him is gathered from the London Gazette, May 6, 1735, wherein he is described as a bankrupt, and his creditors are desired to meet the assignees at the White Lion Tavern, in Cornhill.

Gravatt, Richard,

Was a banker carrying on business at 51, Fleet Street, in 1770. His career was of short duration, as his name does not appear in the Directory after 1778.

Green and Amber, 1745. (See HORN AND KILLMAINE.)Green, Nathaniel,

A goldsmith, 1696, at the Black Lyon, in Leicester Fields (now Leicester Square). In that year he offered a reward of £10 for some silver plate stolen from the house of the Duke of Ormond.

Greene and Co., 1718-42. (See WILLIS.)Greene, Edward,

Goldsmith, of St. Botolph'. His name is found in the list of the inhabitants of Aldersgate Ward, in 1640, who were able to contribute towards raising a loan of £200,000 for the service of the King.

Greene, Edward,

Goldsmith, circa 1586, of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Greene, Thomas,

Goldsmith of London, apprehended for treason. In an inventory of his goods, etc., May, 1576 ("Exchequer Special Commission"), it is mentioned that he had, amongst other things, geldings in keeping of Mr. Richard Martyn, a goldsmith. Greene was convicted of "diminishing her Majesties coigne;" and in July, 1576, he is spoken of as "lately executed." But in the Newgate Chronicle it is stated that on May 30, 1584, he was drawn from Newgate to Tyburn, and there hanged, headed, and quartered, for clipping of coin, both gold and silver.

His ready money, plate, jewels, etc., in London was valued at £532 9s. 11 $\frac{3}{4}$ d., and bonds were found in his house to the value of £1530 17s. 9d. This was a considerable sum for those days, and he must have been fairly well off, which makes it difficult for us to understand why he should have risked his life for the small sums he could have gained by clipping the coins.

Greete, Edmond,

Goldsmith, circa 1580, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Gregory, Barnaby,

Goldsmith, circa 1602, of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Gresham, Sir Richard,

Was King's Exchanger, and agent for Henry VIII. at Antwerp in 1534. In consequence of the great inconvenience merchants were exposed to by being out of doors in all weathers, he formed a great desire to erect a Bourse, or Exchange, in Lombard Street. In 1537 he submitted to Cromwell, the Lord Privy Seal, his designs for a building, to be after the plan of the Exchange at Antwerp; but his plans were not adopted. He was Lord Mayor in 1537, John Gresham being Sheriff; and in that year he made another attempt in the same direction, referring to the design that he had submitted in the previous year, specifying certain houses which he proposed the Mayor and Corporation should acquire under compulsory powers. This great scheme was, however, left for his son to accomplish.

Sir Richard Gresham, although a mercer, occasionally did transact the business of a goldsmith, as the following will show. When Anne of Cleves came to England as the fourth bride of Henry VIII., in 1539, the following payment is recorded :—

"To Sir Richerde Gressham for a cheyne of fyne golde whiche was given to a gent that came from the Duke of Baryer, £100 13. 9."

He died in 1556.

Gresham, Sir Thomas,

A goldsmith and merchant of great renown in the time of Elizabeth, carried on business at the sign of the Grasshopper, in Lombard Street,—upon the site of the present bank of Messrs. Martin and Co., 68, Lombard Street, who have always had the same sign, and claim that their business dates back to the time of Gresham.

Sir Thomas Gresham's father, Sir Richard Gresham, was the King's Exchanger in the reign of Henry VIII., by whom he was greatly esteemed. Sir Thomas succeeded his father in this office, but was superseded by Queen Mary on her accession to the throne. He was, however, afterwards restored.

He is said to have been one of the earliest merchants who traded to the East Indies, by which ventures he accumulated vast riches. Lawson, in his "History of Banking," states that upon one occasion, having sent ships out to the East Indies, he had miscalculated the date at which they would return—a circumstance that caused him much embarrassment. He, however, soon recovered from his temporary inconvenience. One day, while walking despondingly about the Bourse, or Exchange, which was then held in Lombard Street, a sailor presented him with a letter from the captain of one of his ships, which contained the gratifying information that two of them had arrived safe from the East Indies, and that the box which the bearer would deliver contained some diamonds and pearls of great value—a sample of the riches the ships had brought home.

He had a private house of great magnificence in Bishopsgate Street, which was afterwards known as Gresham College.

Upon reference to Lysons's "Environs of London," it will be seen that "between 1557 and 1570 Heston and Osterley came into the possession of Sir Thomas Gresham, and the Park was enclosed by him. After he had enclosed the Park at Osterley, he began to re-build the Manor House, but it was not completed until 1577. In the park is a fair heronrie."

In 1578 Queen Elizabeth visited Osterley, when Sir Thomas Gresham entertained her Majesty in a very magnificent manner. There is a tradition that Queen Elizabeth admired the house and park very much, with the single exception of a walled courtyard. When the Queen had retired for the night, Sir Thomas Gresham procured all the men he could, and set them to work and demolished it. On her Majesty's reappearance in the morning, she was much gratified at seeing the improvement Sir Thomas had made at her suggestion. Towards the end of the seventeenth century, Osterley Park came into the possession of Sir Francis Child, whose descendant on the female side (the Earl of Jersey) still possesses it.

Sir Thomas Gresham founded the Royal Exchange, of which the first stone was laid on June 7, 1566; the building being opened by Queen Elizabeth in person on January 23, 1571. The following account of the ceremony is given by Stow :—

"The Queen's Majesty, attended with her nobility, came from her house at the Strand, called Somerset House, and entered the City by Temple Bar, through Fleet Street, Cheap, and so by the north side of the bourse, through Threadneedle Street, to Sir Thomas Gresham's house in Bishopsgate Street, where she dined. After dinner Her Majesty returned through Cornhill, entered the bourse on the south side, and after that she had viewed every part thereof above the ground, especially the pawn, which was richly furnished with all sorts of the finest wares in the City, she caused the same bourse, by a herald and trumpet, to be proclaimed 'The Royal Exchange,' and so to be called from thenceforth, and not otherwise."

This building was destroyed by the Great Fire of 1666.

Sir Thomas Gresham likewise founded Gresham College, which he endowed with six professorships, viz. Divinity, Law, Physic, Philosophy, Astronomy, and Music, with £50 a year to each, for the purpose of giving gratuitous lectures on these sciences to the citizens of London for ever. They are delivered in Latin and in English to the present day in Basinghall Street.

To Gresham we owe the abolition of loans from foreign states. By his counsel Elizabeth was induced, when a loan was necessary, "not to use strangers, but her own subjects, that it might be seen what a prince of power she was." According to Mr. Francis, "her first applications to the citizens were not met with sufficient alacrity to please the imperious Queen. She who could imprison a favourite for life, or send a rival to the block, was checked by her plebeian but wealthy subjects. The pride of Henry VIII. had descended with his Crown to his daughter, and she caused it to be intimated to the unwilling merchants that to borrow their money was a matter of great grace and favour."

As much as 12 and 14 per cent. was paid for the accommodation of money in this reign.

I extract from Lawson's "History of Banking" the following singular anecdote related of this princely merchant:—

"The Spanish Ambassador to the English Court having extolled the great riches of the King, his master, and of the grandees of his kingdom before Queen Elizabeth, Sir Thomas, who was present, told him that the Queen had subjects who, at one meal, expended not only as much as the daily revenues of his King, but also of all his grandees, and added, 'This I will prove any day, and lay you a considerable sum on the result.' The Spanish ambassador soon after came unawares to the house of Sir Thomas, and dined with him; when, finding only an ordinary meal, he said, 'Well, sir, you have lost your wager.' 'Not at all,' replied Sir Thomas; 'and this you shall presently see.' He then pulled out a box from his pocket, and, taking one of the largest and finest eastern pearls out of it, exhibited it to the Ambassador; after which he ground it, and drank the powder of it in a glass of wine, to the health of the Queen, his mistress. 'My Lord Ambassador,' said Sir Thomas, 'you know I have often refused £15,000 for that pearl. Have I lost or won?' 'I yield the wager as lost,' said the Ambassador; 'and I do not think there are four subjects in the world that would do as much for their sovereign.'"

At his death, which took place on November 21, 1579, the bulk of his wealth was found to consist of gold chains. He was buried in St. Helen's Church, Bishopsgate. The inscription on the stone is—

"Sir Thomas Gresham, Knight, buried 15th December, 1579."

Finally, it has to be recorded that to Sir Thomas Gresham we owe the introduction of the orange into England.

Haies,

A banker in London in the time of Charles II. Nothing can be ascertained as to the Christian name or place of residence of this man. In the "History of His Own Time," Bishop Burnet records his trial for high treason, and I propose to give it in extenso, it being of an interesting nature. It would appear that he was supposed to have been implicated with some of the conspirators in the Rye House Plot. It runs thus :—"In Armstrong's * pocket, when he was taken, a letter was found written by Haies, a banker in London, directed to another name, which was believed a feigned one. In it credit was given him upon Haies's correspondent in Holland for money; he was desired not to be too lavish, and he was promised that he should be supplied as he needed it. Here was an abetting of a man outlawed for treason. Much pains was taken on Haies, both by persuasion and threatening, to induce him to discover that whole cabal of men, that, it seemed, joined in a common purse to supply those who had fled beyond sea on account of the plot. And they hoped to know all Monmouth's friends, and either to have attainted them, or at least to have fined them severely for it. But Haies showed a fidelity and courage far beyond what could have been expected from such a man, so he was brought to trial.

"He made a strong defence. The letter was not exactly like his hand. It was not addressed to Armstrong, but to another person, from whom he perhaps had it. No entry was made of it in his books, nor of any sum paid in upon it. But his main defence was, that a banker examined into no person's concerns, and therefore, when money or good security was brought him, he gave bills of exchange, or letters of credit, as they were desired. Jeffreys pressed the jury, in his impetuous way, to find Haies guilty of high treason; because, though there was not a witness against Haies, but only presumptions appeared upon the proof, yet, Jeffreys said, it was proved by two witnesses that the letter was found in Armstrong's pocket, and that was sufficient, the rest appearing by circumstances. The little difference between the writing in the letter and his ordinary hand was said to be only a feint to hide it, which made him the more guilty. He required the jury to bring him in guilty, and said that the King's life and safety depended upon his trial; so that, if they did it not, they exposed the King to a new Rye-plot, with other extravagancies with which his fury prompted him. But a jury of merchants could not be wrought up to this pitch. So he was acquitted, which mortified the Court a little, for they had reckoned that now juries were to be only a point of form in a trial, and that they were always to find hills as they were directed."

The name of Haies does not appear in the list of goldsmiths who kept running-cashes; but in the Directory of a collection of the merchants living in and about the City of London in 1677, the following names are found :—

Claud Hayes, Fanchurch Street; John Hayes, Little St. Hellens; James and Joseph Hayes, Gracechurch Street.

* Sir Thomas Armstrong was hanged at Tyburn on June 20, 1684, for his connexion with the Rye House Plot. His head was set up on Temple Bar.

Halgefورد, John de,

Goldsmith, 1308, of the parish of Holy Trinity the Less. He left forty pence to the Abbey of Westminster ("Calendar of Wills, Court of Husting, London").

Hall, John,

Goldsmith, circa 1626, of St. Clement Danes.

Hall, William,

Of London, goldsmith. Where his shop was has baffled all inquiry. All that is known of him is that Francis Child, afterwards of Y^e Marygold, was apprenticed to him in 1656, for eight years.

Halle, Mathew,

A goldsmith. From Inquisition p.m., October 25, 4 Edward IV., we learn that Mathew Halle, late citizen and goldsmith of London, held four messuages, which were late John Godeman's otherwise called Fraunceys, late citizen and goldsmith of London, in the parish of St. Vedast, London, from the gift of Elizabeth Godeman or Fraunceys and Thomas Popelton, late citizen and goldsmith, of the annual value of £8. Halle also held another messuage in the parish of St. Vedast, worth 43*s.* 1*d.* He died October 20, 3 Edward IV. (circa 1463), leaving daughters—Margaret, who became the wife of Richard Galyon, citizen and goldsmith; Katherine, and Joan—who were his joint heirs.

Hallett and Co.,

14, Great George Street, Westminster. This business, consisting of banking and navy agency, was established at the above address about 1822 by Messrs. John and Thomas Maude and Charles W. Hallett. About 1825 the firm disappeared from the list of bankers; but it is to be found again in 1854 under the style of Hallett, Robinson, and Co. In 1858 it became Hallett, Maude, and Hallett, and Maude and Hallett in 1862; in which year they amalgamated with a navy agent of the name of Ommaney, and the style of the firm was changed to Hallett, Ommaney, and Co. They do not appear in the Directory after 1866, when they ceased to exist as bankers; but the navy agency is still continued at 7, St. Martin's Place, under the style of Hallett and Co.

Hallett, George,

Goldsmith, 1682, corner of Buckingham Street, Strand.

Hallett, James,

Goldsmith, 1690-1700, at the Angel, in Cheapside.

Halliday and Co.

The first mention of this firm is in 1770, when the London Directory shows that Halliday, Flight, Halliday, and Co. were at 34, Lombard Street. On reference to the same source of information, I find that in 1776 they had moved to 3, Freeman's Court, Cornhill, and the style of the firm had become Halliday, Duntze, Praed, and Co. It is a singular coincidence that in this year, when the well-known banking name of Praed first appeared in the London Directory, there should be two of that name in two separate firms; one in Halliday's, and the other in partnership with Biddulph and Co. In 1781 that name disappears from Halliday's, which had become Halliday, Duntze, Saunders, and Hamilton. They became extinct after 1782.

Hallifax and Co., 1774-88. (See GLYN.)Halsted, John,

Goldsmith, circa 1587, of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West.

Halsted, Robert, 1676-1703,

A goldsmith, at the Crown and Dial, in Fleet Street. His name appeared in 1676, offering a reward for a grizzly gray gelding lost. He cannot be traced after 1703.

Hamersley, Hugh,

At the Three Cups, near Somerset House, in the Strand, 1685.

Hamersley, Richard,

At the Sun and Marygold, near Somerset House, Strand, 1694. He was a bankrupt in 1695. It is most probable that these businesses were the same, with only the sign changed.

Hammersley and Co.

Mt. Thomas Hammersley, originally a clerk in Messrs. Herries' bank, was one of the original partners in the firm of Ransom, Morland, and Hammersley, who started banking business at 57, Pall Mall, in 1786.

In 1796 he retired from that firm to establish a bank of his own at 76, Pall Mall. The style of the firm was Hammersley, Montolieu, Brooksbank, Greenwood, and Drewe. In 1806 it became Hammersley, Greenwood, Drewe, and Brooksbank, and in 1823 they moved to 69, Pall Mall, the style of the firm becoming Hammersley, Greenwood, and Brooksbank. They stopped payment September 20, 1840, when their deposits amounted to £650,000, owing to the death of Hugh Hammersley, the sole partner. This business was absorbed by Messrs. Coutts and Co., who took on all the clerks, to whom they behaved very generously, pensioning off some of the old ones. The affairs were placed in Chancery, and the estate only yielded ten shillings in the pound.

In 1842 the London Joint-Stock Bank opened a branch on these premises.

Hammond, William. (See ATWELL.)Hanbury and Co.

Established about 1779 by Messrs. Hanbury, Taylor, Lloyd, and Bowman, at 14, Lombard Street. In 1779 they moved to 60, Lombard Street, the sign of which house was the King's Head and Phoenix, where Kiborne and Capill were doing business as goldsmiths in 1677. In 1784 the name of Hanbury disappeared from the firm, and it became Taylor, Lloyd, and Bowman. In 1791 it was Taylor, Lloyd, Hanbury, and Co.; in 1801, Taylor, Lloyd, Hanbury, and Bowman. In 1815 another change took place in the style of the firm, the Directory for 1816 recording it as Hanbury, Taylor, and Lloyd. In 1858 it was Hanbury and Lloyd, which continued to be the style until 1864, when it was amalgamated with Barnett, Hoare, and Co.

Mr. Samuel Hoare informs me that the Hanburys are one of the oldest Essex families, their residence at Holfield Grange extending over three hundred years.

The Hanburys, circa 1740, were tobacco-brokers in Great Tower Street.

mitted, and a reward was offered by Captain Samuel Hankey, goldsmith, at the Ring, under St. Dionis Backchurch, in Fanchurch Street.

Mr. Thomas Hankey, of Chester Square, the senior surviving member of the firm of Hankey and Co., informs me that he does not know the actual date of the establishment of this banking-house, but he had frequently seen an old cash-book of daily receipts and payments dated (he believed) 1693. That they were originally goldsmiths there is no doubt; and they probably were also pawnbrokers, as most goldsmiths of that period embraced that profitable business in their trade. On reference to the "Royal Annual Kalendar" of 1765, it will be seen that Sir Joseph and Sir Thomas Hankey were at the sign of the Three Golden Balls, in Fenchurch Steeet,—a sign very suggestive of their origin and descent from the early Longobards.

The sign of the house was commonly known as the Golden Ball in Fenchurch Street, and Mr. Thomas Hankey states that he has always been led to believe that his predecessors were goldsmiths at a shop nearly opposite No. 7, Fenchurch Street, and that the house was established as a "bank" about the same time as Child's.

In an advertisement in the London Gazette of January 8, 1701, for some ships' papers lost, we see that Henry Hankey, goldsmith, was at the Ring and Ball in Fenchurch Street. This may have been the shop referred to as being opposite No. 7.

The name appears as an endorsement on a draft drawn by Silvanus Bevan on Child's, dated September 25, 1704: "Witness Jeffery Viber for my masters Henry Hankey and Co.;" and several more documents show the same style of the firm up to 1735. On another draft, dated 1722, Thomas Hankey witnesses a signature for his father, Henry Hankey. The London Gazette, March 23, 1723, states that "a very fine onyx is to be sold, found under the ruins of an ancient structure, supposed to be hundreds of years old. Apply to Mr. Henry Hankey, Goldsmith, Fenchurch Street." About 1732 he was knighted, as in that year the firm was Sir Henry Hankey and Sons. In 1737 it was Joseph Hankey, Esq., and Co. He also was subsequently knighted, as evidenced by the fact that from 1739 to 1768 the style of the firm was Sir Joseph Hankey and Co. In the latter year the partners were Sir Joseph Hankey, Sir Thomas Hankey, Joseph Chaplin Hankey, Thomas Hankey, and Stephen Hall. Sir Joseph Hankey, who was Alderman of Langbourne Ward in 1737, died in 1769. In 1774 Joseph Chaplin Hankey was the head partner; and in 1778 Thomas Hankey filled that position, which he maintained until 1793, when he died. In 1794 the firm consisted of J. C. Hankey, Stephen Hall, Robert Hankey, Richard Hankey, Augustus Hankey, and Co.

In 1805 it was styled Hankey, Hall, Hankey, and Alers; and from 1812 to 1865 it was known by the style of Hankeys and Co. No amalgamation with any other firm ever took place until 1865, when the old and time-honoured firm of Hankeys and Co. merged into the Consolidated Bank, which had started only the year before.

The British Chronicle for June 16, 1775, gives the following curious account of a forgery:—

"The forgery committed by draft on Hankey and Co. for £73. 10. was done by a lad who lately lived with a Gentleman in Rood Lane, and soon after he was turned away, he made free to imitate his Master's hand writing for the above sum, which was paid on Monday, the 5th inst. On the day following he set off, with a companion, in a post chaise and four, for Tilbury, there he discharged the chaise, and sent 4 guineas back to his mother, by the Postillion; he afterwards crossed to Gravesend, went to Rochester, and there got on board a Dutch turbot hoy, bound to Holland. Sir John Fielding's men gave this relation of his rout, having pursued him all the way, and if the forgery had been discovered sooner, he certainly must have been taken."

Harding, Robert,

Goldsmith, one of the Sheriffs in 1478; contributed to the new work for the steeple of the church of St. Mary Bow the sum of £40.

Hardinge, Edward,

Goldsmith, circa 1582, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Harewe, William de,

Goldsmith, 1308. By his will he left Sabine, his wife, his messuages in the parishes of St. Sepulchre within Newgate and St. Nicholas [at the Shambles] for life; remainder to John, his brother, in trust for pious uses ("Calendar of Wills, Court of Husting, London").

Hargrave, Humphrey,

Goldsmith, circa 1622, of St. Matthew, Friday Street.

Hargreave, Henry,

Goldsmith, 1590. He died in 1596, and was buried in St. Mary Woolnoth's.

Harley and Co.

Sir Charles Raymond, Bart., appears to have severed his connection with Raymond, Vere, Low, and Fletcher in 1778, and started another bank, under the style of Raymond, Harley, Webber, and Co., at George Street, Mansion House. In 1781 it became Raymond, Harley, Lloyd, and Cameron; and in 1789 Thomas Harley, Cameron, and Sons was the style of the firm. In the course of that year it became extinct. This house was upon the site of the Cock, which in 1734 was at the east end of the Stocks Market, and was then in the occupation of Thomas Stevenson, a fishmonger. When Messrs. Smith, Payne, and Smiths made some alterations in 1874, they discovered in the foundations a cast-iron slab, dated 1652, representing a cock fighting a snake, which was probably the sign of Harley's house. The house of Messrs. Smith, Payne, and Smith's establishment now occupies the site of that edifice.

Harling, John,

A goldsmith, established in Lombard Street prior to 1660. We find from a deed that in 1666 he was at the sign of the Heart and Crown and White Horse, now occupied by No. 80. He died in 1691, and was buried in St. Mary Woolnoth's church.

Harris, Francis,

Goldsmith, circa 1645, of St. Leonard, Foster Lane.

Harris, William,

Goldsmith, circa 1623, of St. Botolph, Aldgate.

Harrison,

Harrison, Abraham,

Goldsmith, circa 1661, of St. Paul, Covent Garden.

Harrison, Cuthbert,

Goldsmith, circa 1608, of St. Peter, Cheap.

Harrison, Edward,

Was at the Hen and Chickens, in Cheapside, in 1690. The next time we meet with his name is in the London Gazette of February 4, 1716, announcing his death, and giving notice that several parcels of plate, &c., were pledged in his hands, and that all persons concerned should redeem the said effects before 1st April next, or they will be disposed of by the executors.

Goldsmith, 1540–4, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Hay, Thomas Atte,

Was a goldsmith, who in 1405 left the Horn on the Hoop, formerly known as the Horn Tavern, now Anderton's Hotel, 164, Fleet Street, to the Goldsmiths' Company, "for the better support and sustentation of the infirm members of the Company."

Hayford, or Heyford, Sir Humphrey,

Goldsmith; Comptroller of the Mint, 1452–9; Sheriff in 1467; and Lord Mayor in 1477. He was buried in the church of St. Edmond the King and Martyr, in Lombard Street. The following item is quoted by Chaffers in his "Gilda Aurifabrorum," 1465:—"Item, the yeare aforsaid and the xxvij day of Marche, my master bout of Umfrey the Goldsmythe a chaffer of sylver weyng xvij unces and a quarter, and my master payd hym therefor of old grotez r^o and in new grotez ij^o vi^d paid for every unce iij^s."

Haynes, George,

Goldsmith, 1572, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Hede, William, 1456,

Goldsmith, being of the Livery of the Goldsmiths' Company, as well as his wife, both made complaint to the Wardens of their apprentice, William Bowden, "who irreverently, shamefully and of frowwinesse" had beaten his said mistress. His punishment, as ordered by the Wardens, was that he should be "had into y^e kechyn of the Hall, and there stripped naked, and by the hands of his master beaten until such time as he raised blood upon his body, in likewise as he did upon his mistress, and that he should then be made to ask his master and mistress of g^race and m^ccy nakyd as he was betyn" (Herbert's "History of the Goldsmiths' Company").

Henton, Brown, and Son, 1748–53. (See BROWN.)Hercy and Co., 1776. (See CHAMBERS.)Heriot, James,

Was a descendant of the celebrated George Heriot, who was goldsmith to King James the First, and a benefactor to the city of Edinburgh.

It would appear that, upon the Stuarts coming to the throne of England, the Heriots migrated southwards, as in the "Little London Directory" of 1677 we find James Heriot (George Heriot's brother-german) was a goldsmith keeping running-cashes, at the Naked Boy, in Fleet Street.

I have seen his name on a draft of 1691, and again in 1701–2.

Herkins, Margery,

Was a goldsmith in Lombard Street, circa 1550. It is comparatively rare to meet with the name of a woman carrying on this trade.

Herries, Farquhar, and Co.

This banking-house was established on October 1, 1770, by Mr. Robert Herries, of Hall Dikes, Dumfriesshire, who had been one of the active partners in the firm of Coutts and Co., in the Strand. He was a man of enterprise and ability. He received his business education in Holland, in accordance with the custom of that period, and was for a short time a merchant in Barcelona.

He subsequently originated the novel idea of issuing "circular notes," by which people wishing to travel abroad, and not caring to take much cash with them, could deposit a sum of money with Mr. Herries, and in exchange procure bills on London for amounts not less than £10 each. These bills, or circular notes, were changeable at most towns on the Continent, where Mr. Herries had correspondents; a list of them being given to the customer applying.

It appears strange in these days that such a valuable invention as this should have been looked upon with distrust, but so it was. It is asserted that, when Mr. Herries first conceived the idea, he ventilated it to his then partner, Mr. Thomas Coutts, who entirely disapproved of it. In fact, it was the cause of his dissolving partnership with him, and setting up in St. James's Street.

Sir Walter Farquhar, the present head of the house, has kindly furnished me with the names of the original partners in the firm of Robert Herries and Co.:—

Robert Herries, Esq., of Hall Dikes, Dumfriesshire.

Sir William Maxwell, of Sprinkell, Bart.

Sir William Forbes, of Pitsligo, Bart.

James Hunter Blair, Esq., of Blairguhard, Ayrshire; and Sir William Pulteney.

The "circular note" system having been proved to answer so well, and to be such a profitable adjunct to the business of the bank, it subsequently induced Messrs. Coutts and Co., who had at the outset looked upon it with distrust, to take a prominent part in that branch of banking business. Of late years several private bankers, and some of the joint-stock banks, have adopted the same principle.

Mr. Robert Herries was knighted in February, 1774, as in that year the style of the firm appears as Sir Robert Herries and Co.; and it so continued until 1799, when the list of bankers in the London Directory indicates a change, the style of the firm becoming Messrs. Herries, Farquhar, and Co.

In March, 1865, they formed an amalgamation with the firm of Call, Marten, and Co., of Old Bond Street, who had been established, in about 1774, by Messrs. Pybus and Co. (For particulars of this see "CALL.")

The present firm consists of the following partners:—

Sir Walter Rockcliff Farquhar, Bart.

Alfred Farquhar.

Walter Randolph Farquhar.

Edward Lingard Lucas.

John Henry Ponsonby.

Hessey, Thomas,

Goldsmith, circa 1366, to Edward III., whom he furnished with a quantity of plate.

Heywood, Kennard, and Co.

This banking business was started by Joseph Denison and Co. in 1806, at 16, St. Mary Axe. The list of bankers in the London Directory for 1814 gives them a different address, i.e. 106, Fenchurch Street. In 1837 the style of the firm became Denison, Heywood, Kennard, and Co., and they had moved their business to 4, Lombard Street. In 1851 the firm changed to Heywood, Kennard, and Co.; which was its style until 1864, when this business was merged into the Consolidated Bank.

Higgins, Stephen,

A goldsmith in 1682, at the Golden Ball, near Turn Stile, in Holborn.

Hill, George,

A goldsmith, between 1684–91, at the Black Lion, corner of Salisbury Street, Strand.

Hill, John,

Goldsmith, of Lombard Street, 1604–46. He probably carried on his trade at the Hatt and Harrow. In the book in the Record Office, called "A Book belonging to the Committee for raising Money for the Use of the Parliament," we find that Hill, "the Gouldsmithe in Lumberstreete," was assessed at £200, circa 1644. He died in 1646, and was buried in St. Mary Woolnoth's church.

Hill and Sons, Charles,

17, West Smithfield. This business was started by Mr. Charles Hill, who had been manager to Messrs. Sharpe and Sons, of West Smithfield, who failed in 1825; after which he immediately started as banker, and carried the business on in his sole name for three or four years, when he was joined by his sons, George Hill and John Hill. Charles Hill died in 1846, and George and John Hill carried on the business until April, 1867, when John Hill died, and John Hill, junior, was taken into partnership with his uncle.

The firm of Charles Hill and Sons is now conducted by John Hill, Henry Meakins Hill, Herbert Hill, and Charles Llewellyn John Hill.

Hille, John,

Goldsmith in 1430, who bequeathed to the Goldsmiths' Company nineteen messuages in the parish of St. Vedast, Foster Lane, and left other bequests for the relief of poor goldsmiths.

Hind, Abraham,

A goldsmith, at the Golden Ball, in Fenchurch Street, 1690.

Hind, John, and Thomas Kirwood,

Were goldsmiths keeping running-cashes, over against the Exchange, in Cornhill. The business appears to have originated with John Hind, who was flourishing as early as 1663. In 1670 their names are to be seen in Backwell's and in Blanchard's ledgers; and in 1672 an advertisement was inserted in the London Gazette concerning some account books that were lost, and directed to be brought to Thoinas Kirwood. Another advertisement appeared on September 16, 1675, for the recovery of an Order of the Garter lost, the property of the Earl of Mulgrave, which was to be brought to Mr. Hinde. In the "Little London Directory" of 1677 we find the names of John Hind and Thomas Carwood, who were evidently the same people; another instance of phonetic spelling, so common at that time.

The London Gazette of December 20, 1685, has the following advertisement:—"Whereas Mr. John Topladye, late partner with Captain Hind, goldsmith, doth abscond from his bail, who are bound for him for considerable sums of money; If any person give notice where he is to Captain Mould at Haberdashers' Hall, London, so that he be secured, shall have £50 Reward." It would appear from a previous advertisement, dated March 23, 1685, that this Toplady had robbed him of considerable sums, as we learn Captain John Hind is to have a meeting of his creditors. He failed in February, 1706.

Hinde, John, 1663. (See HIND AND KIRWOOD.)Hinton, Benjamin, and Company,

Goldsmiths, were at the Flower de Luce, in Lombard Street, as early as 1663. I have met with the name of Benjamin Hinton in Pepys' Diary of December 18, 1665, when he was "at the Pope's Head, with Mr. Hinton, the goldsmith and others very merry; but Lord I to see how Dr. Hinton came in with a gallant or two from Court, and do so call 'Cozen' Mr. Hinton, the goldsmith; but I that know him to be a beggar and a knave did make great sport in my mind at it." His name appears in the ledgers of Alderman Backwell in 1663, as keeping a large account, which was at one time headed Benjamin Hinton and Company. He is in the list of goldsmiths keeping running-cashes in 1677; and in the London Gazette of May 31, 1683, his creditors are desired to meet to receive his proposals for the payment of all his debts, both principal and interest. In June, 1693, the creditors again advertise in the London Gazette for any "concealed estate" of the said Hinton's. In 1702 he was described as deceased and a bankrupt.

Hinton, Thomas,

Was probably a goldsmith, and a descendant of the above. His name appears upon an old draft dated 1717, signed by Thomas Crump for his master, Thomas Hinton.

Hoare, Barnett, and Co., 1808–26. (See BARNETT.)Hoare, Hill, and Co., 1800–7. (See BARNETT.)*Hoare, Richard,

Goldsmith, of Lombard Street, died 1673.

Hoares and Co.,

37, Fleet Street. This old firm had its origin in James Hore, a goldsmith, whom the "Little London Directory" of 1677 describes as keeping running-cashes at the Golden Bottle in Cheapside.

Mr. Noble, in his "Memorials of Temple Bar," states that from a very scarce volume of family history compiled by the well-known antiquary, Sir Richard Colt Hoare ("Pedigrees and Memoirs, etc., of the Family of Hoare," privately printed at Bath, 1819), it appears that there was a William Hore, of Rishford, Devon, temp. Richard II., from whom (says our author) "I am inclined to think that our family came originally." Ralph, sixth son of William Hore of Rishford, was in 1654 a "citizen and cooper" of London, at St. Botolph's; and in 1677 his son James was keeping "running-cash" as a goldsmith at the Golden Bottle, Cheapside, where he was living in 1687. He died at Edmonton in 1694. Among the Secret Service moneys of James II. I find this payment:—

"1686.—To Charles Duncombe and James Hore, Esqrs., two of the late Comrs. for executing the office of master worker of the Mint, in satisfaction of so much money by them expended and paid to several officers in passing warrants, and for fees paid to officers of the Exchequer on receipt of £2000, being to each of them £1000 for their service in that Commn., £103 14s. 6d."

James Hoare, the probable founder of this old house, was Comptroller of the Mint in 1661, Surveyor of the Meltings and Clerk of the Irons in 1665, and from 1679 to 1682 Warden of the Mint. This same James Hoare had an account with Alderman E. Backwell, of Lombard Street, in 1664, "for gold left to be coyned," and for cash paid in and out ; in fact, a sort of clearing account, which, it appears from Backwell's ledgers, the majority of goldsmiths had with each other. During all this time James Hoare was at the Golden Bottle in Cheapside. He must have migrated to Fleet Street after 1690.

In 1694 the Emperor of Germany borrowed money of Sir Richard Hoare for the use of the Prince Eugene.

Mr. Noble says that the present premises occupy the site of several buildings, 34 to 39, including the famous old Mitre tavern associated with Dr. Johnson's name. So far as the number of houses included in the present bank of Messrs. Hoares is concerned, I make no demur ; but I do not agree in considering the old Mitre was one of them. For Cunningham, who is an authority upon London, states that the Mitre of Johnson and Boswell—where Johnson used to drink his bottle of port and keep late hours, and where Oliver Goldsmith used occasionally to sup—is still in existence in Mitre Court, Fleet Street, over against Fetter Lane.

To return, however. Very little can be ascertained about James Hore, or when he joined Richard Hoare or Hoar, who was settled as a goldsmith in Fleet Street, at the sign of the Golden Bottle, about 1690. The following entry occurs among the debts of the great Hyde, Lord Clarendon :—"To Mr. Hore, for plate £27 10s. 3d."

The old sign of the Golden Bottle may still be seen from the street, over the doorway, upon entering the bank. Sir Richard Colt Hoare considers it to have been "a barrel ; a sign adopted by James Hore of Cheapside from the circumstance of his father, Ralph, being a citizen and cooper of the City of London." The popular version, says Mr. Noble, was that it represented the leathern bottle carried by the founder of the firm when he came to London to seek his fortune. The leathern bottle for carrying "of ale nut brown" is mentioned as used by haymakers in 1682.

The first mention of Richard Hoare, the goldsmith, is upon an old draft of Messrs. Child, drawn by a Mr. Thynne for one thousand pounds, dated June 8, 1687. It bears the following endorsement : "Mr. Child, pray pay the contents of this bill to Mr. Richard Hoare. JA. FOSTER."

"June y^e 13th, 1687.—Rec'd yⁿ full of this bill one Thousand pounds—for M^r. Richard Hoare,
"p. JOHN ARNOLD."

It is very probable that Richard Hoare was originally of Cheapside, as in 1703 he was elected Alderman of Bread Street Ward. He was Sheriff in 1709, and Lord Mayor in 1712.

In company with some other London goldsmiths, Mr. Richard Hoare was authorized by the Treasury in 1694 to receive contributions for raising £1,000,000 on the duty arising from salt and the new rates of excise.*

Sir Richard Hoare, goldsmith, was classed among the "retainers general" in the list of those who were to receive presents at Samuel Pepys' funeral in 1703. He was presented with a mourning ring of the value of 20s., and his foreman, Mr. Arnold (whom I just mentioned as receiving money from Mr. Child), with a ring valued at 15s.

At foot of the lists of presents of rings and mourning given at Pepys' death and funeral, is the following memorandum :—

"That 2 of the Rings placed in the 15s. column were of the 20s. sort, and given to 2 (but which uncertain) of the 17 persons thus marked, v ; so that the true number of each sort distributed, either at the funeral or since, to this 31st Dec., 1710, has been provided as per Sir R. Hoare's account thereof."

In writing of this gentleman, Sir Richard Colt Hoare observes :—

"We need only refer to the will of his grandfather, Henry Hoare of Walton, in 1664, for a confirmation of the good effects of industry, honesty, and religious principle, which were so constantly displayed throughout the life of this Richard Hoare. His moral character procured for him the general esteem of his brother citizens, and raised him to the most distinguished civic honours. He was knighted in 1710, and was elected M.P. for the City of London in the ninth and tenth years of Queen Anne's reign. He filled the high position of Lord Mayor in 1713; he was also President of Christ's Hospital, and was appointed one of the committee for superintending the building of fifty new churches in London."

The following advertisements from the London Gazette, in which the name of Mr. Hoare occurs, are interesting as showing the use customers made of their goldsmiths and bankers in those days. The first is dated February 5, 1701.

"Lost, about Christmas last, a bond of the late Sir Robert Vyner's dated 20 March 1668 in penalty of £500 for payment of £253. 15. on 21st June following. Whoever brings the same to Mr. Hoare's shop at the Golden Bottle in Fleet Street shall have two guineas reward."

Again, on December 2, 1706, we read of Thomas Finch, a barber, having forged several notes on Sir Richard Hoare, payable to Sir John Spencer, Bart.; and an advertisement was inserted for his apprehension. On September 11, 1708, the following notice was advertised:—

"Whereas a person came to Sir Richard Hoare's shop on Friday 10th of Sept. 1708 about 6. o'clock in the evening to receive £100 for a note of the said Richard Hoare, which note is at present mislaid. Therefore, if the party who received it will come to the servant who paid him the money, and will give him an account to whom the note was payable, shall receive £5 Reward for his trouble, and any further satisfaction if required."

Two things will strike the modern reader of this last advertisement. The one is the fact that goldsmiths' shops and banks in those days kept open nearly all the evening, as ordinary goldsmiths' shops do nowadays; and the second is the cashier, or clerk, being styled, according to the then invariable custom, a "servant."

The next advertisement I have to notice is from the Daily Courant of 1714, where we read that a light-coloured periwig was left in a hackney coach, and that whoever would bring it to Sir Richard Hoare should have ten shillings reward.

Sir Richard Hoare and Sir Francis Child are said to have united to make a run upon the Bank of England in 1707, when there was so much excitement caused by the rumoured invasion by the Pretender. It is affirmed that one of them had collected £100,000, and the other a large sum, and pushed them at the Bank and demanded payment. The Bank did meet the sudden demand, but it put them to considerable inconvenience.

"When the late hurry of an expected invasion," says a pamphlet entitled The Anatomy of Exchequer Alley, "sunk the price of stock 14 or 15 per cent., who were the men that made a run upon the Bank of England, and pushet at them with some particular pique too, if possible to have run them down, and brought them to a stop of payment? I hereby refer," proceeds the writer, "to, and can recall to memory, two goldsmiths (Knights, also, and one of them a Member of Parliament, too) in Fleet Street, who pushet at the Bank of England at the time of the Pretender's expected invasion from France. One of them, it was said, had gathered a quantity of Bank Bills to the value of near one hundred thousand, and the other a great sum, though not so much, and it was said they resolved to demand the whole at once. Let the gentleman I point at answer with what difficulty Sir Richard Hoare wiped off the imputation of being a favourer of the Pretender, and how often in vain he protested he did it with no such view, and how hard the Whigs were to believe him."

Between 1706 and 1718 the style of this firm was Sir Richard Hoare and Co., and the majority of drafts of that date (of Messrs. Child) bear the signature of Christopher Arnold, who signed for the house. In January, 1718, Sir Richard Hoare died, as may be gathered from the following extract from the Parish Register of St. Dunstan's, Fleet Street:—

"1718, Jan. 13. Sir Richard Hoar, from Fleet Street, in the Chancell."

By a bequest dated in that year, he left to the Goldsmiths' Company £200, for distribution of 20s. each yearly, for ever, amongst eight poor widows of freemen, who should be of good life and conversation, and most frequently receive the Sacrament, according to the usages of the Church of England.

A draft, dated November, 1717, drawn to the order of Sir Richard Hoare, bears his own endorsement ; and upon the back of another is written—

“ For S^r Rich^d. Hoare,

“ Benj^a. Hoare.”

It was at a meeting at the Saint Dunstan’s Coffee-house,* Fleet Street, on January 13, 1715, that Henry Hoare, Esq., the banker, suggested the foundation of the Westminster Hospital, Charles Hoare acting as treasurer.

In April, 1718, Mr. Henry Hoare was the head partner.

In 1716 he, in conjunction with Lady Hastings, “ Beau Nash,” and others, founded Bath General Hospital, to which institution the firm have continued treasurers to this day (see “ Memorials of Temple Bar ”).

The firm was known by the style of Henry Hoare and Co. until about 1722, when Henry Hoare died, and left £200 to the Goldsmiths’ Company to be laid out at interest, and £8 to be paid yearly to poor freemen or the widows of such.

After the death of Henry Hoare, the firm became Benjamin Hoare and Co., the other partners probably being Henry Hoare, Richard Hoare, and Christopher Arnold, as their names all appear to endorsements of drafts between 1729 and 1746. The firm was frequently styled Hoare and Arnold during this period. In the Directory of 1736 the name of Christopher Arnold alone appears as a banker of Fleet Street, which proves the inaccuracy of those lists at that time. In 1738 it was Benjamin and Henry Hoare, whereas those of 1740 and 1754 have Hoare and Arnold for the style.

Sir Richard Hoare was an Alderman of Farringdon Ward Without. He succeeded Sir Francis Child in 1740 ; became Lord Mayor in 1745, and died in 1754, as proved by the register in St. Dunstan’s Church : “ 1754, Oct. 21, S^r Richard Hoar, in S^r Richard Hoare’s vault.”

Mr. Noble, in his “ Memoirs of Temple Bar,” refers to a curious and scarce broadside, published by the second Sir Richard, in which he, at some length, entirely denies the false and malicious report which had been circulated that he had attempted a run on the Bank of England by sending for ten of their notes of £10 each, with the design to send several persons with the said notes to receive the money theron, so as to effect his ill designs, and to bring a disreputation on the bank, and occasion a disturbance in the City.

In the Guildhall Library is a volume labelled “ Choice Scraps, 1642–1770 ;” from which I subjoin a copy of the said broadside :—

“ Whereas there hath been several false and Malicious Reports industriously spread abroad reflecting on Sir Richard Hoare, Goldsmith, for occasioning and promoting a Run for Money on the Bank of England ; and in particular, several of the Directors of the said Bank, reporting that the said Sir Richard sent to the Bank for ten of their Notes of £10 each with a design to send several persons with the said Notes to receive the money thereon, so as to effect his ill designs and to bring a disreputation on the Bank and occasion a disturbance in the City of London : This is to satisfie all persons that the Right Hon. the Lord Ashburnham, Father of the Hon. Major Ashburnham, Major of the First Troop of Her Majestys Life Guards who was ordered to march for Scotland, sending to the said Sir Richard Hoare for a large quantity of Gold and for ten Bank Notes of £10 each for the said Major to take with him to bear his expenses the Gold was sent to his Lordship accordingly and Sir Richard’s servant went to the Bank for ten Notes of £10 each which the Cashier of the Bank refused to give. But if Sir Richard had intended to promote a run for Money on the Bank, he could have done it in a more effectual manner, having by him all the time that the great demand for Money was on the bank, several thousand pounds in Notes payable by the Bank ; and also there was brought to Sir Richard by several gentlemen in the time of the Run on the Bank Notes payable by the said Bank amounting to a great many thousands of pounds which he was desired to take and receive the Money presently from the Bank, which he refused to do, until the great demand on the Bank for Money was over.

"N.B.—That the Reports against Sir Richard have been more malicious than herein is mentioned, which he forbears to insert for brevity sake."

I think that the story is highly improbable, for, during the time that this Sir Richard Hoare lived, £100 demanded from the Bank of England would no more have injured it, or have caused a run upon it, than a similar sum would at the present day.

In 1754 the firm was styled Henry Hoare and Co., and in 1763 it consisted of Henry Hoare, Richard Hoare, and Richard Hoare.

I have seen the signature of the above Richard Hoare signing for the firm in 1752, probably before he had become a partner.

Mr. T. C. Noble supplies me with the following note :—

"In the original design for the erection of the Bath Hospital, 1737–8, a copy of which now hangs on the walls of the chief room there, £6000 is asked for ; and 'any persons inclined to encourage this undertaking, are desired to send their contributions to Richard Nash, Esq., Francis Sanguier, Esq., and Dr. Oliver, at Bath ; or Mr. Benjamin Hoare, banker, at the Golden Bottle, in Fleet Street, London.' Prince Hoare left the hospital a legacy of £600 ; and William Hoare, the Royal Academician, painted the portraits of its patrons. Henry Hoare was president, 1776."

In 1770 the Golden Bottle became No. 37, Fleet Street. In 1774 the list shows that Henry Hoare, jun., was admitted as junior partner, the firm then consisting of Henry, Richard, Richard, and Henry Hoare. In 1788 one Richard Hoare retired, and another Henry Hoare became partner.

In 1788 the name of Charles Hoare first appears in the firm, and Henry Meyrick Hoare was admitted about 1791.

For the remainder I shall content myself with simply recording the various styles of the firm ; the minor changes became so numerous, as may be seen upon referring to the lists of bankers at the end of this book.

The firm continued to be known as Henry Hoare and Co. and Sir Henry Hoare and Co. until 1842, when the style changed to Charles Hoare and Co., which style they have kept up to the present day. The firm now consists of—

Charles Arthur Richard Hoare.

Charles Hoare.

Algernon Augustine De Lille Strickland.

Henry Gerard Hoare.

Alfred Hoare.

Hodson, William, goldsmith, 1752. (See STIRLING.)

Hollingsworth and Co.

This firm was established by Mr. William Pepys about the year 1729, in Lombard Street, as I have gathered from information gleaned from old notes bearing his name.

Mr. Pepys was a son of John Pepys, a lineal descendant of Samuel Pepys, the diarist. The following announcement of his first marriage is culled from the London Evening Post, January 15, 1736 :—"Thursday, Mr. William Pepys, an eminent Banker in Lombard Street, was married at St.

Clement's Church in the Strand to Mrs. Susannah Austen, widow, who lately kept Pontack's,* where she acquired a considerable fortune with universal esteem."

Mr. Pepys married, secondly, Hannah, daughter of Dr. Richard Russell, of Lewes, and widow of Alexander Weller, by whom he had two sons—Sir William Weller Pepys, who became a master in Chancery, and Sir Lucas Pepys, a court physician. Sir W. W. Pepys' son became Lord High Chancellor, and was created Earl of Cottenham.

In 1731 the style of the firm was William Pepys and Co., which continued for about five years. During that interval Charles Asgill and John Nightingale both signed the notes on behalf of Pepys and Co. as clerks, and it is singular that they both left this firm to become partners in the banking-house of Glegg and Vere. Nightingale probably remained with this firm until their end. (See GLEGG.)

In 1736 the style of the firm altered, becoming Pepys and Hollingsworth. In 1742 Mr. William Pepys died, and it became Hollingsworth and Co., which continued until 1750, after which date nothing can be traced of them.

The business was probably transferred to Asgill, Nightingale, and Co. (?).

Holmes, John,

A goldsmith, of London, 1670. He married Martha, daughter of John Colvill, of Lombard Street.

Holt, Alexander,

Goldsmith, Lombard Street. His name is found in the list of the inhabitants of Langbourne Ward, in 1640, who were able to contribute towards raising a loan of £200,000 for the use of Charles I.

Holt, Lawrie, and Co.,

17, Whitehall Place.

This firm is the result of an amalgamation, in 1884, of the firms of Holt and Co. and Lawrie and Son.

The Holt branch of the business originated with William Kirkland, who commenced business as an army agent at 8, Bennett Street, St. James's, about 1809. In 1815 he was succeeded by Nugent Kirkland, who appears to have also brought with him the army agency previously carried on in Dublin by Mr. Vesey.

In 1822 Nugent Kirkland was joined by John Kirkland (afterwards knighted) under the style of N. and J. Kirkland, and in 1823 they moved to 8, Waterloo Place. Two years later Nugent Kirkland retired, and John Kirkland moved to 6, Whitehall, and in 1831 to 80, Pall Mall, Schomberg House.

He was subsequently joined by Vesey Weston Holt, whose family had for many years been established as bankers at Grantham, in Lincolnshire; and in 1859 Sir John Kirkland and Co. moved to 17, Whitehall Place, in consequence of the premises in Pall Mall being required for the present War Office.

On the death of Sir John Kirkland, in 1871, the business was carried on by V. W. Holt, who was subsequently joined by his son, Vesey George Mackenzie Holt.

Vesey Weston Holt died in 1881, and the business was carried on by Vesey George Mackenzie Holt, one of the present partners, until the amalgamation with Lawrie and Son in 1884.

The Lawrie branch of the business was founded about 1780 by Andrew Lawrie, who came from Edinburgh and started as an army agent at 15, George Street, York Buildings. About 1795 he appears to have moved to 4, John Street, Adelphi, and subsequently, in 1810, to 1, Robert Street, Adelphi.

* Pontack's was a famous eating-house in Lombard Street, started by a Frenchman named Pontack. The Royal Society usually dined there at the end of the seventeenth century.

About 1827 he was succeeded by his son, John Lawrie, who moved in 1837 to 10, Charles Street, St. James's, where the business continued to be carried on until 1877.

In 1838 he took into partnership Mr. McGrigor, who appears to have left him two years later to start as an army agent on his own account.

In 1849 John Lawrie died and was succeeded by his son, Andrew Lawrie, who continued to carry on the business at Charles Street, and subsequently at 70, Jermyn Street, until shortly before his death, in 1884, when he took into partnership his son, Percy Shute Lawrie, who, on the death of Andrew Lawrie, joined Messrs. Holt and Co.

The present partners are Vesey George Mackenzie Holt, the Honourable Cuthbert Ellison Edwardes, and Percy Shute Lawrie.

Hopkins, John.

From the London Evening Post of May 25, 1736, I take the following:—

“To prevent the Decoys and Impositions the most Wary are liable to in the Goldsmiths Way, from publick Sales, Auctions, &c. (the shocking Forebode of the Destruction of Trade in general) and the excessive Deceit of whited Brass, sold only by Brasiers, and by them most ridiculously call'd French Plate, John Hopkins, Goldsmith, in Fleet-street, near Fleet-Bridge, the Corner of Bride-Lane, (the other Corner a Turner's) continues making it his principal and chief Business to deal in Second-Hand Plate, Watches, Jewels, &c. and observes the Method he first began of selling at the most reasonable Prices.

“The Call he almost continually has for Quantities of various Sorts of Plate Second-Hand, gives him an Opportunity of affording most Money for the same, as does the great Care he takes in employing the most experienc'd and best Workmen enable him to serve with new Plate, &c. to the greatest Satisfaction, as Numbers of Quality and Gentry have sufficiently experienced.

“Note, Nothing engrav'd with Coats of Arms, &c. will at any Time be expos'd to Sale before the Engraving be entirely taken out, so that it shall not be known the same ever was engrav'd, which is presum'd will be most pleasing to Buyer and Seller.

“No Credit will be given or requir'd in either Way.”

Hopkinson and Sons.

About the year 1796 Lieut.-Colonel George Caesar Hopkinson, late of the 15th Light Dragoons, set up business in Craig's Court, near Charing Cross, as an army agent.

It will be found, on reference to the Directory, that in 1810 Colonel Hopkinson had moved from Craig's Court to 5, St. Albans Street, and had taken two partners—his firm then being G. C. Hopkinson, Charles Hopkinson, and Edmund Hopkinson. The fact of their names appearing in the Directory in the list of bankers is sufficient to prove that they were established about that date, but Mr. C. Hopkinson is of opinion that they were established as army agents and bankers only about 1820. In 1817 they moved to 34, Pall Mall, which they vacated in 1819, when they went to Regent Street. From 1826 to 1830 the firm was composed of Charles E. Hopkinson, Charles Hopkinson, jun., and George Henry Hopkinson.

In 1831 it became Charles Hopkinson, Barton, and Co.; in 1846 Charles Hopkinson and C. S.

Knyvett assumed the style of Hopkinson and Co. Since 1870 the firm has been known as Charles Hopkinson and Sons, consisting of the following partners:—

Charles Hopkinson.

George Henry Hopkinson.

Amelius Arthur Hopkinson.

Horn (George) and Killmaine (David)

Were goldsmiths and bankers at the Angel and Crown, over against the New Exchange in the Strand, the earliest date being 1716. In 1721 we find James Temple signing endorsements for David Killmaine and Co. in or about 1735. The style of the firm then was Horne and Temple. In 1736–8 it was styled Temple and Hawn (sic) ; and in the “Compleat Guide to London” published in 1740, the firm was the same, with the exception of Mr. Horne’s name being spelt “Haorn.” The first was probably correct, it being the mode in which they spelt their own names in writing endorsements. In 1733 we find the name of N. Amber signing for the firm ; subsequently it became Green and Amber, whose names appear in Kent’s Directory for 1745 as being near Durham Yard, Strand. We have been unable to trace them after that date.

James Temple became bankrupt in 1740.

Horneby, Joseph,

A goldsmith, who resided in 1666 at the sign of the Unicorn, in Lombard Street, but after the Great Fire he transferred it to Edward Backwell.

By the closing of the Exchequer on January 2, 1672, he lost £22,548 5s. 6d., for which sum 6 per cent. was awarded as interest, amounting to £1352 17s. 10d. per annum.

He appears to have had some trouble over this, as will be seen from the following short abstract obtained at the Public Record Office, which sets forth the way in which money was lodged in the Exchequer :—

“Complaint by ‘Joseph Horneby, citizen and Goldsmith of London.’ He now exercises and ‘for divers years last’ has exercised ‘the trade of a goldsmith in London,’ and ‘haveing in that time, at the desire of the Kinges most excellent Majestie and the great ministers and officers of his revenue of his Exchequer, advanced and furnished, as his Majestie’s occasion required, considerable sums of money for his and the publicke service upon the only security of being repayd the same with interest by way of orders on the Exchequer Tallies and Assignments upon the duties of customs, excise, fire-hearthes, and other branches of the King’s revenue.’

“For the advance of such loans, there was a regular course settled by the Court of Exchequer for the payment of all monies borrowed. This course was observed for divers years, &c.

“Divers persons, and particularly the Defendants to this action, who were unacquainted with the proceedings of the Exchequer and the way of paying in and receiving out nioney advanced as aforesaid, and who regarded the sums they could lend as so small, that it was not worth the labour of attending the said Exchequer for the same, ‘did, without so much as ever being spoken to by your orator or any on his behalfe, for that purpose, freely and voluntarily apply themselves to your orator to take and receive of him severall sums of money to be lent and disposed by your orator, uppon the securities and the creditt aforesaid, they taking notice that your orator, by reason that he had exercised that kind of dealing and was experienced therein, and that there were divers persons that did entrust your orator soe to dispose and lend their monies, by which means your orator had opportunities of putting several persons’ monies into one sum, and of advancing and lending greater sums of money than himself or any other private person could doe, and for carrying on that affaire which was noe other way to be done.’ ‘Notes or Bonds’ were given by your orator, or his servants, acknowledging the payment of so much money to your orator, ‘as the moneys were paid at his shoppes,’ and promising the repayment 'with damages at six per cent. per annum upon demand or within five dayes after, as the usuall course was.'

"One of the Defendants, John White, so lent money and went abroad; and on returning to England learnt of 'the stopp of the Exchequer.' The orator paid him part of what he had lent, on condition he would not sue him for the remainder till the Exchequer should open again. White is dead, and his exors.—Thomas Wise and Francis Walters [or Waters—have now sued orator in King's Bench.

" All the defendants make answer.

" Gilbert Metcalf answers, About 16 May 1671 he had £303 19s. od. in ready money, and lodged same with the complainant, taking for the same a note 'under the hand of one JOHN ORTON, then SERVANT to the complainant, in his shopp in these words (that is to saye)—May the sixteenth, One thousand six hundred seventy and one. I promise to pay unto Mr. Gilbert Metcalf or the bearer three hundred and three pounds nyneeteen shillings at demand for my master Joseph Hornby.—John Orton,' &c." ("Exchequer Bills and Answers, London and Middlesex, Charles II.," No. 987. Michaelmas, 24 Charles II. [A.D. 1672]).

Horneby, Joseph and Nathaniel.

Joseph and Nathaniel Hornboy * (spelt thus) were keeping running-cashes at the Star, in Lumberd Street, in 1677. By a deed in possession of the Phoenix Fire Office, it appears that Joseph Horneby was at the sign of the Sun or Star, now No. 20, which previous to the Great Fire was the White Swan, in occupation of William Long, a vintner.

In 1696 Mr. Nathaniel Horneby was appointed one of the goldsmiths, with Mr. Coggs, of the Strand, to receive subscriptions for the Greenwich Hospital, then just begun.

The loss sustained by the closing of the Exchequer no doubt injured them considerably, as no interest was paid for some years; and on January 12, 1701, the London Gazette announced that they were bankrupts.

Hoakins, Thomas,

Goldsmith, 1694, at the Bunch of Grapes, Cheapside.

Howell, Benjamin, 1710-14,

A goldsmith at the Peacock's Feathers, near Royal Exchange, in Cornhill. The Daily Courant of May 29, 1710, announced that a note of his under the hand of David Shrimpton had been lost, and a reward would be paid on its being taken to his shop.

Huberd, William,

Minter, of the parish of St. Botolph without Aldersgate. By his will dated March 27, 1328, he bequeathed all his tenements to his wife and son, twenty pounds for making a gate at "le barbecane" without Aldresgate and for repairing the highway there, and the remainder to pious uses ("Calendar of Wills, Court of Husting, London").

Hudson, Roger,

Afterwards knighted, was at the sign of the Royal Exchange, in Lombard Street, in 1690, now No. 71.

In 1701 the firm was Roger and John Hudson. I have several drafts between the years 1701 and 1714 bearing their endorsements. In the London Gazette of August 24, 1706, Roger Hudson advertises for his clerk, who had absconded with eight hundred guineas. In 1713 he appears to have moved to St. Swithin's Lane, as he advertises in the Daily Courant for a note lost under the hand of

Imperial Bank (Limited),

6, Lothbury, was established in 1862. The paid-up capital is £675,000. They have four West End branches, and a reserve fund of £165,000.

Ireland, William,

Goldsmith, circa 1616, of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Ironside and Belchier

Were bankers at the sign of the Black Lion, afterwards 65, Lombard Street. All that can be ascertained is that they flourished between 1729–56.

Sir Edward Ironside was Lord Mayor in 1753.

In 1731 Messrs. Knight and Bourne had a clerk of the name of W. Belchier, and, as it is an uncommon name, it is probable that he joined Ironside in partnership.

There was a goldsmith named Edward Ironside in Lombard Street in 1697, who was probably the predecessor of the above.

Issod, Thomas,

A goldsmith and plate-worker at the Whire Horse on Fleet Bridge. In the London Gazette of August 7, 1690, is the following notice for a runaway apprentice:—"Nathaniel Whitebread, an apprentice aged 18, being a well fed lad of a ruddy complexion, lightish brown hair, went from his master Tho. Issod, Goldsmith, at the Whire Horse on Fleet Bridge the 3rd Instant, with a considerable sum of money. Whoever secures and brings him to his master aforesaid, shall have £5 reward and their charges."

Jackson, John, 1696–1715,

Was located at the sign of the Angel, in Fleet Street, over against the White Horse Inn. In 1713 he offered a reward for his runaway apprentice.

Jackson (Nathaniel) and Colebrook

Were goldsmiths, but very little can be ascertained concerning them. The only dates met with are 1706–8. They might have been the origin of the banking business of Jas. Colebrooke and Co., but it cannot be clearly proved.

Jacksons, Goodchild, and Co.,

Curzon Lane, Upper Thames Street, 1802–19.

Jenkins (John) and King,

Goldsmiths, of Lombard Street, were in existence as early as 1698. I have cheques and bills bearing their endorsements between 1711 and 1724.

An advertisement of theirs appeared in the London Gazette for March, 1714, for a bank circulation bill that had been lost.

John and James Jenkins appeared in the London Gazette of June 17, 1732.

Jenkins, Thomas,

A goldsmith, 1697, Essex Street, Strand.

Jenkynson, Thomas,

Goldsmith, 1576, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Jenner or Jennor, Robert,

Goldsmith, was a member of the Long Parliament for Cricklade, co. Wilts.

He purchased the Manor of Marston Meysey, Wilts, February 14, 1647, for the sum of £1092 12s. 9½d. He built the parish church of Marston Meysey "at his owne proper cost and charges," as well as eight almshouses in the Abbie of Malmesburie and a free school at Cricklade. He also gave £20 a year to the Goldsmiths for fifteen of the poorest men of their company. He died December 7, 1651.

Jennings,

A goldsmith, 1686, at the Golden Key, over against Exeter Change, Strand.

Jennings, John,

Goldsmith, circa 1624, of St. Andrew Undershaft.

Jerningham, Henry, or Jernegar, 1734–61,

Was a goldsmith of Covent Garden, who made a huge silver cistern, of which a curious story is related in "Gilda Aurifabrorum" by Chaffers. In Kent's Directory for 1736, amongst the bankers is found the name of Henry Jernegar, goldsmith, of Great Russell Street, Covent Garden. As Jerningham was buried in St. Paul's, Covent Garden, we may assume the same person is intended. By the London Gazette, Henry Jernegar, goldsmith and banker, was required to surrender as a bankrupt in July, 1723, but from the above we may conclude that he settled with all his creditors and resumed cash payments.

Jocee,

Goldsmith, 1276; Keeper of the Dies, and Master of the Mint.

Johnson, Sir John,

A goldsmith and Alderman of Cheapside, 1642.

Johnson, John, 1675,

Goldsmith, at the Three Flower de Luces, in Cheapside. He advertised the loss of jewelry in the London Gazette. In the "Little London Directory" of 1677 we find the name of James Johnson, described as of the same house, keeping running cashes.

The following curious advertisement respecting prizes in a lottery appeared in the London Gazette of November 23, 1693:—

"These are to give notice that Mr. Neale, the Trustees, Overseers, and Goldsmiths having adjusted all matters and accounts relating to the Profitable Adventure to the Fortunate lately drawn in Freeman's Yard Cornhill, have so ordered the money that each Fortunate ticket being on Tuesday next or at any time after brought to the Goldsmith whence the same was taken, will forthwith be paid, as will also be paid all such Fortunate tickets as were signed by Thomas Neale, when brought to the shop of Mr. John Johnson at the Three Flower de Luces in Cheapside London."

In 1696 we read of him as Sir John Johnson, at the same sign; and in 1703 we find Henry Johnson located there.

Johnson, Robert,

Goldsmith and Alderman, 1525.

Johnson, Thomas,

Goldsmith, circa 1625, of St. Mary, Strand.

Johnston, Hugh and John, and Co.,

First appeared in the Directory in the list of bankers in the year 1831, at 15, Bush Lane, as Johnston and Co. In 1838 the style was Hugh and John Johnstone and Co.; in 1846 the partners were John Laforey Butler, Felix Prior, and Charles Butler, but the style remained the same; and in 1849 Paul Butler took the place of Mr. J. L. Butler. In 1854 they were at 62, Great Bush Lane, and 27, Cannon Street; and from 1855 to 1864 they were at 28, Cannon Street. In 1865 the Merchant Banking Co. of London occupied their premises.

Jones, Cave,

Goldsmith, 1732, at the Golden Ball, at the corner of St. Michael's Alley, Cornhill.

Jones, Lawrence,

Goldsmith, circa 1595, of St. Mary Abchurch.

Jones, Loyd, and Co.

The firm of Jones, Loyd, and Co. was started by Joseph Jones and Co. in Manchester, and a branch bank was started at 17, Watling Street, in the year 1784. They next went to Walbrook, and finally took No. 43, Lothbury, in or about the year 1788. In 1794 the firm became Daniel Jones, Barker, Loyd, and Co.; and in 1799 Jones, Loyd, and Co.

The following account, extracted from Mr. F. Martin's "Stories of Banks and Bankers," will explain how the Loyd interest was introduced into the firm, although I cannot quite agree with him that Mr. Lewis Loyd was the actual founder of the bank, as the list of bankers for the year 1788 distinctly shows that the house at 43, Lothbury, was established by Mr. Joseph Jones. Still, I give the story, as it is probably quite true, being originally mentioned by Lawson in his "History of Banking."

Mr. Lewis Loyd, the founder of the house, father of the present Lord Overstone, began his career as a Welsh dissenting minister in a small chapel at Manchester, the congregation of which included a Mr. Jones, a sort of half banker, half manufacturer. In addition to Mr. Jones there was a young Miss Jones who attended the sermons of the Rev. Mr. Loyd, and, as often happens, the maiden found the orations so eloquent that she fell in love with the preacher. The affection was responded to by the minister, and the couple, fearing the purse-proud merchant would never consent to the misalliance, were privately married.

Of course, when the affair became known to Mr. Jones, as it could not fail to be, he was exceedingly angry; but, seeing that things went on pretty comfortably with his daughter, he became reconciled in the end to his reverend son-in-law. However, though fond of attending sermons, he did not think preaching a good business, and therefore proposed that Mr. Loyd should give up the Welsh dissenting chapel and enter his counting-house as a partner, under the firm of Jones, Loyd, and Co. Mr. Loyd consented, and, to extend the business, it was subsequently agreed that he should go to London, and establish a bank under the name of the Manchester firm.

This was done, it is said, in consequence of Mr. Jones' London agents, who were up to that time Messrs. Vere, Lucadon, and Co., the ancestors of the present firm of Fuller, Banbury, and Co., making repeated complaints about the trouble of keeping the account. Had they not done so, the London house of Jones, Loyd, and Co. would probably have never been established, and Messrs. Fuller and Co. would have had the satisfaction of being one of the largest private bankers in London.

Jones, Loyd, and Co., of Manchester, drew bills upon Jones, Loyd, and Co., of London. These operations were facetiously designated as "pig upon bacon;" the phrase itself having, it is said, originated in the following incident:—Mr. Loyd having one day called upon a customer whose acceptances the banker held, and the same having been drawn upon the house in London by a firm abroad, asked the customer whether the bills so drawn upon and accepted by him were based upon bond fide transactions. "Before I answer that question," said the gentleman, "you must permit me, Mr. Loyd, to put a question to you." At the same time, opening a drawer, he produced several bills drawn by Jones, Loyd, and Co., of Manchester, on Jones, Loyd, and Co., of London. "Pray, sir, are these bills, which I call 'pig upon bacon,' all based upon bond fide transactions?" This was so unexpected a retort that Mr. Loyd retired without uttering another word.

After a long and honourable career, Mr. Lewis Loyd retired from the bank (he died worth three millions sterling), and was succeeded as head of the firm by his son, Mr. Samuel Jones Loyd, who was, in 1850, created Lord Overstone. Upon this event the following clever lines were written:—

"The Banker Lord must have his name destroyed;
The Peerage must be pure, no peer a Loyd;
No longer by his City title known,
Lord Overgold is now Lord Overstone."

He was considered one of the richest subjects in the world, having been worth upwards of five millions sterling.

The following capital story is told of Jones Loyd's sagacity. It appeared that for some reason or another Baron Rothschild had a spite against Mr. Loyd, so he determined upon trying to ruin his firm. One afternoon, after three o'clock, the Baron paid in to his account with Jones, Loyd, and Co. the large sum of £500,000, made up of bank notes, cheques upon bankers, and coin. Upon this circumstance coming to the ears of Mr. Loyd, which of course it very shortly did, he, suspecting that the Baron intended mischief, instructed the cashier not to clear the charge paid in, but to put it away in a bag, and lock it up in the strong room just as it was. The next morning, about ten o'clock, Baron Rothschild's clerk presented a draft upon Jones, Loyd, and Co. for £500,000, for which he demanded to be paid in bank notes. The cashier went at once to Mr. Loyd to receive instructions. Mr. Loyd retaliated upon Rothschild by saying, "The effects are not cleared," and pushing the bag across the counter, with its contents in the same condition as they were left the night before, he said,

"There! Take your rubbish back, and tell Baron Rothschild that I never wish to see it again." Thus, in all probability, a grave calamity was averted.

In 1864, much to the surprise of the world at large, Messrs. Jones, Loyd, and Co. disposed of their business to the London and Westminster Bank.

In a work entitled "The Bank of England" (by the author of the "People's Blue Book," Longmans) it is stated that "some millions of deposits have been added to the London and Westminster Bank by amalgamation with the house of Jones, Loyd, and Co., the largest private banking-house in the City of London, and the most inveterate of all the enemies of the joint-stock banking principle." In view of this fact it is curious to read the evidence given in 1840 by Mr. Samuel Jones Loyd before the Parliamentary Committee on the Bank Charter Act. Condemning the joint-stock system as quite inapplicable to banking, he declared on that occasion: "I think joint-stock banks are deficient in everything requisite for the conduct of banking business except extended responsibility."

Kayll, Hugh,

Goldsmith, of Lombard Street, circa 1586. In this year died a poor boy named Thomas, whom he had taken up in the street and placed "with Widdowe Price at his owne proper cost." He was in partnership with Sir Richard Martin. In the "Royal Accounts for New Year's Gifts" their names occur several times in relation to costly articles purchased from them for presentation to distinguished persons. Hugh Kayll was Alderman Deputy of Langbourne Ward, and his son, Thomas Kayll, was M.A. and Fellow of Jesus College, Cambridge. Hugh Kayll died 1603, and was buried in St. Mary Woolnoth's.

Keale, John,

Goldsmith, 1539–74. He resided in the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Keate, Lancelot,

Was at the Unicorn, in the Strand, as we learn from a notice in the London Gazette of November 19, 1702, wherein he advertises the loss of lottery tickets; and again, on March 31, 1701, the following appeared:—"On the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd May next three Plates will be run for on Merrow Downs, near Guilford in Surrey; the particulars are mentioned in the Gazette of February 24 last. The contributors being to pay their money a month before, are desired to pay it to Mr. Keate, Goldsmith, at the Unicorn in the Strand, London. A Prize will likewise be run for by women; with other diversions." These other diversions probably took the form of cock-fighting or bull-baiting, both of which sports were of frequent occurrence, especially the former, in those days, and of which notices often appeared in the Gazette. Keate's address continued at the Unicorn in 1716.

Keech, John,
Goldsmith, circa 1673, of St. Martin in the Fields

Keleseye, John de,

Goldsmith, 1348. By his will he instructed his wife to distribute seventeen silver pennies per month among thirteen poor men and one poor woman thus: one silver penny to each of twelve of the said poor men, and three silver pennies to the thirteenth, who should be more infirm than the others, and two silver pennies to the said poor woman; this payment to be kept up by the said Roesia throughout her life ("Calendar of Wills, Court of Husting, London").

Kelinge, Thomas,
. Goldsmith, 1545–67, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Kemesyngg, John de,

Goldsmith, 1341. He left to his son and daughter forty shillings each, to put them out as apprentices to a trade.

Kensingtons and Co.

Wickenden, Mossatt, Kensington, and Boler established themselves at 20, Lombard Street, in 1775. James Wickenden had up to this time been a partner in the firm of Sir Charles Asgill, Nightingale, and Co., in which house he had been a clerk, and finally partner. His name is not seen in the Directory for 1786, when the style of the firm was Mossatt, Kensington, and Boler; and in 1788 a fresh partner of the name of Styans was admitted. In the list of bankers of 1791 the name of Boler disappears, the firm becoming Mossatt, Kensingtons, and Styans. In 1807 it was Kensingtons and Co., and in 1812 the firm of Kensingtons, Styans, and Adams stopped payment.

Kenton, Banks, 1676,
In Leadenhall Street

Kenton, M.,

According to the "Little London Directory," was a goldsmith keeping running-cashes at the King's Arms, in Fleet Street, in 1677.

The name of Francis Kenton appears in Blanchard and Child's ledgers up to 1687 as having a clearing account with them.

Ketch, Mr.,

In 1677 was a goldsmith keeping running-cashes at the Black Horse, in the Strand, near Charing Cross. In 1682 we find that Richard Adams was a goldsmith at the same sign.

Kettilwood, Henry,
Goldsmith, circa 1581, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Kettlewood, John,
Goldsmith, 1549–83. He carried on his trade in the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Kiborne and Capill

Were goldsmiths keeping running-cashes at the King's Head, in Lombard Street, in 1677.

From a private letter in possession of W. J. Legh, Esq., published in the "Historical Manuscripts Commission," and dated December, 1682, we learn that there had been a fearful rout among the bankers in Lombard Street, and that, amongst others, Mr. Capell and Mr. Kilborne, of y^e King's

Head, had gone away. It is evident from this that their career ended in 1682, and that they suspended payments.

Kinloch, G. F., and Sons,

Started as bankers about 1807, at 5, Dyer's Court, Aldermanbury; and about 1811 they moved to No. 1, New Broad Street, where they continued to transact business until 1844.

Kirby, John,

Goldsmith, 1584, of St. Fayth's under Powle's.

Kirke, Jonathan,

A goldsmith, of Lombard Street. In 1705 he was at the sign of the Golden Cup, the site of which is No. 83.

Kirkeby, John,

Citizen and goldsmith of London, whose will was dated March 21, 1483 ("Exchequer Ancient Miscell. Wills," Record Office).

Kirwood, Sir Matthew, Robert Jenkes, and Co.

Were described as goldsmiths and bankers of the Fleece, in Lombard Street. Their business appears to have originated with Nathaniel Wollfry and Co., who carried on their trade at the same sign from 1702. In 1695 Nathaniel Wollfry signed for Sir John Sweetapple of the Blackamoor's Head, in Lombard Street, which was before he set up for himself. In 1719 they were bankrupt.

Kirwood, Thomas, 1663. (See HIND.)Knight, Batson, and Co., 1763. (See REMINGTON.)*Knight and Bourne

Were bankers at the Britannia, in Change Alley, Lombard Street. The first record of this firm being in existence is upon old cash-notes extending from 1730 to 1735. In 1732 and 1733 W. Shuttleworth witnesses signatures in the capacity of clerk. In 1737 the name of Bourne is withdrawn from the firm, and that of Shuttleworth substituted; thus in that year the style became Knight and Shuttleworth. Nothing can be traced of them after 1745.

Knight and Jackson, 1729–1750. (See REMINGTON.)Knight, Joseph,

A goldsmith, at the Flower de Luce, Great Russell Street, Covent Garden, in 1697. In the London Gazette of September 15, 1698, we read: "Whereas Thomas Fowler, Daniel Scanlan and Nicholas Moor (now in Newgate) stand indicted that they with others (not yet taken) on the 18 Aug. last, did commit a robbery upon Joseph Knight and other goldsmiths in Boswell Court, in the parish of St. Clement Danes in the county of Middlesex to the value of £190."

I have several cheques between 1702 and 1711 bearing his name. He was a bankrupt October 25, 1712.

Lacy, Hartland, Woodbridge, and Co.,

Bankers, of 60, West Smithfield. This house was founded about 1809, under the style of

Pocklington and Lacy, by Messrs. Joseph Pocklington and Benjamin W. Lacy. In 1849 Mr. B. Lacy's son, Charles James Lacy, was admitted a partner, when the firm became Pocklington, Lacy, and Son. Mr. Pocklington died in 1850, and in 1851 the firm became Lacy and Son, which style remained unaltered either by the death of Mr. B. Lacy in 1857, or by the admission, in 1867, of his grandson, Charles James Lacy, jun., until 1875, when, upon the admission of Mr. Dixon-Hartland, the firm became Lacy, Son, and Hartland. In 1877 the business represented three old country banking firms, as Mr. Dixon-Hartland is the last representative of the Lynn Regis bankers, Gales, Dixon, and Massey, and also of the firm of Hartland, Prior, Proctor, and Easthorpe, who carried on the principal banking business in Gloucestershire and parts of Worcestershire for upwards of a century and a-half, and who, in 1836, sold the banks to the Gloucestershire Banking Company.

The banking-house at 60, West Smithfield, built for the firm in 1808, and rebuilt and enlarged in 1876, occupies the site of the edifice from which Queen Mary witnessed the burning of the martyrs who suffered in Smithfield during her reign, and the charred post to which they were supposed to have been attached was not many years ago dug up opposite the bank.

A circular, dated December 31, 1880, announced the retirement of Mr. Lacy, sen., and the admission into the firm of Mr. H. W. Woodbridge, a member of the old-established firm of Hull, Smith, and Co., at Uxbridge. The style of the firm therefore changed to Lacy, Hartland, Woodbridge, and Co., and their business at Brentford and Southall became branches of Messrs. Hull, Smith, and Co., into which firm Mr. C. J. Lacy, jun., and Mr. Dixon-Hartland, M.P., were admitted partners.

Ladbroke and Co.

This firm was of considerable antiquity, notwithstanding it does not appear in the list of bankers in the Directory before 1771; in which year its style was Sir Robert Ladbroke, Son, Rawlinson, and Porker, doing business at the Phoenix, afterwards 10, Lombard Street. It is evident that they were established as early as 1736, probably as goldsmiths, as by an endorsement to one of Messrs. Child and Co.'s drafts the signature of "Robert Ladbroke and Co." may be seen duly witnessed by their clerk.

Sir Robert Ladbroke was Lord Mayor in 1747, and Alderman of Bridge Without, a member of Parliament for the City of London, and a colonel of the City Militia. In an old almanack he was described as "Father of the City." In 1774 his son was head of the bank, and they had moved from Lombard Street to Bank Buildings. Messrs. Ladbroke and Co. gave up their business in 1842, when it was taken over by Messrs. Glyn and Co.

Ladds, William,

Goldsmith, 1695, at the Three Kings, in Cheapside.

Lamb, Henry,

Was a goldsmith at the Grapes, in Lombard Street, keeping running-cashes, some time before the "Little London Directory" was published in 1677. This was afterwards numbered 72. His name may be occasionally seen in advertisements in the Gazette up to 1703.

We learn from an old deed that in 1700 he was in occupation of the Unicorn, in Lombard Street.

Lambert, Edward, and Co.,

Goldsmiths, 1694-9, at the Fleece, in Lombard Street, now No. 74.

Land Bank.

Erected by Act of Parliament in 1696 to advance money only on the title-deeds of unencumbered freehold estates.

The bank, projected by Dr. Chamberlain, was patronized by the Earl of Sunderland, through whose interest, and that of Foley, Harley, and the Tories, a Bill was passed through Parliament. It was resolved that a fund, redeemable by Parliament, should be settled in a National Land Bank; that the sum of £2,564,000 should be raised by subscription, for which 7 per cent. should be paid; and that the bank should not lend money but on landed securities, etc.

Books were opened at Exeter Change on June 5, 1696, but they failed to get a sufficient amount subscribed. £5000 was subscribed in the King's name.

It is said that its existence was marked chiefly by a paper war with the Bank of England, in which it was held that the latter got the worst of the encounter. One fly-sheet of the year 1696 proclaims "the trial and condemnation of the Land Bank at Exeter Change for murdering the Bank of England at Grocers' Hall," while another gives an epitaph: "Here lies the body of the Bank of England, who was born in the year 1694, and died May 5, 1696, in the third year of its age."

The failure of this Land Bank and other causes brought about the stoppage of the Bank of England, when their notes fell to such a heavy discount.

Lane,

Goldsmith, at the Rose, in Lombard Street, advertised in 1695 to sell copper medals of King Charles I., having on the obverse the royal effigy, and on the reverse a landscape, with the motto: "Virtutem ex me, fortunam ex aliis." These were engraved and struck by Roettier at the Mint; prices, 10s. and 5s. plain, and in silver, 25s. each. He also, in 1694, advertised large funeral medals of copper, to preserve the memory of her late Majesty, Queen Mary. One side represented her Majesty, the other having the motto, "Sublatam ex Oculis quærimus invidi;" also engraved by Roettier.

Lane, Benjamin,

Goldsmith, 1685, in Lombard Street. In 1671-2 he was servant and book-keeper to Rowe and Green, of the George, in the same street.

Langston, Polhill, and Co., 1777. (See OLDING.)Lapley, James,

Was a goldsmith keeping running-cashes at the Three Cocks, in Cheapside, in 1677, and also in 1688. Very little can be ascertained about him beyond the fact that by an advertisement in the London Gazette of March 19, 1693, we find he had a meeting of his creditors, and that he died soon afterwards.

In 1703 another goldsmith, Captain Pearce, was located at this sign.

Lassells, Richard,

A goldsmith keeping running-cashes at the Unicorn, in the Strand, near Charing Cross, between 1680 and 1694. Those are the only years in which his name has been met with. He was one of the goldsmiths appointed by the Treasury in March, 1694, as a receiver of contributions for raising a sum not to exceed £1,000,000 upon the new duties arising from salt and the new rates of excise.

Latch, Samuel, 1645,

Goldsmith, of Lombard Street, was spoken of as trying to cheat the State, October 15, 1651 ("Comm^{ee} for advance of money," etc., Public Record Office).

Lawrence, Thomas,

Goldsmith, 1594-1605, of the Parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Layfield, Samuel,

Goldsmith, in 1685, next to the King's Head, by Royal Exchange in Cornhill; and between 1693 and 1694 at the White Horse, in Lombard Street.

Leek, Samuel,

Goldsmith, in 1680, at the Lamb, in Cheapside.

Leeke, Ralph,

Goldsmith, in 1686, in Bridges Street, Covent Garden. He was also a plate-worker.

Lees and Co.

This old-established banking-house was started by John Brassey as early as 1697. The firm was Brassey and Caswall about the year 1700, and they were at the Acorn, in Lombard Street. The first record that can be discovered about them is their names upon old cash-notes of Messrs. Child; the earliest dates being in 1707, when their endorsement was witnessed by J. Browne. The same old notes show that in 1716 the firm consisted of John and Nathaniel Brassey. In the London Gazette of January 9, 1720, they advertised the loss of £100 in bank notes, for the recovery of which they would give £50 reward, and ask no questions. Between 1730 and 1740 it was Nathaniel Brassey and Lee. The first time this firm appears in the London Directory is in 1738, and then they were located in Lombard Street. In 1754 the style of the firm was Brassey, Lee, and Son. In a list of bankers, included in an almanack called the "Daily Journal," published in 1768, the firm of Brassey, Lee, R. and W. Ayton, were at the Acorn, in Lombard Street, which in 1771, after the numbering of the houses took place, became No. 71. In 1774 the style of the firm became Ayton and Company; and in 1776 Lee, Ayton, Brassey, and Eaton were carrying on the business. In 1785 the designation again became Ayton, Brassey, and Co., consisting of Ayton, Brassey, Lees, and Satterthwaite. The next change is recorded in the Directory of 1799, when the head of the firm became George Lee, supported by R. Lee, Miles, and Satterthwaite. In 1805 it was Lees, Satterthwaite, and Brassey; in 1810 they appear to have taken a partner of the name of Farr; and from 1820 to 1835 the style of the firm was Lees, Brassey, Farr, and Lee. In the last year this old-established bank, which had originated in the business of a goldsmith and banker upwards of 135 years before, ceased to exist.*

Lefevre, Curries, and Co., 1787-1813. (See CURRIES.)Lemon and Co., 1772-79. (See ROBARTS.)*Leofstane, Henry Fitz Alwin Fitz,

Was one of the earliest goldsmiths of whom there is any record. He was Mayor of London in 1189, and Provost of the City, and continued to be Mayor for twenty-four years. There was a goldsmith of the name of Leofstane, in 1100, who was Provost of London; probably the father of the above.

Lewes, Thomas,

Goldsmith, circa 1592, of St. Bride's.

Lewis, George,

A goldsmith, residing between 1699-1714 at the Angel and Crown, against the New Exchange, in the Strand. Very little can be found out about him beyond advertisements in the papers, of which

* Mr. Clode informs me that the site occupied by this house was the residence of Sir John Percival, who was Lord Mayor in 1498, by whom it was devised to the Merchant Taylors' Company. The house was subsequently wanted by Sir Thomas Gresham to form part of the site of his Royal Exchange, but the company declined to sell.

Sir W. Harper, the founder of Bedford school, lived here in 1504.

the following, that appeared in the London Gazette of June 1, 1702, may serve as an example:—“Lost a note dated May 11th 1702 given by Mr. George Lewis, goldsmith, against the New Exchange for £150, payable to Charles Williams Esq^r or his order. All persons are desired, if offered, to stop it, Payment being already made, and whoever brings it to the said Mr. Lewis, shall have 10s. Reward.”

Lewis, Henry,

Goldsmith, circa 1596, of St. John Zaehary.

Lewis, Thomas,

Goldsmith, circa 1588, of St. Alphage.

Lincoln, Walter de,

Goldsmith, 1323. He had a tenement adjoining the Goldsmiths' Hall.

Lloyds Bank (Limited),

72, Lombard Street, with five West End branches. Established by the amalgamation of Lloyds, Barnetts, and Bosanquets' Bank, Limited, with the Birmingham Joint Stock Bank, Limited, and the Worcester City and County Banking Company, Limited, in February, 1889. Paid-up capital, £1,280,000. Reserve fund is £700,000.

Lockhart, James and James,

Started in 1787 at 36, Pall Mall. In 1793 the firm became Lockharts and Maxtone; in the following year Lockharts, Maxtone, Wallace, and Clark; and in 1797 it appears for the last time in the list of bankers under the style of Lockharts, Maxtone, Wallis, and Paterson.

London and County Banking Company (Limited),

21, Lombard Street, was established in 1836. The paid-up capital is £2,000,000. They have a large number of branches: thirty-six in London and suburbs, and 133 in the country.

The reserve fund amounts to £1,000,000.

London and Provincial Bank (Limited),

7, Bank Buildings, Lothbury, with eighty-one branches in various places. It was established in 1864, with a paid-up capital of £400,000, and a reserve fund of about £400,000.

London and South-Western Bank (Limited),

170, Fenchurch Street, was established in 1862. They have many branches in London, the suburbs, and the country. The new premises occupy the site of the following houses, which existed in 1712: the Three Kings, the Black Lion, and the Cross Keys, up to Ingram Court. A beautiful plan of the old houses may be seen in the bank. The paid-up capital is £400,000, and the reserve fund amounts to £65,000.

London and Westminster Bank (Limited)

Was established in 1834. Up to this date it had always been considered that no joint-stock bank could be established within a radius of sixty-five miles of London.

Mr. James William Gilbart, who commenced his banking career as a clerk to a City banker in 1813, subsequently went to Ireland as manager of a joint-stock bank, and then returned to London. Having discovered that the old notions as to the formation of a joint-stock bank were erroneous, he set to work to form a model one; and the result was the London and Westminster Bank.

No scheme ever met with more formidable opposition, not only from the private bankers, but especially from the Bank of England, who considered that the “upstart” was infringing their monopoly. That idea was speedily dissipated upon the question being put to the Solicitor-General, who gave it as his opinion that any number of joint-stock banks might be established, or might have been, since the foundation of the Bank of England, provided they did not issue notes, within sixty-five miles of the metropolis.

With a paid-up capital of £50,000 the London and Westminster Bank commenced business at 38, Throgmorton Street, on March 10, 1834. Previously to so doing, they had applied to the Bank of England for permission to have a drawing account; but their application was refused. They also asked the Committee of Bankers to be allowed a seat in the Clearing House, but that application was likewise refused; and, after repeated applications, they did not gain admittance until June, 1854.

After a few more oppositions on the part of the Bank of England, the London and Westminster Bank succeeded in holding its position.

The following banking businesses have been absorbed by it:—Young and Son, of Southwark, who gave up on account of the death of the latter; Strahan, Paul, and Bates; Jones, Loyd, and Co.; Commercial Bank of London; Unity Joint Stock Bank; and London and Middlesex Bank.

It has a paid-up capital of £2,800,000, with a reserve fund of £1,655,620.

The London and Westminster Bank has thirteen branches in the metropolis.

London Joint Stock Bank (Limited)

Was established in 1836, and registered on September 30, 1882. Head office, 5, Princes Street, with seven branches in other parts of London. (See list.)

The paid-up capital is £1,800,000, and its guarantee fund amounts to £1,163,215.

Long, John,

A banker of Lombard Street, was bankrupt in September, 1720.

Longe, Richard Le,

Goldsmit, 1349.

Longworth, Francis,

Goldsmit, 1590–98, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Lonison, John,

Goldsmit. He was Master of the Mint from 1571–6, and died in 1583, and was buried in St. Vedast's, Foster Lane.

Louthe, John de, and Berkinge, William de,

Goldsmit, and principal jewellers to Isabella, Queen of Edward II. Particulars of some of the jewelry purchased by this Queen have been communicated to the Society of Antiquaries by Mr. E. A. Bond (“Archæologia,” xxxv. p. 466).

Lovejoye, John,

Goldsmit, 1591–1612, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth. He died in the latter year, and was buried in the parish church.

Lovett, Drew,

Goldsmit, of St. Andrew's, Holborn, was presented at the Middlesex Sessions on June 1, 4th Charles I., for not going to church (“Middlesex Sessions Rolls,” Public Record Office.)

Lowders,

Goldsmith, 1693–4, at the Jewel and Crown, near Durham Yard, in the Strand.

Lowe, Vere and Co., 1779–85. (See WILLIAMS.)Lowry, Newton, and Mercer,

At 24, Gracechurch Street, corner of Lombard Street, 1771–78.

Lubbock and Co., 1814–60. (See ROBARTS).Lucy,

Goldsmith, 1687, at the Golden Cup, in Russell Street, Covent Garden; the shop which was afterwards occupied by Wrights.

Lund, John,

Goldsmith, 1695–1712, at the Three Golden Lions, near Temple Bar. He was bankrupt in 1712.

Lupart, Peter,

Goldsmith, 1696, at the Golden Lion, Lombard Street.

Lyas, German,

Goldsmith, a foreigner, circa 1450. In the reign of Henry VI. he was accused of various offences, amongst others of selling a tablet of adulterated gold. He was compelled, by way of punishment, to give to the fraternity of the Goldsmiths a gilt cup weighing 24 ounces, and to implore pardon on his knees.

Lyndsay, or Lindsay, John, also Lindsey,

Of the Angel in Lombard Street, probably in front of the church of St. Edmund the King, a goldsmith, circa 1663. His account in Backwell's ledgers was very considerable. He subsequently married Dorothy, the widow of John Colvill, of Lombard Street.

He was established in Lombard Street prior to the Great Fire, but took a shop in Broad Street during the rebuilding of his place of business. On January 10, 1669, a notice was inserted in the London Gazette to the effect that he had removed from Broad Street to his house in Lombard Street. On February 14, 1675, the following advertisement appeared:—"Lost, in New Fish Street, over against the New Pyramid, 70 Guineys of gold, in a canvass bag, if any shall give notice to Mr. Lindsey, goldsmith, at the Angel in Lombard Street, shall have 10 Guineys for his pains." He subsequently took a partner, one Peirce Reeve; and the Gazette for October 2, 1679, announced that the creditors of John Lyndsay and Peirce Reeve, goldsmiths, had appointed to meet on a certain day to hear their proposals.

There is an announcement that a meeting of the creditors of John Lindsay, late of London, banker, "now beyond the seas," was to take place in July, 1684. This is the earliest mention of the term "banker" I have met with.

Lynne, James,

Goldsmith, 1553–59, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Mabb, John,

Goldsmith, 1578, of the Tabard, in Southwark. His will was published in the Athenaeum, No. 3117, July 23, 1887.

Mackworth, Sir H., and Co., 1785–92. (See DORSETT.)

Madding,

A goldsmith, who in 1718 kept the Golden Botttle, in Cheapside ; which was, I presume, the tenement recently vacated by Mr. Hoare. The following advertisement appeared in the Daily Courant, April 5, 1718 :—

“ Dropt or taken from a ladies side, on Tuesday the 25th of March, coming from the Spanish Ambassador's at St. James' Square, a gold watch and chain, with a seal to it, a pendulum on the outside ; Windmill the maker. Whoever brings it to Mr. Madding, goldsmith, at the Golden Bottle, the upper end of Cheapside, or to Jonathan Wilde, over against the Duke of Grafton's Head in the Old Bailey, shall have 8 guineas and no questions asked.”

This is a curious advertisement, as this Jonathan Wild was the celebrated thief and thief-taker, who, according to Cunningham, lived at the house afterwards No. 68, the second door south of Ship Court, in the Old Bailey. He was executed on May 24, 1725 ; and it is recorded that at his execution he picked the parson's pocket of his corkscrew, which he carried out of the world in his hand.

Mainwaring, Son, Chatteris, and Co.

Established at 83, Cornhill, in 1791, by Staples, Day, Cox, Staples, and Lynn. In 1796 they moved to 13, Lombard Street, and assumed two new partners in the room of Lynn ; the firm thus becoming Newman, Anderson, Brander, and Chatteris. In 1799 another change occurred, and the style of the firm became Mainwaring, Son, Chatteris, and Co. They then moved to 80, Cornhill, and became extinct in 1815.

Mainwaring, William,

Goldsmith, 1637-59, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth. He died in the latter year.

Makenheved, John,

Goldsmith, 1349. He directed that his body should be buried in the church of St. Peter de Wodestret. He left several pecuniary bequests to his children ; to his daughter Elena, a nun at Stratford, one mark annual rent of his shop situate opposite the stone cross in Westcheppe in the parish of St. Peter aforesaid (“Calendar of Wills, Court of Husting, London”). He was Warden of the Goldsmiths’ Company in 1334.

Malbery, Francis,

Mallyngg, John de,

Goldsmith, 1341. He left to Hugolina, his wife, his tenement in Goderoneslane (Gutter Lane), parish of St. Vedast, for her life ; and the remainder of his estate for pious uses, for the good of his soul and the souls of Isabella and Hugolina, his wives (“Calendar of Wills, Court of Husting, London”).

left tenements, shops, and rents in the parish of St. Olave, Silverstrete ; in Aldersgate Street, parish of St. Botolph, extending up to the garden of Reymundy Burdeaux, called “ Jewes gardin ; ” and in Westcheppe ; to hold in tail ; remainder in trust for sale for pious and charitable uses. Also to his said daughter, Thomasina, a basin and ewer, a best bed, “ two borteclothes (board cloths), and two towales ” (“ Calendar of Wills, Court of Husting, London ”).

Markynfeld, John de,

Goldsmith, of Chepe, circa 1349.

Marlar and Co., 1772–81. (See POLE.)Marlow, Jeremiah,

Of the Spread Eagle, now No. 66, Lombard Street, was there as early as 1694. He frequently advertised his wares in the London Gazette up to the year 1702, of which the following is an example :—

“ Those who are curious in seals, cut in cornelian, agat, Berril, Onyx, Sardonyx, &c. with a variety of fine fancies Heads and figures, both ancient and modern, may be furnished—where you may have your coat of arms. Cyphers and other devices curiously engraved on any sort of stone.” He was evidently a simple goldsmith. I have no record of his keeping running-cashes. On February 26, 1722, he advertised in the Daily Courant : “ Any one that has a place of One, two, or three Hundred a year to dispose of, if they will give notice to Mr. Marlowe, near Aldgate, may be informed of a person who will treat for the same.” The sign of his house, as determined by an advertisement in 1734, was Blackmore’s Head. He appears to have died shortly after this date, as we learn from the Daily Journal, January 20, 1735, that the entire collection of the late Jeremiah Marlow, of Abchurch Lane, jeweller and auctioneer, was to be disposed of. It is rather open to doubt whether this was the same man who was formerly at the Spread Eagle in Lombard Street, and afterwards went to Aldgate ; yet the articles to be sold were similar to those he had been in the habit of advertising for sale.

Marlowe, John,

Goldsmith, at the Spotted Dog, in Lombard Street, 1686–97. He was sometimes addressed as Captain Marlowe. I have been unable to identify this sign, further than that it was in the parish of St. Edmund the King and Martyr.

Of 6, Berners Street, Oxford Street, an old-established bank, failed through the forgeries of their partner, Henry Fauntleroy, which were discovered in the year 1824.

The name of Henry Fauntleroy, the father, who had originally been a clerk to a City banker, first appeared as a partner in the firm in 1797.

The style of the bank in 1796, in which year it first appears in the “ London Directory,” was De Vismes, Cuthbert, Marsh, Creed, and Co. Henry Fauntleroy, sen., died in 1807, when he was succeeded in the partnership by his son, Henry, the forger. In 1814 he was appointed one of three trustees to the estate of a family consisting of eight children. He shortly forged the signatures of his co-trustees to a power of attorney for the sale of stock standing in their names in the Consols. That operation being successful, he tried others, until at last he had defrauded the Bank of England of the sum of £360,000 ; some portion of which; it is believed, they have recovered.

The discovery was accidentally made by one of the trustees, in investigating the books at the Bank of England, that certain sums in Consols, etc., had been sold out; whereupon he lost no time in communicating with the police, and Fauntleroy was arrested in the bank parlour in Berners Street.

He had kept accurate accounts of all the forgeries he had committed.

On October 30, 1824, he was charged at the Old Bailey with forgery, of which offence he was found guilty, and on November 30 following he was executed.

Amongst his papers the following statement was discovered, by itself sufficient to prove his guilt:—

"In order to keep up the credit of our house, I have forged powers of attorney for the above sums and parties, and sold out to the amount here stated, and without the knowledge of my partners. I kept up the payments of the dividends, but made no entries of such payments in our books. The Bank first began to refuse to discount our acceptances, and to destroy the credit of our house. The Bank shall smart for it."

Fauntleroy kept an open house during the days of his supposed prosperity, and so gathered together a large circle of acquaintances. Dickens used to relate an anecdote, which shows what manner of men these acquaintances were. It must be premised that, at the elegant dinners in Berners Street and at Brighton, some particularly choice curaçoa always made its appearance. The night before the execution, three gentlemen visited the condemned cell at Newgate, and, as they were about to retire, one of them turned back to the wretched man, and said: "Fauntleroy, you stand on the verge of the grave. Remember the text, my dear man, that we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can take nothing out. Have you, therefore, any objection to tell me, as a friend, where you got that curaçoa?"

This firm stopped payment in 1824. On July 31, 1829, a dividend of twelve shillings and sixpence in the pound was declared.

The following curious account is taken from The News of January 4, 1829:—

"MR. EX-SHERIFF PARKIN'S EXCHEQUER BILLS.—The fifteen thousand in Exchequer Bills, belonging to Mr. Ex-Sheriff Parkins, which have lately, through the failure of Stephenson's bank, produced such confusion in the Money Market, and which bid fair to find their way ultimately into the pockets of Commissioners of Bankrupts and Lawyers, appear to have gone through as many perils as are recorded in the 'Adventures of a Guinea.' Mr. Ex-Sheriff Parkins is well known to have been a most eccentric man in all his transactions. He formerly kept cash at Messrs. Marsh, Stacey, and Fauntleroy's bank, and a short time previous to the discovery of Fauntleroy's forgeries, and the failure of that house, Mr. Ex-Sheriff one night dreamt that his money was in jeopardy, and early the next morning he proceeded to the banking-house and withdrew the whole of his balance, amounting to £20,000 in Exchequer Bills. Fauntleroy made some evasive reply to gain time, or if possible prevent the money from being withdrawn; but the Ex-Sheriff was inexorable. He was fully convinced there was some foundation for his midnight visions, and vowed he would not leave the house without his Exchequer Bills. A bundle of Exchequer Bills to the amount of £20,000 was accordingly paid over to him, and he immediately proceeded to deposit them in Messrs. Child and Co.'s bank; but on taking account of the bills, it was discovered that they were not the same numbers as the bills he had deposited with Fauntleroy. He however congratulated himself on his sagacity in foreseeing the embarrassment of the house, and broke out into a strong invective against Fauntleroy. The partner in Messrs. Child's house replied, 'that although they should be happy to receive his deposits, they could not listen to any slander against any other firm.' The Sheriff, getting into his wonted rage, swore that they should have none of his money if they would not hear his story, and, folding up the said Exchequer Bills, put them into his pocket, and kept them in his own possession.—Soon after this event, the worthy XX presented himself as a candidate for the representation of a certain borough, and, standing on the hustings, his antagonist inquired who he was, and who introduced him there? The Sheriff, in his usual violent mode, replied, 'I'll soon let you know who I am, and what are my recommendations; and he put his hand in his pocket to pull out, as he thought, twenty thousand pounds in Exchequer Bills, when, by the aid of some magic, the pocket was empty. The affair caused immediate excitement in the Market-place. The Sheriff swore more than usual, and vowed vengeance against the towns-folk, unless his money was restored. A search having been immediately instituted, the bundle of bills was discovered at the foot of the hustings, very near the worthy Candidate's person, and were instantly restored to him without any reward to the finder. The unfortunate Sheriff soon after wishing to place the bills in the most respectable house for security, had the good luck to deposit them with Mr. Rowland Stephenson!"

Marten and Co., 1814-27. (See CALL.)Martin and Co.,

68, Lombard Street. This is a very old business. The firm, indeed, claims to be the oldest in the City of London. It is supposed to have been established by Sir Thomas Gresham, that eminent goldsmith and royal merchant (as he was then termed) of Queen Elizabeth's time, who founded the Royal Exchange and Gresham College, and vastly improved the condition of trade. For further particulars concerning him, see under "GRESHAM" in this work.

Mr. J. B. Martin has informed me that Thomas Gresham was admitted as a pensioner of Gonville Hall, Cambridge, though no registers survive to prove the date. Here he contracted an enduring friendship with Dr. John Caius, who, later on, when Sir Thomas Gresham was engaged in building the Royal Exchange, was occupied in the erection of the collegiate buildings which, as Gonville and Caius College, still bear his name. It is a strong point of presumptive evidence as to the connection between the Grasshopper and Sir Thomas Gresham that the account of Gonville and Caius College is inscribed in the books from their earliest date to the present time.

He carried on his trade in Lombard Street at the sign of the Grasshopper, by which this house was widely known until the year 1770, when all the houses were numbered, and the Grasshopper became No. 68, Lombard Street. It is a matter of great regret that this curious old sign, which was made of brass, has been lost, stolen, or destroyed. Mr. John Biddulph Martin, in his most interesting and valuable paper, entitled "The Grasshopper," apropos of the sign, writes:—

"The disappearance of the sign is not, however, attributable to any want of reverence on the part of its owners, but to the dishonesty of the workmen who rebuilt the house in 1794-5. It is said that it was carefully put away during the rebuilding, but was not forthcoming at the completion of the works."

This is not a singular occurrence, as the very same thing happened to the sign of the Crown, Messrs. Willis', when that house was rebuilt, and to the Golden Anchor, the sign of Snows, afterwards known as Strahans, which sign was taken down and destroyed as recently as 1875.

Mr. Martin very properly repudiates the absurdity of an old legend which was supposed to have been the origin of Sir Thomas Gresham's sign and crest, viz. that a passer-by was attracted by the chirp of a grasshopper, turned aside from his path through a meadow, and found Gresham, a castaway infant. It is very well known that Gresham's father filled the office of Cambium Regis, or Royal office of Exchange, to Henry VIII., by which monarch and by Cardinal Wolsey he was much esteemed. When the latter was deprived of the Great Seal, what appeared to pain him most, after the displeasure of the King, was that he did not know how he would be able to repay Gresham the sum of two hundred pounds he had borrowed from him.

The next mention of the Grasshopper occurs in the "Little London Directory" of 1677, which shows that Char. Duncombe and Richard Kent were at that address in Lombard Street. Between Gresham's time and that date nothing can be told of the house.

Charles Duncombe was an apprentice, and afterwards servant to Alderman Edward Backwell,* at the Unicorn,† in Lombard Street, until the year 1672, when, by the closing of the Exchequer, Backwell failed, and Charles Duncombe started on his own account as banker; and I have no doubt he was able to carry on the greater part of the Alderman's business. A considerable portion, we know, went to Blanchard and Child at the Marygold. He was at the Grasshopper in 1676, as may be proved from an advertisement in the London Gazette offering a reward for some stolen plate. Duncombe's father was Alexander Duncombe, of Whitchurch, co. Bucks, and is reputed to have been steward to Sir William Tirringham, at Tirringham, in the same county. This fact probably accounts for Charles Duncombe going to Backwell's, as he too had a property at Whitchurch.

In 1677, as before stated, he was in partnership with Richard Kent; but who the latter was we have never been able to ascertain. In 1666 a Richard Kent had an account with Edward Backwell, which looks much like a goldsmith's clearing account, but I am unable to pronounce positively as to it.

Between the years 1672–1688 the names of this firm occur in the ledgers of Blanchard and Child, with whom Duncombe and Kent kept an account for "clearing," as all other goldsmiths did with each other.

I have met with an interesting draft drawn on Mr. Duncombe, March 3, 1669, and other drafts relating to him up to the year 1701, one of the latter bearing his autograph. At this date he was Sir Charles Duncombe. The one dated in 1669 was drawn at the time he was with Edward Backwell.

By a notice in the London Gazette of January 21, 1683, advertising for a "pocket picture," presumably a miniature, we find that Mr. Winn in that year was at the Grasshopper; but, as this is the only time his name has emerged to view, he probably was a servant ‡ to Mr. Duncombe.

Between 1684 and 1688 the name of Valentine Duncombe frequently occurs, as, for instance, on an order of Lord Weymouth's, March 29, 1688, addressed to a Mr. Dowle:—

"You may pay y^e one hundred and fourscore pounds for y^e Fine to Mr. Valentine Duncombe, Bancker (sic), at Y^e Grasshoper in Lombard Street, whose acquittance for y^e same shall bee accepted by me for payment.

"WEYMOUTH."

A receipt for this amount, stating it was for the use of the Right Hon. Thomas Lord Viscount Weymouth, was given by Mr. Vall. Duncombe.

Charles Duncombe was Warden of the Mint towards the close of the reign of Charles II.

Charles Duncombe was at the Grasshopper in 1688, as we ascertain from an order signed by R. Bretland, addressed to the Right Hon. Thomas Earl Rivers at Capt. Child's, Goldsmith, at Y^e Marygold, to pay Charles Duncombe two hundred pounds, "as from Charles ffith, for the use of the King, for your lordship's use," during the period of James II.'s troubles. He had evidently been a very successful banker, as may be deduced from the following entry in Evelyn's Diary, under date June 11, 1696, where he writes: "To this add the fraud of the bankers and goldsmiths, who, having gotten immense riches by extortion, keep up their treasure in expectation of enhancing its value. Duncombe, not long since a mean goldsmith, having made a purchase of the late Duke of Buckingham's Estate at near £90,000, and reputed to have as near as much in cash." A couplet of Pope's immortalizes the transaction :

" And Helmsley, once proud Buckingham's delight, Slides to a Scrivener or City-Knight."

The estate referred to was Helmsley in Yorkshire, subsequently Duncombe Park, the seat of the Earl of Feversham, a descendant of Sir Charles Duncombe, Lord Mayor of London in 1708-9.

In one of Messrs. Child's old ledgers, a large sum of money was drawn out of his account by Charles Duncombe at this date, 1696. Probably it was to pay for the purchase of this estate.

Bishop Burnet, speaking of the shameful shutting-up of the Exchequer by Charles II., states that the Earl of Shaftesbury, knowing of the design, had profited by his knowledge, as he informed the Bishop that he had removed all his money out of his banker's hands, and had warned his friends to do the like.

Sir John Duncombe also is said to have had a large sum of his own, and another belonging to the Marquis of Winchester, in the Exchequer, from which he withdrew them before the suspension of payments took place. This Sir John Duncombe was a son of Sir Edward Duncombe, of Battlesden, and one of the Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury, and, on the resignation of Anthony Ashley Cooper, became Chancellor of the Exchequer in 1672. The Marquis of Winchester, afterwards Duke of Bolton, strenuously supported Sir Charles Duncombe's cause when he was impeached in the reign of William III., his influence rescuing him by one vote.

This is probably the reason why Blanchard and Child did not sustain a loss, as both Bishop Burnet and the Duke of Bolton banked with them.

The Duncombes appear to have severed their connection with the Grasshopper in 1688.

Evelyn's Diary, under date January 30, 1697, records : "The imprisonment of the great banker Duncombe : censured by Parliament ; acquitted by the Lords ; sent again to the Tower by the Commons," for making false endorsements with others on Exchequer bills. He, however, became Sheriff of London in 1699, when he was knighted ; and he served the office of Mayor in 1708. He died unmarried April 9, 1711.

In the year 1688 we find the name of Richard Smith * at the Grasshopper ; but how he came to be there, no one has been able to ascertain. He may have purchased the business of Duncombe, or have started a fresh one on his own account ; or he may have been one of Duncombe's clerks, as in the ledgers of Blanchard and Child in 1686 an account, which was frequently credited by payments from Duncombe, was once in that year credited by Richard Smith per Duncombe ; while in another account in 1687 a credit by Richard Smith and Co. is seen. However, his name appears many times between that date and July 22, 1699, when he died. In 1697 he is associated with his brother-in-law, Mr. Spinks. We find from the register of burials in St. Mary Woolnoth's that Richard Smith's sister, Mrs. Jeane Spincke, wife of Elmes Spincke, goldsmith, was interred in September ; 1690 ; and when Mr. Richard Smith died, on July 22, 1699, both bodies were taken to the Isle of Wight to be buried. Mr. Richard Smith was one of the goldsmiths authorized by the Treasury in 1694, in connection with several other well-known bankers of that date, to receive contributions for raising any sum not exceeding £1,000,000 upon the new duties arising from salt and the new rates of excise. He is also said to have taken an active part in the restoration of the coinage in 1695-6.

A very fine portrait of Mr. Richard Smith or Smythe hangs in the bank parlour in Lombard Street, which I am well acquainted with. It has been assigned to Huysman, a rival of Sir Peter Lely, and was probably restored by J. Hargrave in 1760.

In 1698 we find Andrew Stone described as book-keeper to Mr. Smith at the Grasshopper, and in 1700 he is described as a goldsmith at the same place. On a draft, dated in 1701, I have seen the endorsement of George Stone, who was probably related to Andrew. Thomas Martin was also a clerk to Richard Smith, and in 1703 we find he was in partnership with Andrew Stone.

* He was the son of the Rev. Samuel Smith, Vicar of Carisbrooke and Northwood, Isle of Wight.

The London Gazette of May, 1707, records that "some person hath (through mistake) taken out of the Exchequer two tallies, the one for the last payment of the annuities of 1706, for £20 a year to Mr. Andrew Stone, and the other for the last payment of £10 a year to Mr. Thomas Martin, whoever brings the same to Messrs. Stone and Martin at the Grasshopper in Lombard Street &c. shall have every reasonable satisfaction."

The issue of pass-books by bankers appears to have been a very early institution. The earliest reference I have met with is an advertisement in the Daily Courant for 1710, announcing that a book of accounts of Messrs. Stone and Martin was lost.

Whilst on the subject of advertisements, I cannot refrain from submitting the following, which appeared in the London Gazette of October 4, 1720, in proof of the custom prevalent at that period of bankers and other reputable people associating themselves with a man like Jonathan Wild. Several other instances of the like joint references with other goldsmiths may be quoted:—

"Lost, a pocket-book with three exchequer bills, (the numbers and amounts set forth) if offered for payment, pray stop them and give notice to Thomas and James Martin in Lombard Street, or to Jonathan Wild, Old Bailey, and you shall have five guineas reward."

In describing the changes that have taken place in the firm from time to time I shall, availing myself of the permission kindly given me by the author, give all the particulars verbatim from the paper on the "Grasshopper" by Mr. J. B. Martin, which is far more accurate and precise, by reason of its materials being extracted from the books of the firm, than any statement derived from the London Directories and other sources could possibly be.

Mr. Thomas Martin carried on the business alone until 1714, when he took into partnership his brother James, who represented the borough of Cambridge in Parliament during several years. He retired from business some time before 1731.

According to Mr. Stone's memorandum, it was after the retirement of his brother from business that James Martin took two partners, Mark and James Leaver; and, the former also retiring, Mr. Richard Stone, son of Andrew Stone, filled his place, a fourth partner, Robert Surman, joining them. These changes took place between the years 1714 and 1731, for at that date the signatures of the partners are appended to the yearly balance-sheet in the following order: James Martin, Robert Surman, James Leaver, Richard Stone; and their signatures are witnessed by John, the brother of James Martin.

At the end of the year 1732 James Leaver went out of the business, and James Martin, Robert Surman, and Richard Stone carried it on until 1744, when, on the death of James Martin, his brother John took his place. In 1748 the names of the partners were John Martin, Joseph Martin (his son), R. Surman, and Ebenezer Blackwell. The latter had been a clerk, having witnessed the signatures to the annual balance-sheet at Christmas, 1732. (His signature, I may add, likewise appears upon an old cash-note of Messrs. Child in 1731.)

No further change took place until 1760, when John Martin resigned the head partnership in favour of his son, Joseph, whose younger brother, James, joined the firm at the same time, together with Richard Stone, jun. In 1762 Richard Stone, sen., died; and at Midsummer in the following year John Porker, who, like Blackwell, had previously been a clerk, was promoted to partnership. His name appears as witness in 1760; but I have seen it on old cash-notes as early as 1754.

The firm continued unchanged until 1770, when (February 10) Porker retired, and John Foote was taken into partnership. He married Jos. Martin's daughter, but his family is now extinct. In 1774 Jos. Martin retired, and apparently survived only two years longer, dying in 1776. He represented the borough of Gatton in Parliament, and subsequently that of Tewkesbury. He was also Sheriff of London in 1770, and the only member of the family who attained any civic distinction. He had been in the banking-house thirty-one years.

The next change in the firm was caused by the retirement of E. Blackwell, after a partnership of at least thirty-two years, and association with it for not less than forty-eight years. Soon after his death, in 1783, James Porter, who had witnessed the signatures for the previous eighteen years, was admitted to partnership; and the four members, James Martin, Richard Stone, John Foote, and James Porter, carried on the business for the next ten years, at the end of which period George, son of Richard Stone, was admitted, and Porter retired.

In 1794 the Grasshopper was rebuilt. In the year 1795 John, son of James Martin, became second partner, and at the end of the following year John Foote retired, but was succeeded after the interval of a year by his son George. Richard Stone died in 1801-2, and shortly afterwards, 1804, the firm was reduced to three members (James Martin, John Martin, and George Stone) by the accidental drowning in the Thames of George Foote. In 1806 James, third and youngest brother of John Martin, was made a partner; and James Martin, his father, retiring in 1808, the business was carried on by John Martin, George Stone, and James Martin. The above James Martin, sen., died in 1810. From 1796 to 1807 he represented Tewkesbury in Parliament.

No further change took place until 1823, when James Martin retired, and was succeeded in 1824 by Henry, brother of George Stone. John, eldest son of John Martin, was made a partner in 1826, as also in 1830 was his third brother James, with George Stone, jun., son of George Stone. Richard Martin, second brother of John, also was made a partner in 1829, but he died a few months subsequently, and his name does not appear in the books.

John Martin, sen., died in 1832, aged fifty-seven years, having been thirty-five years in business, and George Stone then became head partner. Robert, fourth son of John Martin, sen., became a partner in 1836, and the six members carried on the business together until 1844, when George Stone, sen., died, having been upwards of fifty years in business, as did his brother in the following year. The retirement of George Stone in 1852 left the business entirely in the hands of the three brothers, John, James, and Robert Martin, the firm becoming once more Martin and Co. after a lapse of 133 years; and with the exception of the admission in 1861 of Richard Biddulph, and in 1864 of John Biddulph, sons of Robert Martin, and of the retirement of the latter at Christmas, 1872, the style has since remained without change.* The partners now are—

"1560. item paid to Richard Martin, goldsmith, for a communyon cuppe weinge xxix oz. at viij ij^d the oz. = ix^d xxij^d."

He was Master of the Mint from about 1580, and in the latter part of Elizabeth's reign he, in conjunction with his son, held the same office until 1617, when Sir Richard Martin died. He was Lord Mayor in 1589, and kept his mayoralty in one of the houses in Goldsmiths' Row, Cheapside, now called Foster Lane. Howes (ed. 1631, p. 1045), writing about this Row, says:—

"At this time and for divers years past, the Goldsmith's Roe in Cheapside was and is much abated of her wonted store of goldsmiths, which was the beauty of that famous streete, for the young goldsmiths, for cheapnesse of dwelling, take their houses in Fleet Street, Holborn, and in the Strand, and in other streets and suburbs, and in the place goldsmiths' shops were turned to milliners, booke-sellers, linendrapers and others."

Sir Richard Martin's name appears in a roll of presents that were given to Queen Elizabeth on New Year's Day, 1593.

Martin, Thomas,

Goldsmith, circa 1604, of St. Swithin's parish.

Marylebone Bank, 1837–41.

It had offices in Lombard Street, Cavendish Square, and City Road, with a paid-up capital of £24,000. When it stopped payment in 1841, it owed over £30,000, and the manager's account was said to have been overdrawn £12,516.

Maserer, Simon le,

Goldsmith, 1369. He was so named from being a maker of wooden bowls, mounted in silver, called masers. He was a benefactor to the Goldsmiths' Company.

Mason, Currie, and Co., 1774–81. (See CURRIES.)Masterman and Co.

The earliest record that can be found of this banking-house appears in the London Directory of 1779, in which year Mildred and Walker were at 2, White Hart Court, Lombard Street; having originated in the firm of Dimsdale, Archer, Hyde, and Co., whose successors they were. In the following year Mr. Masterman entered the partnership, and the style of the firm became Mildred, Masterman, and Walker. Ten years later the firm was Masterman, Peters, Walker, and Mildred. In 1814 the name of Walker disappeared from the list, and another of the name of Masterman appears as the junior partner. In 1823 they moved to 35, Nicholas Lane; and in 1863 the firm became Masterman, Peters, Mildred, Birkbeck, and Co.

This old-established banking business was amalgamated with the Agra and United Service Bank in 1865, under the style of the Agra and Masterman's Bank, and kept on the premises in Nicholas Lane. In the following year, during the panic of May, 1866, this institution stopped payment.

Uneasiness in the money-market began to be felt in the first week of October, 1865, when the Bank of England suddenly raised the rate of discount from 4½ to 7 per cent. By October 9 first-class paper could hardly be discounted even at 10 per cent. In December, 1865, a slight drain of gold for export occurred, and early in 1866 the Bank of England raised its minimum rate of interest to 8 per cent.

Distrust then became general; a panic occurred in which Overend, Gurney, and Co. suspended payment; and in May this stoppage was followed by several joint-stock banks, including the English Joint Stock, formerly the private bank of Olding and Co., and the Agra and Masterman's Bank just described.

Mathewe, John,

Goldsmith, 1562, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Maude and Hallett, 1812. (See HALLETT.)

Mawson, John, and Co.,

At the Golden Hind, in Fleet Street, were goldsmiths at an early date. The first record of them appears in the London Gazette of September 28, 1672 :—"Lost from behind a coach between Royston and St. Albans, a Portmantle with several things in it, whosoever shall give notice thereof to Mr. Munson a goldsmith at the Golden Hind over against St. Dunstan's Church in Fleet Street, shall have a good reward." The name is here, it will be observed, incorrectly spelt; but that went for little in those days. I have seen several instances of Mawson's house, in 1675, being styled the Golden Buck. In the "Little London Directory" of 1677 we find this firm recorded as goldsmiths keeping running-cashes.

Mayne and Needham,

93, Jermyn Street, St. James'. They appear to have started in 1770. The style was Robert Mayne and Co. in 1774, and Mayne and Graham from 1778-82. This is the last trace of them.

Mead and Co.

John Mead, the founder of this business, was, in 1690, at the Goat, next door to the Fountain Tavern, in the Strand. In the London Gazette of October 1, 1702, appeared an advertisement for a dun nag lost; the finder being directed to apply to Mr. Mead, at the above address, for a reward.

I have seen a draft, dated 1704, of Silvanus Bevan's, which is endorsed over to Robert Ffowles and John Mead, and witnessed by John Strother for them. The fact of the name of Fowles appearing here leads one to suppose that he was a descendant of Sir Thomas Fowles of the Black Lion, who died in 1691; but information concerning him is wanting between that date and 1704, when he was in partnership with John Mead. In the year following the name of John Mead alone appears. In 1708 his customers' signatures are witnessed by "Robert Brighthall, for Mr. John Mead."

The following is from the Flying Post Boy, January 20, 1713 :—

"Lately stolen from His Grace the Duke of Buckingham in St. James' Park, a large quilt or counterpane of a bed of white satin, richly embroidered with gold and colours, as also several pieces of wrought cabinet plate and a silver sconce. Whoever brings the quilt to Mr. Mead at the Black Lyon within Temple Bar shall have 5 guineas reward, and one guinea for every piece of plate."

After 1710 John Mead, jun., endorsed the drafts; and about 1715 Robert Brighthall was taken into partnership with his master, as I find on a cheque drawn by James Tooker, in October, 1715, in favour of the Lady Lansdowne, and endorsed by her, the signature was witnessed, and contents of the cheque received, by "James Travers, for my ma^s. Messrs. Mead and Brighthall."

In 1722 W. Mead signed for Mead and Co. After that date nothing further concerning them can be traced.

To Messrs. Mead and Co. must be ascribed the credit of being one of the first bankers on record who gave pass-books to their customers; as in 1715, Lady Carteret, writing to Mr. Child, says: "I should be glad of a Book as I used to have at Mr. Mead's wth an account of all that you have rec'd. upon this article."

The "Historical Register" of December 5, 1727, records: "Dyed Mr. John Mead, an eminent and rich Banker near Temple Bar."

William Mead does not seem to have been equally prosperous, as the London Gazette of March 12, 1727, announces him to be a bankrupt; his certificate being allowed in the following September. I have seen cheques on Child's as late as 1753, drawn by the assignee Mr. Brudenell Rooke, paying out small dividends on this estate.

Merle, Son, and Co.,

Bankers and gold refiners, of 2, Cox's Court, Little Britain, founded about 1792 by Messrs. Cox, Merle, and Co. In 1818 the name of Cox disappeared, and the firm became William Merle, Son, and Co., which is not found in the list of bankers after 1821.

Merttins, George, 1689.

He was at the Peacock, near the Royal Exchange, Cornhill, in 1697, and probably at an earlier date. He was Lord Mayor in 1724. I have many drafts bearing his name between 1689 and 1715. In 1716 we find he had a partner, the firm being styled Sir George Merttins and John Mitford, or Midford, as the name was sometimes spelt. The style of the firm afterwards changed upon the retirement of Sir George Merttins and the introduction of Michael Merttins. The Gazette of September 20, 1720, announces the failure of John Mitford and Michael Merttins, goldsmiths and bankers.

Metcalfe, Thomas,

Goldsmith, circa 1553. He had a coat of arms granted him by William Harvey, Norroy, March 5, 1st–2nd Philip and Mary.

Metropolitan Bank (Limited)

Was started in 1862 as the Metropolitan and Provincial Bank, at 27, Gresham Street. In 1867 it was re-established as the Metropolitan Bank, with offices at 75, Cornhill. The paid-up capital in 1876 was £300,000. It stopped payment January 25, 1879.

Meynell, or Maynell, Francis,

Was a great goldsmith established in Lombard Street some time prior to 1650. Lord Braybrooke, in a footnote in Pepys' Diary, gives the following particulars of him:—

"Alderman Francis Meynell was a goldsmith and banker in London, and then one of the Sheriffs (1662). He was the third son of Godfrey Meynell, of Willington, in Derbyshire, and died in 1666; his father was buried at Langley, in that county, where their descendants still possess property. Hugo Charles Ingram Meynell, of Hoare Cross, Staffordshire, and Temple Newsome, near Leeds, was the late representative of the family."

As Meynell has been mentioned by Pepys in his Diary, I give the following extracts as being of considerable interest:—

"18 Sept. 1662. At noon Sir G. Carteret, Mr. Coventry and I by invitation to dinner to Sheriff Meynell's, the great money-man; he, and Alderman Backewell, and much noble and brave company, with the privilege of their rare discourse, which is great content to me above all other things in the world."

Again, on January 19, 1663:—"Singled out Mr. Coventry into the matted gallery, and there I told him the complaints I meet every day about our Treasurer's or his people's paying no money but at the goldsmiths' shops, where they are forced to pay fifteen, or twenty sometimes, per cent. for their money, which is a most horrid shame, and that which must not be suffered. Nor is it likely that the Treasurer, at least, his people will suffer Maynell the goldsmith to go away with £10,000 per annum, as he do now get, by making people pay after this manner for their money."

Alderman Meynell, who after the Great Fire settled in Broad Street, died in October, 1666.

Meynell, Isack,

His name is found in Edward Backwell's ledgers, circa 1670, keeping a considerable account. He died December 4, 1675, and was buried at St. Mary Woolnoth's, in Lombard Street. His probate was taken out July 1, 1676, and Gilbert Whitehall, goldsmith, appeared as his principal creditor.

Michon,

Goldsmith, at the Crown and Pearl, in Grafton Street, Soho, who advertised in the London Gazette of May 30, 1710. The announcement is of so strange a nature to emanate from one of the craft, that it is well worthy of reproduction. It is as follows:—

“ May all persons who for themselves or Friends, having red and gray hairs would have them dy'd or turn'd black, or dark brown colour, will find entire satisfaction, as a great many have already, in the use of a clear water found out by Mr. Michon, and is to be sold at the said Michon's, goldsmith,” etc.

Middleton and Campbell, 1692. (See COUTTS.)Middleton, John,

Goldsmith, died 1618, and was buried in the church of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Midleton, Simon,

Citizen and goldsmith of London, temp. the Commonwealth and Charles II. He lodged a complaint in the Court of Exchequer, Michaelmas, 1662, setting forth that Sir Hugh Middleton of London, Bart., was seized in fee of a moiety of the “ New River ;” and about December, 1657, agreed with Simon Midleton for £15,100 5s. to convey the said moiety to him (Simon) and his heirs (“ Exchequer Bills and Answers, London and Middlesex, Charles II.,” No. 134). These documents fail to state what the relationship was between Sir Hugh and Simon Midleton, but these facts are particularly interesting as showing the value of a moiety in the New River Company in those days. The highest price ever obtained for a share in the New River, which is $\frac{1}{8}$ th of a moiety, was £122,800, in August, 1889.

Mildred and Co., 1778–90. (See MASTERMAN.)Million Bank.

Their office was in Nag's Head Court, Gracechurch Street. The following account of the undertaking I abstract from Lawson's “ History of Banking :”—

“ About the latter end of the year 1693 there appeared a scheme for a bank, commonly called the ‘ Million Bank.’ It took its rise from a number of London bankers, who lent out money on pledges, agreeing to purchase tickets in King William's Million Lottery, and thence they were called the Company of the Million Bank.

“ This bank was finally established, and its affairs were conducted by a Board of Directors, consisting of twenty-four members, including a Governor and Deputy-Governor. They subsequently purchased many reversions of the fourteen per cent. annuities, and permitted many proprietors of annuities to purchase their joint stock, which amounted to £500,000.

“ They were a partnership by deed, enrolled in Chancery, with a joint-stock fund. They at first divided five per cent. interest, which they subsequently reduced to four per cent. ; and again raised it to five per cent., at which it continued till the dissolution of the bank.”

In the London Gazette of March 29, 1694, the following notice appeared, which doubtless had reference to this scheme:—

Stephen Evance, Charles Duncomb, Esq^r, Mr. Lassels, Mr. Johnson, and Mr. Fowle who were named in the last gazette) shall be their Majesties Receivers of the Contributions upon the act for raising any sum not exceeding Ten Hundred Thousand Pounds upon the new Duty arising by Salt, and new Rates of Excise." To this list the names of Mr. Richard Hoare and Mr. William Shephard, goldsmiths, were added on April 9, 1694.

I have seen entries of transactions in their stock in the ledgers and among the old papers belonging to Messrs. Child and Co. The Million Bank existed until the end of the last century.

Milward, William,

A goldsmith, in 1687, in Foster Lane, Cheapside.

Mine Adventurers of England.

This was a bubble company got up by Sir Humphrey Mackworth, Bart., who has been described as one of "the cleverest rogues of his time," and who had a considerable interest in the great South Sea Bubble.

The Company of the "Mine Adventurers" started about 1707. Professing to make banking their chief business, they issued all kinds of notes to a large amount, much to the consternation of the Bank of England. Nor was the alarm confined to the Bank. It affected even the Government, who took the matter up vigorously with a view to putting a stop to the issue of such an unlimited number of notes. It ended in the following enactment being passed:—

"That during the continuance of the corporation of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, it shall not be lawful for any body politic or corporate whatsoever to borrow, owe, or take up any sum or sums of money in their bills or notes payable at demand."

Mitford and Merttins. (See MERTTINS.)Moffatt and Co., 1786–1806. (See KENSINGTONS.)*Mompesson, Edward,

Between 1693 and 1701, was a goldsmith residing at 9, Birch Lane, next to Change Alley. He probably was established long before this date, but this is the only record of him to be found. He was appointed by the Treasury in 1694, in company with Richard Smith of the Grasshopper, Sir Francis Child, Sir Stephen Evance, and other goldsmiths of the period, to receive contributions for raising £1,000,000 upon the new duties on salt and excise.

Morden, George,
Goldsmith, circa 1619, of St. Bride, Fleet Street.

Morland and Co.

This bank was started by Sir F. B. Morland in 1819. He was formerly in partnership with Ransom, Morland, and Hammersley, at 57, Pall Mall, with whom he continued from 1786 until 1819. All three partners then separating, each founded a distinct bank in Pall Mall. Thus the firms of Morland and Co. and of Hammersley and Co. had their origin in Ransoms. In 1796 Mr. Hammersley left the firm, and its style became Morland, Ransom, and Co. In 1814 they removed to next door, 56, Pall Mall; and in 1819, when Sir F. B. Morland dissolved partnership with Mr. Ransom, Morland and Co. again moved to 57, Pall Mall, and the style of the firm became Morland, Auriol, and Co. In 1823 they moved to No. 50, Pall Mall. They were known by this style until 1831, when the firm became Duckett, Morland and Co.; and in the following year, which was marked by a considerable money panic, they failed.

Morreys, John,

Morse, Thomas,
Goldsmith, 1718, at the Spotted Dog, in Lombard Street.

Morson and Co., Richard,

Goldsmiths, at the Anchor and Three Crowns, in Lombard Street, in 1700. Their name often occurs upon old cash-notes up to 1736, after which date they are not seen bearing their endorsement. The first and only time their name appears in the list of bankers is likewise in 1736, when the record is simply "Richard Morson." In 1721 he advertised to pay three guineas and ask no questions for the recovery of some notes taken out of the Bristol mail.

Mostian. (See MUSCHAMP.)

Moulden, Thomas,

Goldsmith, 1733, at the Three Crowns, near St. Paul's, Cheapside. It was announced in the London Gazette of July 10, 1739, that a commission of bankruptcy was awarded against Thomas Moulden, of Fleet Street. It is very probable that this is the same man.

Munday, Sir John,

Goldsmith, who was Mayor in 1522, died in 1537. Mr. Alfred J. Munday, in a letter to the Somerset County Gazette of May 21, 1887, giving some most interesting details of the wills of Sir John Munday and Dame Juliana his wife, states that the name has been written in twenty-seven different forms. By his will, dated July 12, 1537, he left a number of bequests. In addition to legacies to his family, he left "towards the Reparione of the olde workes of the Cathedral Churche of Sainct Paule of London x^s; to the house of the black ffreres of London xl^s; to the house of the Grey ffreres in london xl^s; to the White ffreres in london xl^s; to the ffreres Augustynes in london xl^s; to the crossed ffreres in London xl^s; to the Brothered of the pisshe [parish] clerks in London xx^s; and to the Company of Goldsmithes in London to thintent that they shall yerely kepe an obbit for me for ever, and come to the same in Saincte Peters in Chepe to my Dirige and masse there to saye Deprofunds for the soules of me, my wifes and all xpen [christian] soules lxvj^{ll} xiiij^s iiiij^d" (£66 14s. 4d.)." The will of his widow is full of equally interesting details.

Munday, Roger,
Son of Sir John, was likewise a goldsmith.

Munden, Stephen de,

Goldsmith, circa 1295, of Cordwainer Street.

Murray, John,

Was a banker, at the Crown, in Fleet Street, in 1763. Mr. Noble, in his "Memorials of Temple Bar," states that Mr. Murray, or John McMurray, a lieutenant in the Royal Navy, commenced book-selling in 1768, when for £400 he purchased the goodwill of William Sandby, who had been established as a bookseller for upwards of forty years at what is now No. 32, Fleet Street, then known as the Crown. Mr. Sandby, it may be noted, retired to join the firm of Snow and Denne, the bankers in the Strand. It is to be presumed that banking did not satisfy Mr. Murray, as his name does not appear in the list of bankers after the year 1768.

The account given in the biography of John Murray, the publisher, in Curwen's "History of Booksellers," does not quite agree with this; the date of his leaving the Navy being set down as later, viz. in the year 1768; the very year, in fact, in which his name ceases to be seen in the list of bankers in the London Directory. No notice is taken, however, of the fact of his having up till that time, from 1763 to 1768, been a banker at the sign of the Crown.

In Curwen's book is an interesting letter written by Mr. Murray to his friend Mr. Falconer at Dover, telling him of the offer he had received from Mr. Sandby, who had entered into company with Snow and Denne the bankers.

John Murray died in 1793; and in 1812 his son moved from Fleet Street to Albemarle Street.

Muschamp, Thomas,

A goldsmith, who served the office of Sheriff in 1463.

Muschamp, Thomas,

Goldsmith, at the sign of the Ring with the Ruby, in Lombard Street, was one of Queen Elizabeth's goldsmiths.

In the Churchwardens' accounts of Chelmsford, 1560, the following entry relating to this man occurs:—"Receyved of Mr. Mustchampe, goldsmyth, at the signe of the Ryng with the rube in Lumbarde Street, for a gylt challys with a paten gylt, wayng xxij oz. and a quarter, at v^l iiiij^d the ounce, Som is vj^l iiiij^d." Another item is quoted by Mr. Cripps, in "Old English Plate": "Paid to Mr. Muschamp in Lombard Street, at the synge of the Ring with the rube for a coupe of gylt, weyinge xix oz. iij quarters, vj^l viij^d the oz. Som is vj^l xj^l viij^d."

Some ten years earlier, in the reign of Edward VI., a goldsmith of the name of Mostian is mentioned. It occurs in the "Unpublished Records of the City of London," a paper privately printed by Dr. Edwin Freshfield. It runs thus: "In St. Michael's upon Cornhill the parishioners bought ten chambers in the churchyard with the proceeds of part of their plate, which weighed 422 oz. It was sold to a goldsmith named Mostian, who lived in Lombard Street, and who bought a good deal of plate at that time." In all probability these names Muschamp and Mostian are synonymous. He was buried in St. Mary Woolnoth's churchyard on May 26, 1578.

Myddelton, Hugh,

Afterwards created a baronet by King James I., was a goldsmith at the Golden Inn, in Cheapside, in 1608-9 and 1614-15. Eton College is reported to have purchased plate of him. He is said to have first started in business in Basinghall Street, and was appointed jeweller to the King. Myddelton was the originator of the New River Company, one of the greatest achievements of the age. The King assisted him largely in the expenses of the undertaking, in the success of which he was deeply interested. The baronetcy was conferred upon him in recognition of his services. He died leaving an ample fortune to his family, and several bequests to charitable institutions. By his will, dated November 29, 1631, he left to the Goldsmiths' Company one part or share of the New River upon trust to distribute, out of the profits half-yearly, weekly portions of 12*d.* a piece to the poor of the said company, by the discretion of the Wardens and Assistants of the said company, and especially to such poor men of his name, kindred, or country, as should be free of the company. He was buried in St. Matthew's, Friday Street, on December 10, 1631.

National Bank (Limited),

13, Old Broad Street; established in 1835. Its paid-up capital is £1,500,000, and its reserve fund amounts to £245,368. It has in all ninety-five branches.

National Provincial Bank of England (Limited),

112, Bishopsgate Street; established in 1833. Its paid-up capital amounts to £2,227,500. This bank has branches in the suburbs and in various parts of England, numbering in all 163. Its reserve fund amounts to £1,450,000.

Neale, James, Fordyce, and Co.

The house of Samuel Roffey, Neale, James, and Fordyce was established as bankers at the sign of the Union, opposite the Post Office, in Lombard Street, about the year 1757.

Messrs. Roffey and Neale were originally brewers; and they took into partnership Mr. Alexander Fordyce, who, according to Mr. Martin, was originally bred a hosier at Aberdeen. Coming to London, he became an out-door clerk to Messrs. Boldero and Co. He is represented to have been a man of handsome appearance, and possessed of considerable energy, with a flow of natural eloquence and a marked suavity of manner. He no sooner became a partner in the firm than he began to speculate in the public funds, hazarding large sums.

In 1766, when he speculated largely in East India stock for a rise, they went up even higher than he anticipated, leaving him in possession of nearly £100,000. He then purchased an estate, gave great entertainments, and in June, 1770, married Lady Margaret Lindsay, second daughter of the Earl of Balcarres. His extravagance knew no bounds; and he continued his speculations, which after a time turned out badly. On one occasion of his speculating for a rise, the stocks fell heavily, and he sustained a loss of about £100,000, when he availed himself of the private fortune of his partner, who had hitherto rejoiced in his associate's cleverness and tact. Luck continuing against him, he had recourse to borrowing from every one he could, until at last the Bank of England and other bankers refused him further assistance.

He is said by Mr. Martin to have visited a Quaker for the purpose of borrowing money; but the worthy man was too shrewd to be taken in. He wittily parried the application with: "Friend Fordyce, I have known many people ruined by two dice; but I will not be ruined by four dice." The Quaker was right, for shortly afterwards Fordyce absconded, and the firm found themselves hopelessly bankrupt; discovery being made that he had put his name to bills in circulation to the amount of four millions sterling.

On January 2, 1771, John Clark and John Joseph Defoe were executed at Tyburn for robbing Alex^r. Fordyce of his gold watch and some money upon the highway. Defoe is said by the "Annual Register" to be a grandson of "Robinson Crusoe."

The style of the firm between 1770 and June 10, 1772, the date upon which they failed, was Neale, James, Fordyce, and Down, carrying on business at 73, Threadneedle Street. One of their clerks, J. Yallowby, who witnessed signatures of the firm in 1767, was afterwards a junior partner in the firm of Mason, Currie, and Co., of Cornhill.

The following account, taken from the "Annual Register," of the memorable Monday, June 22, 1772, will serve to give the reader an idea of the prevailing agitation, which forcibly reminds us of the occurrence of a few years ago:—

“It is beyond the power of words to describe the general consternation of the metropolis at this instant. No event for fifty years has been remembered to give so fatal a blow to trade and public credit. An universal bankruptcy was expected. The stoppage of almost every banker's house in London was looked for. The whole City was in an uproar. Many of the first families were in tears. This melancholy scene began with a rumour that one of the greatest bankers in London had stopped; which afterwards proved true. A report at the same time was propagated that an immediate stop of the greatest must take place. Happily this proved groundless; the principal merchants assembled, and means were concerted to revive trade and preserve the national credit.”

They stopped payment on June 10, 1772, and involved several Scotch banks with whom they corresponded.

The “Annual Register” supplies the annexed items. On July 5, 1772, we read: “A young man was found hanging in a cow-house at Falmouth, and his brother was soon after taken up in a fisherman's net, drowned. Each of these young men, it is said, had £2000 in a late banker's hands, the loss of which was the cause of this melancholy catastrophe. It is added that a young gentlewoman, that was soon to have been married to one of the brothers, is since dead of a broken heart.”

On the 16th of the same month it is recorded: “A motion was made before the Barons of the Exchequer, in Serjeants' Inn Hall, on behalf of the assignees of Messrs. Neal, James, Fordyce, and Down, for leave to pay into the bank £30,000, the amount of the extent on Fordyce's estates, as a security for the Crown, till the legality of the extents is determined, which was accordingly granted, and the extents are to be withdrawn.”

Again, on December 23, 1772: “Last night a meeting of the creditors of Messrs. Neale, James, Fordyce, and Down was held at Guildhall, to declare a dividend, when it appeared that the proofs and claims under the commission amounted to £181,330 19s. 5d.; and, the assignees having produced their accounts, a balance remained in their hands of £33,019 15s. 2d., whereupon a dividend of 4s. in the pound was ordered to be made.”

On April 29, 1774: “The great cause between the assignees of Mr. Fordyce, plaintiffs, and Mr. Fisher, defendants, was argued in the Court of King's Bench; when it appeared that the defendant, a gentleman of character, finding the house distressed, deposited therein (June 6, 1772) the sum of £7000 for the purpose of saving its character during the holidays, while the bank was shut up; but that on the Thursday following, Mr. Fordyce, finding affairs desperate, sent Mr. Fisher two notes for the money, which was lodged with Mr. Harrison in trust, Mr. Fisher being then out of town. The action was brought for the recovery of the notes, and the cause stands for judgment next term.”

On December 15 in the same year, we read: “Came on at Guildhall an important question, which arose on an issue directed by the Court of Chancery: and Cope and Co. of Amsterdam, and Hoare and Co. of London were plaintiffs, and the assignees of Fordyce and Co. defendants. The question was whether in a money circulation between Fordyce alone and the plaintiffs a guarantee given by Fordyce, in the name of the house, bound the house, though in the handwriting of Fordyce, and though the plaintiffs made no attempts to discover whether the house were privy to it or no. The jury found a verdict for the defendants.”

As late as April 7, 1795, the following advertisement appeared in the London Gazette:—“The creditors of the Estate of Neale, James, Fordyce, and Co. (who have not already received) may receive a final dividend of one shilling in the pound any Tuesday, Thursday, or Saturday morning, from 10 to 12 o'clock, at the Counting House of Messrs. Stonard and Ryland, corner of Savage Gardens, Tower Hill.”

In the “Table-talk and Bon-mots of Samuel Foote” we read that at the sale of Fordyce's effects at Roehampton, in 1772, Foote, who attended almost every day, bought nothing but a pillow. On being asked what particular use he could have for a single pillow—“As a narcotic,” said he; “for if the original proprietor could sleep so soundly on it, at the time of owing so much as he did, it may be of singular service to me on many occasions.”

Nelm, Anthony,

Goldsmith, between 1697 and 1722, at the Golden Bottle, Ave Mary Lane, Amen Corner.

Nelthorpe, Henry,

A goldsmith keeping running-cashes at the Rose, in Lombard Street, in 1675. In the same year, as we learn from the London Gazette, a Thomas Nelthorpe was likewise doing business as a goldsmith at the same sign.

Nelthorpe, Richard,

A goldsmith and banker, on premises in Exchange Alley, Cornhill, afterwards numbered 27, as I find from an endorsement of an old cheque in 1712, and likewise from an advertisement in the London Gazette, September 21, 1702, for one of his cash-notes which was lost. An advertisement in the Daily Courant testifies that he was there in 1713; and Sir Roger Hudson had a clerk named William Nelthorpe in 1714. As this is an uncommon name, these three Nelthorpes may have belonged to the same business.

Nevett, Thomas, also spelt Knevitt,

Goldsmith, of Lombard Street, between 1622 and 1655. His name appears in a return of a subsidy levied in Langbourne Ward in 1628-9, also in 1640, when it was included in a list of the inhabitants of this ward who were able to contribute towards raising a loan of £200,000 for Charles I. He evidently was one of those early goldsmiths who kept running-cashes, as we find from the records that he had moneys in his hands belonging to various persons. In the "Books of the Committee for the Advance of Money," in the Record Office, under the date of January 20, 1643, we find that he apparently owed £8000 as a delinquent. It further appears that he had a brother Edward, who was married and had ten children, and was imprisoned at Norwich. In 1651, according to the "Exchequer Bills and Answers, London and Middlesex, Commonwealth," No. 39, he lodged a complaint in the Exchequer against Thomas Spencer; but the document unfortunately is too faded to admit of deciphering. Thomas Nevett died in 1655, and was buried in St. Mary Woolnoth's, Lombard Street.

Goldsmith, Lombard Street, circa 1718-32. The following curious notice is taken from the Daily Post, May 4, 1732:—"Lost 6 silver spoons. Five shillings will be paid for each spoon, if brought to his shop, provided the person who stole them is secured."

Nicholls, Richard,

of St. Clement Danes, between 1711 and 1720, and probably much earlier. That he issued notes is proved by his advertising in the Post Boy of June 25, 1713, for one of his lost notes. In 1720 he had a partner, named Abraham Fowler, the style of the firm then being Nicholls and Fowler. Shortly after this period Richard Nicholls died, and Abraham Fowler joined James Roche, at the Three Squirrels, in Fleet Street, under the style of Abraham Fowler and Co. (See GOSLING.)

Nicholson and Co., 1813. (See BROWN, JANSON, AND CO.)Nightingale and Co.

This old goldsmith and banking business originated in the firm of Glegg and Vere about the year 1730. In 1733 a Samuel Vere signed on behalf of "Glegg and Vere."

They were established at the White Horse, in Lombard Street, facing Lloyd's Coffee-house, which subsequently became No. 70. In 1740 the name of Glegg is not met with in the Directory; and Mr. Joseph Vere took into partnership with him a Mr. Charles Asgill, who had been a clerk in the banking-house of Wm. Pepys and Co. Thus in 1740 the style of the firm became Vere and Asgill; and in 1750, Vere, Asgill, and Co.

On reference to the list of bankers in the "Royal Annual Kalendar" it is seen that in 1765 J. Wickenden, who had witnessed signatures for this firm in 1742, had been taken into the partnership, and that the style of the firm then became Sir Charles Asgill, Nightingale, and Wickenden.

As to Mr. John Nightingale, I am disposed to believe that he likewise had been a clerk in Pepys' bank,* as his name appears upon the old notes. Sir Charles Asgill, who was Alderman of Candlewick Ward, was elected Lord Mayor in 1757; on which occasion, as we learn from Wadmore's "History of the Skinners' Company," "a master of Defence and eight men were substituted for the eight men with quarter staffs, and fifty with javelins, a gentleman usher, thirty pensioners with gold chains; thirty whifflers with a star, had 3*s.* each and 1*s.* for dinner, and eight sweepers with brooms had the same." In 1775 John Wickenden left the old firm in which he had been clerk and partner to establish a new banking-house at 20, Lombard Street, under the style of Wickenden, Moffat, Kensington, and Boler; whereupon the firm became Asgill, Nightingale, and Nightingale. In 1789 it assumed the style of John, William, and George Nightingale.

In 1791 the name of John Nightingale disappeared from the firm, and the business was conducted by William and George Nightingale until 1796, when it became extinct, having probably suspended payment during the great panic.

William Donaldson, who in 1755 witnessed signatures for Sir Charles Asgill and Co., was doing the same office for Robert Child, Esq., and Co.; in which latter firm he became a partner in 1790.

Noke, William,

Goldsmith, circa 1585, of St. Peter's, Cheap.

Norcott, Daniel and Joseph,

Goldsmiths, at the Black a Moor's Head, corner of York Buildings, in the Strand. Their names first come to view in 1713, when they advertise for the recovery of a spaniel bitch that was lost. In 1720 they offer to pay a reward of ten guineas for the apprehension of a deserter from General Gore's regiment of Dragoons. In October of the same year figure in the Gazette as bankrupts.

Norman, Geoffrey,

Goldsmith, circa 1308, probably of St. Mary de Abbecherche.

Nutshawe, Thomas,

Goldsmith, 1564, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

* See HOLLINGSWORTH.

Ockold, Richard,

Goldsmith, also spelt Ocall, 1618–34, in which latter year he was buried in the church of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Olding and Co.

This banking business was established in Cornhill, about the year 1766, by Messrs. Welch and Rogers. They must have had a sign, but that I have been unable to ascertain. In the year 1770 their house was numbered 80, Cornhill; and in 1778 the style was Welch, Rogers, and Olding. Mr. Olding, who had been principal clerk for many years, was in 1771 made a partner at a salary. In 1785 the firm removed to 3, Freeman's Court, Cornhill, it then being Welch, Rogers, Olding, and Rogers; the last being Samuel Rogers, the poet. In 1799 it became Rogers, Olding, and Rogers; and in 1811 they amalgamated with Langston, Towgood, Cazalet, and Co., who appear to have started in 1777 as Langston, Polhill, Towgood, and Amory, at 29, Clement's Lane. The style of the firm in 1812 was Rogers, Towgood, and Co., at that address. The head of the firm, Mr. Samuel Rogers, enjoyed the distinguished reputation of being the Banker-poet. His earliest publication was entitled "An Ode to Superstition and other Poems," and his subsequent writings gave him an eminent place in literature. In 1792 he produced the "Pleasures of Memory," by which he is most widely known; "The Voyage of Columbus," in 1812; "Jacqueline," a tale, in 1814; "Human Life," in 1819; and "Italy," in 1822.

Rogers was more particular as to the quality than as to the quantity of his productions. He possessed the power of touching the finer feelings of his readers, and of versifying his enlarged observation of life and manners with great truth and effect. He was a man of most delicate refinement, and possessed a fine collection of pictures by the old masters, which he kept at his house, No. 22, St. James' Place.

The testimony of Lord Byron emphasizes the taste and culture of the fastidious bard:—

"If you enter his house, his drawing-room, his library—you of yourself say: 'This is not the dwelling of a common mind.' There is not a gem, a coin, a book thrown aside on his chimney-piece, his sofa, his table, that does not bespeak an almost fastidious elegance in the possessor."

Upon one occasion he saved poor Sheridan from a most uncomfortable dilemma. On May 15, 1816, Sheridan wrote to Rogers from his house in Savile Row: "They are going to put the carpets out-of window, and break into Mrs. S.'s room and take me. For God's sake let me see you." The result was that Rogers sent him £150, which arrived in time to save him from the inconvenience of an arrest.

He expended weeks upon a couplet before he brought it to the degree of finish exacted by his fastidious taste. When his friend Lord Ward had abused his confidence by writing, or assisting in writing, a satiric review of one of the poems, in the progress of which he professed to take the kindest interest, Rogers, after prolonged meditation, revenged himself by the production of an epigram, which for keenness of edge may vie with any in the language:—

"Ward has no heart, they say; but I deny it.
He has a heart—and gets his speeches by it."

To return from this literary digression to the changes in the style of the firm. It will be seen upon reference to the Directory that in 1838 it became Rogers, Olding, and Co.

On Sunday, November 24, 1844, an extraordinary robbery took place at their bank.

It was discovered that the strong-room had been opened, and that property in bank notes, gold, and bills of exchange, amounting to about £50,000, had been abstracted. The notes were principally large ones, there being no fewer than thirty-six one-thousand-pound notes, and £1200 in gold. The robbery had been effected without any one in the house knowing anything about it, notwithstanding there was an invalid partner upstairs, besides a clerk on duty as usual. A reward of £3000 was offered for the recovery of the property, and her Majesty's free pardon to any one giving such information as would lead to the capture of the burglars. The numbers and description of the stolen notes were freely advertised in all the newspapers; but nothing was heard either of the robbers or of the notes until a considerable time afterwards, when a parcel was received by the firm, addressed in a strange hand, containing all the bank notes that had been stolen.

The name of Rogers does not appear in the firm after 1855. In the following year it became Olding, Sharpe, and Co.; and in 1862 Olding, Osborne, and Co., who in 1866 transferred their business to the English Joint Stock Bank, which stopped payment in the same year, during the great money panic.

Oriental Bank Corporation,

Threadneedle Street; established in 1851. It stopped payment early in 1884. On July 18, 1884, it was re-formed under the style of the New Oriental Bank Corporation, Limited.

Otto

Was one of the earliest goldsmiths of whom we have any record. The name occurs in Doomsday Book as of one holding lands in Essex and Suffolk; and there appear to have been several successors to the office of engravers to the Mint of the same name—Otto the elder, in the reign of William I. or II., Otto the younger and William Fitz Otto in that of Henry I., and William Fitz Otto in that of John.

Ruding (in his "Annals of the Coinage") esteems it as probable that the first was the father of Otto the younger, to whom Henry I., in the early part of his reign, restored the Mystery of the Dies which his father had held, together with all other his offices and certain lands. These were subsequently confirmed to William Fitz Otto, goldsmith.

In the sixth year of John, states the same authority, William Fitz Otho was commanded by writ to make the dies for the Royal and Episcopal Mints at Chichester; and in the twenty-seventh of Henry III., he presented before the Barons of the Exchequer Richard Abel, goldsmith, to be maker and cutter of the money dies.

In the forty-ninth of Henry III., Thomas Fitz Otho claimed, in the Court of Exchequer, the broken dies, as belonging to him of inheritance, and had his claim allowed; and three years thereafter he presented, before the Barons, Ralph le Blund to the office of Cutter of the King's Dies.

Ruding has a large mass of information concerning the Ottos; but I am inclined to think I have quoted sufficient to prove that he was a goldsmith of some importance in his day.

Owen, William,

Goldsmith, between 1720 and 1733, at the Wheatsheaf, in Cheapside.

Paddesley, Sir John,

A goldsmith, sometimes called Paddisle and Patesley. He was constituted King's Exchanger by an indenture in 1421, was Master of the Works of Money in the Tower of London, and Mayor in 1440. By his will, dated March 7, 1450, he bequeathed all his lands and tenements, etc., in the parish of St. Mildred, Poultry, to the Goldsmiths' Company, on condition that they should keep the same in good repair, and should pay to five poor almsmen of their company 1*s.* 2*d.* each, weekly.

Palstock, John,

Was a goldsmith and banker in Fleet Street. The earliest record that can be ascertained about him is upon a cash-note of the year 1712, upon which his signature appears, signing for his master, Mr. Warner. In 1716 the same source shows that he had partners, as his firm was styled John Palstock and Co. About 1728 they amalgamated with Thomas Snow, the goldsmith; and the firm then became Snow and Palstock.

Panton, Thomas,

Goldsmith, circa 1664, of St. Alphage.

Pardo, Thomas,

Was a goldsmith keeping running-cashes, in 1677, at the Golden Anchor, in Lombard Street, afterwards No. 9. This end of the street, it may be explained, was demolished in order to make King William Street.

Pares and Heygate

Started as bankers at 63, Aldermanbury, about 1805. They moved to 25, New Bridge Street, Blackfriars, in 1817; and in 1833 they again moved to 6, New Broad Street. In the following year they became extinct.

Pargiter, John,

A famous goldsmith of Fleet Street, who seems to have filled the first of the many parish offices of St. Dunstan's, in 1636. When the Great Plague broke out, he removed his family to Kensington, where two of his sons died, and were buried in August of that year. It appears from a complaint lodged in the Exchequer that he was one of those who were constituted "Commissioners and Governors of the Excise and New Impost" from September 30, 1659, till January 1 following. His premises in Fleet Street, which were situated next door but one to Serjeants' Inn Gate, were destroyed in the Great Fire of 1666, and not rebuilt until three years after. One of his sons opened a shop in St. Clement's parish, where he was buried, in 1688.

For the above information I am indebted to Mr. T. C. Noble.

In Mr. Bright's edition of Pepys' Diary, under date October 21, 1661, occurs the following characteristic estimate of this goldsmith:—"Early with Mr. Moore by coach to Chelsy, to my Lord Privy Seale's; but have missed of coming time enough, and have taken up Mr. Pargiter, the goldsmith, who is the man of the world I do most know, and believe to be a cheating rogue."

In the "Historical Manuscripts Commission," under the head of "MSS. belonging to Mr. G. E. Frere of Roydon Hall, Norfolk," is a letter dated August 28, 1669, from T. Henshaw to Sir R. Paston: "Pargetor, the goldsmith, has been detected to have bought clippings of coined silver, and to have held correspondence with those kind of rogues: he has put in bail of £30,000, to answer at the Sessions, and his estate is already begged at adventure." This seems to bear out the opinion that Pepys held of him in 1661.

Pargiter, John,

Goldsmith, at Charing Cross, in 1687. He was probably a son of the above.

Paris, Mathew,

Goldsmith, circa 1629, of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Partridge, Affabell,

One of the chief goldsmiths to Queen Elizabeth. He obtained a grant of arms from William Harvey, Clarenceux, April 30, 1559. The Queen ordered plate of him to the value of £116*r* 17*s*. 9*d*., for distribution as New Year's Gifts in 1558.

Partridge, John,

Was at the Wheatsheaf, in Cheapside, from 1691 to 1697. The following advertisement in the London Gazette of July 15, 1697, speaks for his respectability and honesty:—"Wheareas about 3 years since a Silver Tankard was left with John Partridge, Goldsmith, at the Wheat sheaf in Cheapside, to mend, by a Person who is supposed to be dead; The Owner thereof discovering the marks, may have it again at the Place abovesaid."

Parys, Roger de,

Goldsmith, 1341. According to the "Calendat of Wills, Court of Hustings," he left several tene-ments in various parts of the City, to his wife and children, and some for pious uses.

Passill, John,

Goldsmith, at the King's Arms, Cheapside, in 1691. In the London Gazette of July 26, 1697, we read: "All Persons that have any Plate, Rings or Jewels, in the hands of Mr. John Passill, Gold-smith, at his lodgings at the Cock in Stocks Market, London, are desired to fetch them away before the 16th day of August next, or they will be disposed of."

Paterson, Thomas.

All that can be ascertained of this man is derived from an advertisement in 1714, in which it is stated that an Exchequer note was lost, and whoever would bring it to Thomas Paterson, banker, at the foot of the Haymarket, shall have five guineas reward, and no questions asked.

Paxtons, Cockerell, Traill, and Co.

Set up, in 1813, at 57, Pall Mall, as bankers; and in 1819 the Directory indicates their location at No. 8, Austin Friars. However, they became extinct in the year following.

Payne and Co.,

Of the King's Arms, Lombard Street. The only mention of this firm is to be found in the Daily Courant of May 15, 1710, in which they advertised for a leather case containing some of their receipts and other odd papers. In November of the same year Payne again advertised from the Queen's Arms. No doubt this was the same house.

Payne, or Paine, Edmond,

Goldsmith, 1700-15, at the Cat, in the Strand, near Exeter Change.

Pearce, Captain,

Of the Three Golden Cocks, in Cheapside, 1700-3. He probably was one of those goldsmiths who kept running-cashes, as in the "Little London Directory" of 1677 we find this shop occupied by Henry Lapley.

Pearce, Nathaniel, and John Mathew,

Goldsmiths and bankers of Lombard Street. How long they had been established is unknown; but they appeared as bankrupts in the London Gazette of February 28, 1720. Nathaniel Pearce was a beneficiary under the will of Gilbert Whitehall, a goldsmith.

Pearson,

Goldsmith, 1694, at the Three Black Lions, in the Strand.

Pearson, John,

A goldsmith, 1698, at the Unicorn, near Hungerford Market, in the Strand.

Peeles and Co., 1790. (See WILKES.)Peirson, Richard,

Was a goldsmith at the Acorn, over against St. Dunstan's Church, in Fleet Street. His name is to be found in the London Gazette for 1672 and 1698. I have a cheque bearing his endorsement dated September, 1712: "Pray pay the contents within to Mr. Richard Peirson, in Fleet Street, goldsmith, for the use of Mr. Samuel Cox." He apparently was succeeded by Edward Peirson, goldsmith and banker, whose endorsement is to be seen upon a draft in my possession dated 1718. He, however, subsequently failed; an advertisement in the London Gazette of March 2, 1730, notifying that the assignee was prepared to pay the second dividend in the estate.

Peke, John,

A goldsmith, residing in Wood Street in 1441.

Pemberton, Sir James,

Goldsmith; Sheriff in 1602, and Mayor in 1612. He erected a free school at Eccleston, in Lancashire, and gave £50 a year to it for ever. He also gave £500 to Christ's Hospital, and £200 to the Company of Goldsmiths. He died in 1613, and was buried in the church of St. John Zachary.

Pemberton, John,

Goldsmith, circa 1619, of St. Peter, Westcheap.

Pennistone, Anthony,

Goldsmith, Lombard Street, 1620-44.

Pepys, Jo,

Goldsmith, 1689-1700, near the Sessions House, Old Bailey.

Pepys, William, 1729. (See HOLLINGSWORTH.)Percefull, Peter, and Stephen Evans, or Evance,

Were goldsmiths at the Black Boy, in Lombard Street (now No. 29), as recorded by the "Little London Directory" of 1677. This name is an example of the phonetic spelling adopted in those days, as upon a draft dated 1688, endorsed over to Evans and Percivall, is signed Peter Percivall and Co., which would hardly be accepted as a regular endorsement in these days. Sir Stephen Evance was one of the goldsmiths appointed by the Treasury to receive contributions for raising one million of money, jointly with several others, upon the new duty upon salt and the new rates of excise, in April, 1694. He succeeded Sir Francis Child as jeweller to the King on May 20, 1697. Shortly after this Peter Percevall left the firm, as in the London Gazette of October 5, 1702, we read that one of their cash-notes were lost; a reward being offered for its recovery and return to Sir Stephen Evance and William Hales, goldsmiths, in Lombard Street. In an advertisement of 1708 Evans and Hales were, for the first time, styled bankers. They stopped payment in 1721.

Perring (Sir John, Bart.), Shaw, Barber, and Co.,

Of 72, Cornhill, appear to have been started in 1812 by the Hon. Simon Fraser, Perring, Shaw, Barber, and Co. Sir John Perring was Lord Mayor in 1803. This firm stopped payment on February 20, 1826.

Pewtress and Robarts

Were bankers opposite the Three Kings, in Lombard Street. The first time their name appears in the list in the Directory is in 1754; and in 1769 the firm became extinct.

Their name occurs several times upon the old notes of Child and Co. between those dates.

Philip, Sir Mathew,

Goldsmith; Mayor in 1463. He was knighted on the battle-field for bravery by Edward IV. (in his fifth year) when opposing the Kentish rebels.

Pickstock, John, Luce, and Co.,

Of 39, Clement's Lane, were in the list of bankers from 1842 to 1845.

Pile, John,

Goldsmit, circa 1637-41, of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields.

Pinckney, Henry,

Sometimes called Major Pinckney, carried on business as a goldsmith at the Three Squirrels, over against St. Dunstan's Church. The first record of him occurs in or about the year 1650. He is mentioned in Boyne as having issued a farthing token. Pepys, on December 1, 1660, writes: "Mr. Shepley and I went into London, and calling upon Mr. Pinckney, the goldsmith, he took us to a taverne, and gave us a pint of wine." In his "Memorials of Temple Bar," Mr. Noble states that, the Great Fire having destroyed the house, the terms of rebuilding were settled by the Commissioners in April, 1667; and in the marking out, it appears that "Major Pinckney's" property consisted of four houses leading on the south frontage "to the Temple Garden;" probably the churchyard. Again, from the occurrence in an advertisement in July, 1671, of the address of William Pinckney, goldsmith, at the Golden Dragon, near the Inner Temple Gate, the same able authority infers that it was the house adjoining the Three Squirrels, which subsequently became No. 19, Fleet Street. The name of William Pinckney (Sarah Pinckney, of St. Dunstan's, London, the relict of William Pinckney, died in 1681, and mentioned in her will Philip and Ismael Pinckney *) appears in the ledgers of Messrs. Blanchard and Child in 1663, as keeping an account with them, as all the principal goldsmiths did for the sake of convenience.

In 1680, we learn by an advertisement in the London Gazette, he was at the Golden Dragon, in Fleet Street; but the next time his name is mentioned—December, 1697—we find he has moved to the Sun, without Temple Bar, as will be shown by the following advertisement from the same source, dated April 3, 1704:—"Lost some time since, betwixt Temple Bar and Ludgate, a malt ticket, No. 6m438. Whoever brings the said ticket to Mr. Philip Pinckney, goldsmith, at the Sun, without Temple Bar, shall have 10^l reward. It is of no use to any one but the owner, payment being stopt at the Exchequer." In 1705 Mr. Pinckney's name again occurs in the London Gazette of July 19, 23, in an advertisement of the loss of a bay gelding.

The name of Philip Pinckney I have met with as an endorsement to a bank note in 1712; and a draft drawn upon Sir Francis Child by the Earl of Gainsborough, dated "y^e 12 May, 1705," runs as follows:—

"SIR,

"I desire you to pay unto Mr. Pinckney, goldsmith, three days after sight of this, the summe of forty-one pounds fourteen shillings."

This interesting old draft is endorsed by "P. Pinckney;" and it is the last item that has been observed of the Pinckneys. The London Gazette of May 17, 1708, announces a meeting of his creditors.

Pinfold, Edward,

A goldsmith, was at the Black Lyon, in Lombard Street, in 1686. The house was in the parish of St. Edmund the King and Martyr, and was subsequently numbered 65, as I have ascertained from the parish books, kindly placed at my disposal by the Rector, the Rev. Canon Benham.

Pinhorn and Co., 1819-24. (See WESTON.)Piphurst, Robert de,

Goldsmit, 1312, of Gudrunlane (Gutter Lane). He died possessed of several houses in various parts of the City.

* Extract from will at Doctors' Commons, favoured by Mr. Erlyman Pinckney, of Bradford-on Avon.

Pitman, Ursula,

Goldsmith, in 1684–90, was living at the King's Head, over against the Bull Inn, in Holborn.

Pitts, Captain,

A goldsmith, in 1695, was next door to the Cross Keys Tavern, in Holborn.

Planckney, Robert,

Goldsmith, died in 1580, and was buried in the church of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Player, Simon,

Goldsmith, circa 1632, of All Hallows, Lombard Street.

Pole and Co.

Marlar, Lascelles, Pell, and Down appear by the Directory to have started as bankers in 1773, and to have taken No. 10, Lombard Street, the premises then just vacated by Ladbroke and Co., who had gone to Bank Buildings. They did not, however, remain long in Lombard Street, as in 1776 they were located at 1, Bartholomew Lane. In 1777 Mr. Lascelles went out of the firm, and in 1782 it comprised only Down and Pell. In 1785 it became Down, Thornton, and Free; and in 1793 they took in Mr. Cornwall as junior partner. The style of the firm continued unaltered until 1816, when the London Directory gives it as Pole, Thornton, Free, Down, and Scott; and this was the style until December 12, 1825, when they stopped payment. The following statement concerning the failure of this house I excerpt from Lawson's "History of Banking":—

"The information furnished by Mr. Richards, the Deputy Governor of the Bank, to the Committee of the House of Commons, is so graphically descriptive of the state of London at this period that we cannot omit giving it a place in our history. It is taken from the shorthand writer's notes, and was nearly in the following words:—

"'I think,' says Mr. Richards, 'it must have been in the autumn of 1825 that the Bank began very seriously to contemplate what would be the result of the speculations and of various circumstances that were going forward. They increased in October and November, when there continued to be a very great demand for gold, which, I think, began about April; and, I believe, it advanced down to the first Saturday in December. Not only the Bank, but, I believe, every man's mind connected with the City was in an extreme state of excitement and alarm. I think I can recollect, in the first Saturday in December, having come home after a very weary and anxious day from the Bank, receiving a visit from two members of this committee, and one of our bankers, at my own house, stating a difficulty in which a banking-house near to the Bank was placed.'

"'I will not assert it, but I believe they had gone so far as to take care of the clearing of that house that evening, so as that it might fulfil its engagements. The object of that visit was to ascertain what would be my views upon the subject. I was called upon because the Governor was particularly connected with the house of Pole and Co. by marriage and other circumstances of relationship.'

"'After speaking upon the subject for some time, I was pretty sure that I could answer for the firmness of the Bank; and I ventured to encourage these gentlemen to hope that, upon anything like a fair statement, the Bank would not let this concern fall through.'

"'It was agreed that upon the following morning (Sunday) we should meet as many directors as I could get together, with the three gentlemen who had called upon me, at the house of one of them, and that in the mean time some eminent merchants, friends of the house, should also be called to the meeting to assist with their opinion. We so met; and, after hearing all the facts, which were collected in the first instance by the bankers and the merchants present, the directors authorized their Chair to say that assistance should not be wanting. It was agreed that £300,000 should be placed at the disposal of Pole and Co. the next morning, for which the Bank was to receive, and did receive, as securities, a number of bills of exchange and notes of hand; and, over and above, a mortgage on Sir Peter Pole's property, which was to ride over the whole.

"They fought it through till Thursday or Friday pretty manfully, and up to Saturday evening, when their position was such that, without the assistance of the same eminent individuals who had taken part before, the clearing would not have gone right. Sunday passed, and on Monday morning the storm began; and till Saturday night it raged with an intensity that it is impossible for me to describe. On Saturday night it had somewhat abated. The Bank had taken a firm and deliberate resolution to make common cause with the country as far as their humble efforts would go. In the following week things began to get a little more steady; and, by the 24th, what with the one-pound notes which had gone out, and other things, people began to be satisfied; and then it was for the first time in a fortnight that those who had been busied in that terrible scene could recollect that they had families who had some claim upon their attention. It happened to me not to see my children for that week."

Forty-four country banks were connected with this firm.

Polle, Thomas,

A goldsmith, in 1369. He was buried in St. Matthew's church, Cheape, in 1395.

Porklee, Thomas de, Senior,

Goldsmith, of Wood Street, 1348, left his shop to be sold for pious uses.

Portman, John,

Was a goldsmith in Lombard Street, prior to 1644, when his name appears in the Parish Register of St. Mary Woolnoth, and for many years afterwards. His name occurs in June 22, 1670, in one of Alderman Edward Backwell's ledgers at Child's, where I have seen the following entry in the account of Henry, Earl of St. Albans :—

"Mr. Portman, for 6 plates,	} £30 13. 6.
Wey. 108 ^{oz} 5 ^{dwt}
6 spoons and 6 forks,	} £7 5. 1.
Wey. 22 ^{oz} 17 ^{dwt}
And to Mr. Madox for 6 knives, £3 0. 0.

This John Portman was one of those goldsmiths who had money in the Exchequer in 1672, when Charles II. closed it. The sum he lost was £76,760 18s. 2d., for which he received the annual interest of £4605 13s. His son, George Portman, also a goldsmith, died in 1672. His name does not occur in the list of goldsmiths for 1677; but he continued his trade, as we learn from the Assignation Books (Record Office) that he transferred several large sums of money at the Exchequer, in 1678, into private names. John Portman died in the Fleet Prison, and was buried in St. Mary Woolnoth's on December 2, 1683.

Potter, Nathaniel,

Goldsmith, at the Bunch of Grapes, in Cheapside, 1659. He gave notice in the Mercurius Politicus of March in that year, that "if any Person had lands of clear title of the value of £4 or £5000, within ten or twelve miles of the South-sea, between Plimouth and Portsmouth, who would sell or dispose thereof, should signify as much to him, where he may understand of a Chapman for the same."

Potter, Thomas,

Goldsmith, 1662, of St. Mary-at-Hill.

Praeds and Co.,

189, Fleet Street. This business was started by Mr. Praed in London, in 1803. The family had long been settled as bankers at Truro, in Cornwall; indeed, they are said to have been noted as early as the sixteenth century.

James Praed was Sheriff of the county in 1654, and M.P. for St. Ives in 1661.

In 1717 the family became extinct by the death of Mr. William Praed, who left all his property to William Mackworth, who assumed the name of Praed. His grandson, William, married the daughter and heiress of Barneby Backwell, Esq., of Tyringham, Bucks, and great-granddaughter of Sir Francis Child.

The house Mr. William Praed took for his bank was very celebrated, being known as the Wax Work dépôt of Mrs. Salmon, who may be said to have been the Madame Tussaud of the time. In his "Memorials of Temple Bar," Mr. Noble writes: "In the reign of Queen Anne, at the Golden Salmon in St. Martin's, near Aldersgate, was to be seen the Royal Court of England, 104 figures, all made by Mrs. Salmon, 'who teaches the full art, and sells all sorts of moulds and glass eyes.' Also the famous Temple of Diana, etc., by Mrs. Salmon, who is removed from St. Martin le Grand to the Golden Salmon at Temple Bar, near St. Dunstan's Church, which is more convenient for the quality's coaches to stand unmolested." She subsequently occupied 189, Fleet Street, until it was taken by Mr. Praed, when it was pulled down, and the present bank built, in 1802, from designs by Sir John Soane.

In 1805 the Directory shows that the partners in the firm were Praed, Digby, Box, Babbage, and Co. In 1807 it was Praed, Digby, Box, Barnard, and Newcombe. Their address was 71, Fleet Street, in 1810, when the name of Mackworth is to be observed as that of the second partner. Praed, Mackworth, and Newcombe continued to be the style of the firm until 1818, when Mr. Vere Fane was admitted as junior partner; and no further change took place until 1836, when the name of Newcombe disappeared, and the firm became Praed, Mackworth, Fane, and Praed. 1838 was the last year that Mr. Mackworth's name was associated with the firm. In the next year it consisted of William Tyringham Praed, Vere Fane, Bulkley John Mackworth Praed, and Patrick Johnson.

Since 1850 the style of the firm has been Praeds and Co. It now consists of the following partners:—

Charles Tyringham Praed.

Herbert Bulkley Praed.

Mackworth Bulkley Praed.

The following curious account, published in the Examiner of January 16, 1814, serves as an illustration of the risks bankers ran in those days, by sending valuable parcels by coaches:—

"The Buckingham stage-coach has been in the practice of carrying several bankers' parcels, for a number of years past, to and from London; and, though the greatest precautions were usually taken, it has been lately robbed in a very extraordinary manner. The coach brought a parcel from the Aylesbury Bank, containing bills and notes to a considerable amount, supposed to be several thousands, directed to Messrs. Praeds, in Fleet Street. It was put into the strong box, made for conveying valuable parcels, which was locked and strapped, and the coachman put the key into his pocket as usual, and the box was placed under him. When he got to the Green Man and Still, in Oxford Street, he opened the box to take out another valuable parcel, directed to another banker, at which time the parcel from the Aylesbury Bank to Messrs. Praeds was safe. The coach stopped again opposite the Bell and Crown Inn, where a passenger left the coach, and took two parcels with him out of the front boot, at which time the coachman had every reason to believe that the box was safe. The coach did not stop again until it got to the King's Arms Inn, where it puts up.

"The coachman went into the office to settle his way bill and accounts, which engaged him about ten minutes; and in the mean time the coach was turned round, as usual, by a man employed in the yard. The coachman then went to unlock the box to take out the parcel directed to Messrs. Praeds, when he discovered that the top of the box had been forced off, and the parcel taken away. The top of the box could not then be found, but on Monday morning it was found near the coach in the yard. The business was investigated at Bow Street, but no person was in custody. One Rodney has since been committed."

Prescott, Cave, Buxton, Loder, and Co.

This banking house was established in Threadneedle Street, at the house afterwards numbered 57, on January 1, 1766, by Messrs. George Prescott, Andrew Grote, William Culverden, and John Hollingsworth, under the style of Prescott, Grote, and Co. For this information I am indebted to the courtesy of the present firm.

The following changes I have gleaned from the various Directories. In 1778 they were located at 62, Threadneedle Street; and in 1799 the name of Culverden does not appear, the firm standing as Prescott, Grote, and Hollingsworth. In 1801 it was Prescott, Grote, and Prescott; and in 1820, Grote, Prescott, and Grote; which continued to be the style of the firm until 1838, when the elder Mr. Grote retired, and three new partners were admitted. It then stood thus: Prescott, Grote, Ames, Baillie, and Grote. In the following year the name of Cave was substituted for Baillie; and the published lists for the year 1848 no longer contain that of Ames, which had been associated with the firm for the past ten years. In that year the style became Prescott, Grote, Cave, and Cave.

Mr. Joseph Grote retired December 31, 1874, when the style became Prescott, Cave, Foster, Buxton, Loder, and Co. Upon the retirement of Mr. W. K. Foster on June 30, 1875, the style became Prescott, Cave, Buxton, Loder, and Co. It now consists of the following partners:—

Charles Andrew Prescott.
Henry Warner Prescott.
Francis William Buxton.
Wilfrid Hans Loder.
Alfred Fowell Buxton.
Charles Cave Cave.

Preston, John,

Goldsmith, circa 1661, of St. Clement Danes.

Price, Sir C., and Co.

The well-known banking business of Sir Charles Price, Marryat, and Co. originated in the bank of Robert and Thomas Harrison, established at 77, Ironmonger Lane, about the year 1785. In 1788 they were located at 1, Mansion House Street.

In 1794 the name of Harrison and Co. is not seen in the list of bankers; but I observe that Sir James Sanderson, Brenchley, Stacey, Parker, and Newman were carrying on banking business at 1, Mansion House Street.

In 1791 Sir James Sanderson and Mr. Brenchley were partners in a banking-house, doing business under the style of Sanderson and Co., in Southwark. They dissolved partnership in 1794.

In 1796 the style of the firm was Sanderson, Harrison, Prickett, and Newman. In 1799 Sir James Sanderson's name drops out of the list, the style then being Harrison and Co. In 1807 it was Harrison, Kay, and Chapman; and in 1810 Harrisons, Price, Kay, and Chapman. Sir Charles Price was Lord Mayor in 1802. In 1814, the name of Harrison disappearing from the firm, it became Sir Charles Price, Bart., Sir William Kay, Bart., Charles Price, junior, and George Chapman. In 1817 it was Sir C. Price, Kay, and Coleman; and in 1819 Marryat, Price, Kay, and Chapman. In 1823 Joseph Marryat, M.P., Sir W. Kay, Sir C. Price, and J. Coleman were conducting the business. In 1825 Sir William Kay became head partner, with Sir C. Price, Joseph Marryat, and J. Coleman. Mr. Marryat is well known as having been a large collector of porcelain, and as the author of a valuable book on Pottery and Porcelain.

Price, Sir C., and Co.—continued.

In 1833 the style of the firm became Price, Marryat, and Co.; and in 1835 they moved from Mansion-house Street to King William Street, where they remained under the same style until 1866, when they stopped payment.

Price, Heneage,

Was a goldsmith carrying on his trade in 1681 at the Golden Lion, without Temple Bar, on the south side of the Strand. He was one of the numerous family of John Price, who possessed landed property in Monmouthshire, by his wife Mary, one of the daughters and co-heiresses of William Greene, of East Barnet. Heneage Price was born there and baptized on September 17, 1659. The Rev. F. C. Cass informs me that an old Vestry minute-book records a resolution that a legacy to the parish of Monken Hadley, of £100 bequeathed by the Right Hon. Henry Coventry, should be placed in the hands of Mr. Heneage Price, goldsmith, in the Strand, nigh Temple-barr. On May 22, 1690, he was appointed treasurer for receiving contribution money of one Richard Master, a bankrupt; and the London Gazette of November 14, 1706, records that he himself was a bankrupt. He died and was buried at East Barnet on August 3, 1709.

Price, Thomas,

Was a goldsmith. The first record we have of him is furnished by the London Gazette of May 10, 1675, where the following advertisement is to be seen: "Lost old silver seal and Queen Elizabeth's sixpence tyed to it with a red narrow satin ribbon—the arms of the seal is a cross flory in each Dexter, and three cross crosslets in each sinister quarter, with mantling and a buck couchant for the crest. Whoever will bring the same to Mr. Thomas Price, goldsmith, at the Goat in Lumbard Street, shall have a very good reward." He was one of those keeping running cashes in 1677, as the "Little London Directory" shows he was at the Goat, in Lumbard Street.

I have met with his name on a draft drawn upon Child and Rogers in 1684 by one Will Barber, who writes: "Pray pay to Mr. Thomas Price, goldsmith, Lumber Streete, London, two hundred pounds." It is endorsed by him.

A few years afterwards, he appears to have taken into partnership with him one Samuel Price, as in the London Gazette of November 4, 1686, we are informed that a meeting of the creditors of Thomas and Samuel Price of London, goldsmiths, was convened for the 10th of that month. Their assignees give notice in the Gazette of December, 1715, and many weeks afterwards, that they have recovered some property of considerable value, and desire the creditors to send in their names with a view to distribution.

The Public Record Office enables us to learn somewhat of this member of the goldsmith's craft. The following short abstract is made of very lengthy proceedings instituted in the Court of Exchequer. In "Exchequer Bills and Answers, London and Middlesex, William III," No. 562, Trinity Term, 1694, we read the complaint of the Attorney-General, on behalf of the King and Queen, against "Thomas Price of London, goldsmith, formerly using the trade of a banker, and thereby receiving great sums of money of divers persons who paid the same into his hands." Among those who so entrusted him was his brother-in-law, John Price, who was Receiver-General for James II. in Ireland, and who, in that official capacity, had paid to Thomas Price large sums as "monies belonging to the late King James the Second." A special commission was opened on December 22, to inquire what sum really was thus due by John Price to James II.; whereby it was found that Thomas Price had received the sum of £10,602 6s. 9d. This was seized on behalf of the King, and Thomas Price was taken into custody by the Serjeant-at-Arms. Mention is made of Bernard Taylor, gentleman, as Price's trustee.

The answer of Thomas Price admits the fact that he, "being a banker," had received large sums of money, and treats of his marriage settlement and his interest in Irish iron-works. Both he and John had, according to the details given, much property in London.

Prince, James,

Was a goldsmith, residing in the parish of St. Clement Danes, Strand, in 1694. He left £5 to the poor of the parish, and £10 to his late servant and apprentice, Robert Blanchard, afterwards in partnership with Francis Child at Y^o Marygold.

Prince, John,

Goldsmith, circa 1637, of St. Andrew, Holborn.

Puget, Bainbridges, and Co.,

12, St. Paul's Churchyard, started in 1832. In 1864 the number of their house became 5, St. Paul's Churchyard. This firm suspended payment in 1866. The original style had undergone no alteration during its existence.

Punge, Clement,

Goldsmith, 1637, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth. He died in 1665.

Purvey, Thomas,

Goldsmith, 1584, of St. Leonard, Foster Lane.

Pybus and Co., 1774-1813. (See CALI.)Radcliffe, Henry,

Of Lombard Street. From a book in the Public Record Office, entitled, "Extracts from Books of Committee for the Advance of Money," under the head of Lombard Street, October 10, 1645, we find that Henry Radcliffe had "secretly hid" in his house £7000 belonging to two delinquents. We have been unable to determine to what particular trade he belonged, but we surmise he was a goldsmith keeping running cashes.

Ram, Stephen,

Goldsmith and banker, at the Angel in Lombard Street, in 1700. His name is mentioned in 1714, when the finder of a diamond and ruby ring dropt near the Queen's Arms Tavern, in Lombard Street, is requested to take the same to him. I have a draft, endorsed by Joseph Bourne for Mr. Stephen Ram, dated July, 1719.

Ramme, Anthony,

Goldsmith, circa 1610, of St. Matthew, Friday Street.

Ramsbottoms, Newman, Ramsbottom, and Co.

Were bankers at 72, Lombard Street, between about 1806 and 1816.

Rands, Henry,

Goldsmith, circa 1673, of St. Matthew, Friday Street.

Ransom, Bouverie, and Co.

This well-known West End banking firm was founded by Mr. Ransom, who took into partnership Sir F. B. Morland and Mr. Hammersley, under the style of Ransom, Morland, and Hammersley, who established themselves about 1786 at 57, Pall Mall. That continued to be the style of the firm until 1796, when Mr. Hammersley left them to start a new bank, which he set up at 76, Pall Mall (For particulars of this house see under the name of HAMMERSLEY.) From that date to 1814 the firm was known as Ransom, Morland, and Co., carrying on business at 56, Pall Mall.

In 1819 Sir F. B. Morland left the firm to establish a bank of his own under the style of Morland and Co. In the following year the Directory shows that Ransom and Co. moved to No. 34, Pall Mall; in 1821 to 25, Pall Mall; and in 1823 to 1, Pall Mall East, at which house the bank is still located.

At the death of Mr. Ransom, the Hon. Douglas Kinnaird (fourth son of the seventh Lord Kinnaird, by Elizabeth, daughter of Gaffin Ransom, Esq.) became head partner. He was the uncle of the late head partner, the Honourable Arthur Kinnaird; and it was he who built the premises Nos. 1 and 2, Pall Mall East, as a banking-house.

The style of the firm was Ransom and Co. until Messrs. Bouvierie, Murdoch, Bouvierie, and James, of 11, Haymarket, amalgamated with them in 1856; since which time the style of the firm has been Messrs. Ransom, Bouvierie, and Co.

In 1876 the firm consisted of the following partners:—

The Hon. Arthur Kinnaird, M.P. (afterwards Lord Kinnaird).
 James Gordon Murdoch.
 Philip Pleydell Bouvierie.
 Charles Townshend Murdoch.
 Arthur Fitzgerald Kinnaird.
 Henry Hales Pleydell Bouvierie.

It was announced in the Times of June 25, 1888, that Messrs. Barclay, Bevan, Tritton, and Co. had entered into partnership with Messrs. Ransom, Bouvierie, and Co., to take effect from July 2, under the style of Barclay, Bevan, Tritton, Ransom, Bouvierie, and Co., and that the business would be conducted, as heretofore, in Lombard Street and Pall Mall East; the partners being:

Messrs. Robert C. L. Bevan, J. Gurney Barclay, Francis A. Bevan, Charles T. Murdoch, M.P., Robert Barclay, J. Herbert Tritton, Lord Kinnaird, Henry H. P. Bouvierie, Wilfrid A. Bevan, and Edward H. Barclay. Messrs. Seymour P. Bouvierie and Roland Y. Bevan hold the signature of the firm.

Read, George,

A goldsmith of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth, and probably a resident in Lombard Street, being as early as 1699 described in the registers of the parish as a "Bancker." This is an early date for the term.

Reade, Sir Bartholomew,

A goldsmith, was King's Exchanger in 1482, Master of the Mint in 1485, and Mayor in 1502. He was buried in the Charterhouse. He gave £100 to his parish church, that of St. John Zachary, in which his wife was buried, with a fair monument representing her in the habit of a widow. By his will, which was dated October 19, 1505, he bequeathed to the Goldsmiths' Company a great mansion in the parish of St. John Zachary, and divers other tenements in that and other parishes. He also left means for founding the Grammar School at Cromer, in Norfolk.

Remington and Co.

The banking business of Messrs. Remington, Stephenson, Remington, and Toulmin originated at the Unicorn, in Lombard Street, in the firm of Knight and Jackson. About the year 1729 they appear to have been doing a considerable business; we may therefore assume for them a greater antiquity.

The following is an example of the curious business undertaken by some of the bankers in the early days. It is extracted from the London Gazette of March 22, 1735:—

"The Nobility, Gentry and others who have viewed the original Picture of Cupid and Venus by Michael Angelo Buonaroti at Essex House, Essex Street, Strand, may receive their Tickets numbered, checked and filled up for Saturday the 29 March next at Messrs. Knight and Jackson, Bankers, Lombard Street, on paying 10 guineas per ticket for the same."

"N.B.—If the 50 tickets are not taken away by the 28th of the said March we will return the money paid on that account, the Monday following on delivery up of the tickets given by us." This notice was signed "Knight and Jackson."

Their signatures are seen upon a large number of old drafts between 1729 and 1750, in which latter year the firm is represented by W. Hoggart, who, as we shall see, subsequently became a partner. About 1763 the firm was styled Knight, Batson, and Co., who were located in Lombard Street, facing Lloyd's. The house was numbered 69 in 1770.

In 1766 the Directory shows that the firm was Batson, Stephenson, and Hoggart. Rowland Stephenson was a clerk signing for Martins in 1752.

In 1785 the name of Hoggart is not seen in the list, but it is succeeded by the names of two new partners; thus, the firm in that year was Batson, Stephenson, Grase, and Glover. R. Glover was a clerk signing for Knight, Batson, and Co. In 1794 it was Stephenson, Batson, Remington, and Smith; and from 1824 to 1828 it was Remington, Stephenson, Remington, and Toulmin.

Mr. Lawson, in his "History of Banking," states that early in December, 1828, some unfavourable reports had got abroad respecting the credit of Messrs. Remington and Co., of Lombard Street, bankers, in consequence of which many customers removed their accounts from them.

To counteract these rumours and to allay all apprehensions, five of the principal bankers in London investigated the affairs of the bank, with the condition of which they were so well satisfied that each of them advanced £20,000 on such securities as they found the bank to possess. They further made a declaration of their entire conviction of the solvency of the house, and went so far as to induce many parties who had withdrawn their accounts to return them.

This condition of things, however, did not last long, as on December 27, 1828, it was reported that Mr. Rowland Stephenson, the active partner, had absconded with a large sum of money. He was M.P. for Leominster, and Treasurer of St. Bartholomew's Hospital, etc., etc. The effect of this serious event was that they were obliged to suspend payment; a step that caused the utmost consternation in the City. It transpired that Mr. Stephenson had been addicted to gambling, and that his defalcations extended to £200,000. He made off with £70,000 in Exchequer bills belonging to various customers of the bank.

The mode adopted by Stephenson to deceive his partners with respect to the various deposits of Exchequer bills was simple enough. He had sealed packets with the names and addresses of the depositors and the amount of Exchequer bills endorsed thereon; so that the bankers, who investigated the affairs of the bank, concluding that the actual securities were inclosed in the envelopes, did not examine them further.

Rowland Stephenson was charged with bankruptcy and embezzlement, and a warrant was issued for the apprehension of himself and of his clerk, Lloyd, with a reward of £1000 for the former, and of £300 for the latter.

After various adventures they succeeded in getting to Clovelly, where they met with a vessel bound for Savannah.

On January 16, 1829, a second meeting of creditors was held in Basinghall Street, when the total amount of debts was estimated at about £425,551 10s. 5d., the assets being about £344,385.

Messrs. Remingtons declared a dividend on June 24, 1829, of seven shillings in the pound; the separate estates of Remington and Toulmin yielding twenty shillings, and of Stephenson eighteen pence in the pound.

The News of January 4, 1829, furnishes the following particulars of the failure, and of the absconding of Mr. Rowland Stephenson:—

"We recollect no event in the commercial world since the time of Fauntleroy, (and his case, bad as it was, must be allowed to be comparatively trifling), which has made so much impression on the public mind as the absconding of Mr. Rowland Stephenson, the most efficient partner in the Banking firm of Remington, Stephenson, Remington, and Toulmin. Of this affair and the singular circumstances attending it, we shall endeavour to give as succinct an account as possible.

"It now turns out that Mr. Stephenson, contrary to his usual custom, absented himself from the Banking-house the whole of Friday se'nights. Under the difficulties the house then laboured, we rather wonder this unusual circumstance did not excite on the part of the other members of the firm, some suspicion and inquiry; but the truth is, there are so many things to wonder at in this affair, that we have no inclination to dwell on this single instance of credulous supineness. Anxious inquiries were made by different persons at the Banking-house for him all that day, but he came not. How far his partners would have continued to expect him without seeking after him, we know not—for, on the Saturday, they were informed by a gentleman that Mr. Stephenson had left his house in St. Bartholomew's Hospital (of which establishment he was Treasurer), at a very early hour that morning. The fact is, that Mr. Stephenson had made an appointment with a professional gentleman to execute some mortgage deeds at 9 o'clock on Saturday morning; and it was the calling of this gentleman at that hour, which caused the discovery of Mr. Stephenson's absence. When this intelligence was known at the Banking-house, although its importance was very considerably enhanced by the simultaneous absence of a Mr. Lloyd, one of the clerks, yet it does not appear that the smallest idea of criminality was attached to Mr. Stephenson's conduct, by any of his confiding partners. They went on at the Banking-house, paying and receiving as usual; and it was not until the afternoon of Saturday, when Mr. Remington's cheque on the Bank of England for a sum far within the claim of the house, as stated in their books, was returned unpaid, that suspicion began to be excited, and the necessity of stopping payment fully ascertained. All was now alarm and confusion; and the detection of one villainous act on the part of the absentee quickly led to that of another. It was now discovered that all the deposits, such as Exchequer-bills, bonds of foreign stock, &c., &c., which had been lodged in the house by customers, as in a place of security, were withdrawn—that false accounts had been kept; and a system of deception as to the real state of the funds of the establishment, practised and carried on for many years. However ingeniously this deceptive system may have been concocted, aided as it was by a clerk in the house, whom Mr. Stephenson had corrupted, great blame manifestly attaches to the other partners. Had they used even the common vigilance of commercial men, many things must have occurred long ago to create suspicion as to Mr. Stephenson's criminality. It is not, however, on them alone that a great weight of deserved censure rests. Fif of the most eminent of the London Bankers undertook the beginning of the week, in which the house stopped, to examine into its concerns with a view either of affording the firm pecuniary aid, or of recommending them to suspend their payments. These precious examiners, with the fate of Faunderoy fresh in their recollection, never seem to have suspected that a banker could, by any possibility, be a villain—they therefore took all the accounts for genuine, which were presented to them. A balance of cash, made to amount, on paper, as in the house, to many thousand pounds, they passed without asking to see the money—much less counting it:—they saw, on paper, that the house had a credit account with the Bank of England of £44,000—not one of them had the indelicacy to cross over to the Bank, and ask the question, whether such balance was correct?—in fine, they swallowed all which was placed before them; and the result of this farcical investigation was, that the house was by them declared perfectly solvent, and that the embarrassments under which it laboured were only of a temporary nature. This was not all:—the five wiseacres advanced (on good security) £20,000 each to sustain the sinking firm. The consequence of this gullibility on the part of these gentlemen, was, a reaction in favour of the house:—many who had money there allowed it to remain; and others who had drawn their balances out, reinstated them. Much of the private misery attending this failure, and absconding, has been produced by the want of due vigilance on the part of this delegation of Bankers. We admit that, to inquire whether the deposits remained in the iron chests around them, would have been tantamount to have asked the firm—‘Have you been swindlers, or thieves?’—but in their deputed characters as investigators, they should have done more than merely look at the paper balances laid before them. They should have known them to have been correct.

“We now come to the extent of the robberies perpetrated by the fugitive. These, as far as they are known, for fresh instances of fraud are every hour being discovered, exceed in amount three hundred thousand pounds! They have been particularized as follow:—

Taken by Mr. S. in cash and bank notes a short time before he absconded (some say on the evening of the Friday he was first absent)	£58,000†
Exchequer-bills deposited by the London Life Association Company	39,000‡
Ditto, left as deposit by Ex-Sheriff Parkins, who is in America	15,000
Ditto, left as deposit by a Portuguese gentleman of the name of Braga	5,000
Ditto, deposited by the assignees of a Bankrupt's estate	14,000
Amount of 4 per cents. belonging to individuals who had given the house powers to sell	40,000
Amount of consols ditto, ditto	26,000
Amount of Brazilian Bonds ditto, ditto	60,000
Long Annuities ditto	3,500

“In addition to the above, we could almost fill our paper with the details of the lesser depredations of this culprit. A very few days before his absconding, he borrowed £500 from a gentleman, a

* The actual balance at the bank, it is said, was only £4000, but by the addition of a figure of 4, was made to appear £44,000. On this latter sum Mr. Remington in his emergency drew: and it was only on the return of his cheque dishonoured, that he suspected the accuracy of his own accounts.

† It seems that, with a daring kind of effrontery, Mr. Stephenson drew and left behind him a cheque on the house for this sum: as if the house owed him so much on his private account.

‡ This establishment have also, unfortunately, a cash balance in the house in their favour to the amount of £12,000—caused by some insurances they were about to pay on the life of the late Sir Henry Torrens.

private friend, who, he must at the time have known, never would have been repaid. All Rumford, in the neighbourhood of which town Marshalls his principal residence was, rings of his villainies. He is stated to have bought several small estates around him, and to have managed to get the title deeds, and to persuade the proprietors to leave the money with him as a banker. Our informant says that a miller retired from trade had £6000 in the funds, which was sold through Stephenson, and the money lodged with him at 5 per cent. interest; that the poor tradesmen of Rumford are in a state of great distress, Mr. Stephenson owing £600 to his butcher, £400 to his baker, and to several of the poorer classes more or less, according to their circumstances or trades. In fine, no expedient where raising money was in question seems to have been too low for Stephenson's adoption. A number of bills, it is said, are at present in circulation, drawn upon Stephenson by some day-labourer, or fellow altogether destitute of property, which, with a name upon it so well known, have been readily discounted, and the amount, without doubt, has passed into Stephenson's hands. Of these bills not a shilling of course will be paid.

"We now come in the course of detail, to the means which have been adopted to apprehend this culprit, and these seem to have been bottomed on the same scale of activity as those which the five examining Bankers adopted to detect his practises in the Banking-house. It was not until Wednesday last, the fifth day after his absconding, that the Committee of Bankers, who are so ready in prosecuting every poor wretch who commits the smallest forgery on any of their fellows, even to the gallows,* offered any reward for Stephenson's capture, and then it was so inadequate in amount to the case (only three hundred pounds or the principal, and one hundred for Lloyd the clerk) that it was laughed at. Resolved at length to do the liberal thing, the same parties on Thursday, put forth bills offering one thousand pounds for the apprehending of Stephenson, and three hundred pounds for that of the clerk.—Warrants were also obtained from the Lord Mayor, and backed by the Middlesex Magistrates on Thursday. Now, had these steps been taken earlier, there is little doubt that both the runaways would ere now have been in custody. It seems that Stephenson, after dining on Friday with a well-known vocalist at the west end of the town, returned to his house in St. Bartholomew's Hospital. About four o'clock on Saturday morning, he left that place in his own carriage, a brown chariot with a pair of grey horses, and was driven to the neighbourhood of the Regent's Park. There it is said he awaited the arrival of Lloyd (the clerk). Lloyd slept at the Banking-house, and is supposed to have made up a parcel of notes and securities after the shutting of the house on Friday evening. Soon after midnight he was heard to go down stairs, and to leave the house. He is supposed then to have joined Mr. Stephenson, and to have proceeded to Portsmouth, from whence they crossed to the Isle of Wight, and embarked on board the Cambrian packet for New York, which was said to have sailed on Friday, but which it is suspected remained off the island till Stephenson arrived. His carriage conveyed him the first stage, but did not return for some days, in consequence, probably, of directions given by Mr. Stephenson, to prevent the route he had taken from being traced. The coachman left the stables as soon as he had brought back the carriage and horses, and has not been seen since. It was great negligence on the part of those employed to look after Stephenson that his stables were not watched—the more especially, as it was soon ascertained that he had left town in his own carriage. However, as to the embarkation, we do not believe a word of it, and we must have positive and direct evidence before we can entertain the idea that he is out of the country. That he did not embark in the Cambrian is ascertained, as the officers were on the spot, prior to the sailing of that vessel. The report that he has escaped by a New York Liverpool packet ship is also without foundation—not one has sailed since his absconding. We repeat, we must have good evidence to the contrary before we can believe he has left the country. America is his only refuge, for in any part of the Continent he would be as amenable to British justice as in Lombard Street.

* It is a singular circumstance that a few years ago a man who had committed a forgery on the house of Messrs. Remington and Co., was prosecuted by the Committee, found guilty, and eventually hanged.

“Several hair-breadth escapes from losses have mixed themselves up with the disastrous consequences of this event. On the failure of Frys and Chapman, a deposit of £14,000 in Exchequer-bills, belonging to one of the Foreign Mining Associations, was removed by the Secretary into the custody of Remington and Co., which coming to the knowledge of one of the directors, a man of some sagacity, he ordered the Exchequer-bills to be removed immediately into the Bank of England, where they were lodged in safe custody only a few days before the house stopped. Mr. Stephenson’s securities, as Treasurer of St. Bartholomew’s Hospital, also had a narrow escape. It seems that the morning of his absconding they suspected something wrong, and with some difficulty prevailed on the President, Sir James Shaw, to sign a cheque withdrawing £5000 from their balance in the Banking-house of £5,800. This cheque was received at 11 o’clock, and before two, the firm stopped. The remaining £800 will in course be lost.

“It now turns out that Mr. Stephenson, whose family has been residing at Dover for some time, had opened a deposit account with the bank of Messrs. Minet and Fector, and Messrs. Latham and Co., of that place. A letter which was received on Wednesday from Dover, stated, that a cheque was presented on the previous morning at each house for the balance remaining there, but the clerks having heard what had occurred in the city on Saturday, refused to pay them. On mentioning the circumstance to the principals of the house, it was determined to detain the person who presented the cheques, but he had taken the alarm, and was off, as supposed, by one of the London coaches.

“There remains now to notice another baneful consequence arising from the iniquitous conduct of this unprincipled man. We allude to the disputes it must engender as to the rightful possession of certain property—from which disputes the lawyers will reap a golden harvest. The Exchequer-bill market has for some days been in a state of confusion difficult to describe. No one has dared purchase these securities, lest they should prove some of those abstracted by the fugitive. It has already been ascertained that bills and other securities of this description, to the amount of many thousands, are afloat, some of which have passed to various persons by bonâ fide sale; others, which have been pledged to near their value, with monied houses. The London Life Association has issued a notice, with the numbers of their bills, and warning all persons from purchasing them. This course has been followed by a representative of Mr. ex-Sheriff Parkins. A Mr. Fructuozo has also posted a paper on the Stock Exchange, announcing that Chilian Bonds to the amount of more than £20,000; Colombian to the amount of £10,000; Mexican to the amount of £4000; and Brazilian to the amount of £12,000, which were in the hands of Messrs. Remington, Stephenson, and Company, are not forthcoming, upon the request made for them at their banking-house; that they are the property of Mr. J. A. Fructuozo, and that all persons are cautioned against receiving them, or any part thereof.

“Under such a state of things, people know not how to act. The usual security attending property seems lost. It is said that the Law will justify the possession of all such Exchequer-bills as have been obtained by bonâ fide purchase—even though the seller of such acquired them by fraud—but that where they have been only pledged, though to their entire value, they must be delivered up to their original owners. There are, however, other cases of a more abstruse nature springing from the conduct of Mr. Stephenson, and which will call for all the learning of our Lawyers to decide. Among these is the following:—A gentleman keeping cash at the house was applied to by Stephenson to lend him his promissory note for £8000 on some pretence or other. The request was complied with on the assurance that it should be provided for when due; and Stephenson, exhibiting the note to his partners as the result of a bonâ fide transaction of business between them, obtained that sum for his own private account. At the period when the note had arrived at maturity, Stephenson assured the gentleman who accommodated him with the loan of it, that it had been cancelled in the regular form, and he therefore thought no more about it. It now turns out that this note is still in existence, and that Stephenson, after availing himself of it for its first and regular use, has deposited it with a third party as security for a further advance of money. This party applies to the original granter of the note for payment, which is resisted on two grounds,—first, because he had the assurance of Stephenson that it was paid ; and next, because it is deemed irregular to take a note of hand which is overdue as a security for the payment of money.

“ This knotty point the lawyers we hear will soon be called upon to decide. In fine, there is no saying where the unfortunate consequences of this affair will end. It tends to create distrust where confidence formerly existed, and to make every man suspect his neighbour. The case of Fauntleroy is generally allowed not to have been near so fatal to public credit as this delinquency of Stephenson’s is likely to prove.

“ Conjecture is busy as to what the fugitive could have done with the immense sum, exceeding £300,000, which it turns out he has pillaged. Though an expensive man in his habits, keeping two or three establishments, yet there was no such excess visible about him as to exceed 8 or £10,000 per annum. This in course cannot account for £300,000. It has been said that he gambled, but he never discovered to his intimates the least inclination towards that vice. It is not believed that he has taken more than £50,000 with him, if so much.

“ Mr. Rowland Stephenson is the second son of the late John Stephenson, Esq., of Great Ormond-street, Queen-square, who was the cousin of Rowland Stephenson, Esq., the elder, the original of the firm of Batson and Stephenson, who subsequently introduced into it his cousin, the above-named John Stephenson, Esq., at whose death his son, the present Mr. Rowland Stephenson, succeeded to the partnership. He married his cousin, the eldest daughter of Edward Stephenson, Esq., of Farley-hill, Berkshire, and of Queen-square, Bloomsbury, only son of the original Rowland Stephenson, Esq., by whom he has eight children, and is now a widower. His age is about 50 ; though it is not improbable that there may not exist any authentic record of his birth, he having been born at sea, in the Straits of Dover. Of his children one son, the eldest, was in the Banking-house ; two others are in India ; and one is in one of the Government public-offices.

“ Mr. Stephenson appeared in private to be of a very gloomy uncertain temperament. He would in company sit for a length of time without speaking, and would then suddenly break out into merriment, not called for by anything peculiar in the conversation. In fine, he had, in private society, that abstracted appearance which one would expect to see in a man who must have passed every hour, for bygone years, in agonizing apprehension of what the next might by possibility produce.”

Robarts, Lubbock, and Co.

The business of this well-known banking-house was started at 11, Mansion-house Street, on February 5, 1772, by Sir William Lemon, Buller, Furley, Lubbock, and Co., which was the style of the firm until 1776, when Mr. Buller retired. It was then Lemon, Furley, Lubbock, and Co. In 1785 another change took place : Sir William Lemon’s name dropped out of the firm, and they brought in Mr. Bosanquet as one of the junior partners,—the style being Furley, Lubbock, Bosanquet, and Co. During the same year the name of Forster appears as head partner in place of Furley ; the style of the firm thus becoming Forster, Lubbock, Bosanquet, and Co. In 1785 it was Forster, Lubbock, Bosanquet, and Co. ; and in 1800 the Bosanquets retired from the association,—Mr. Samuel

Bosanquet entering into partnership with Messrs. Beachcroft and Reeves for the purpose of establishing a separate bank.

In 1801 a further change is recorded ; the style of the firm became Forster, Lubbocks, Forster, and Clarke. In 1814 it was Sir John Lubbock, Lubbock, Forster, and Co. ; in 1820 Sir John William Lubbock, Forster, Clarke, and Co. ; and in 1835 Sir John William Lubbock, Forster, and Co. In 1860 they amalgamated with Messrs. Robarts, Curtis, and Co., under the style of Robarts, Lubbock, and Co., and carried on business at 15, Lombard Street, where they have been located ever since.

15, Lombard Street, was formerly known by the sign of the Queen's Arms.

Robarts, Curtis, Were, Hornyold, and Berwick, according to the list of bankers in the London Directory, were established in 1792 at 35, Cornhill. Sir William Curtis was Lord Mayor in 1795, and died January 27, 1829. In 1797 they moved to 15, Lombard Street ; and in 1802 they were located at 18, Exchange Alley, which probably was only a temporary abode, as in the next list, in 1805, the style of the firm was Robarts, Curtis, Robarts, and Curtis, at 15, Lombard Street. In 1818 it became Sir William Curtis, Robarts, and Curtis ; and from 1834 until 1860, the year in which they amalgamated with Lubbock, Forster, and Co., the style of the firm was Robarts, Curtis, and Co. The following remarkable recovery of stolen property is recorded in Keene's Bath Journal for April 30, 1832 :—

" It will be recollectcd, that about four or five months ago, a clerk in the house of Messrs. Robarts and Co., of Lombard Street, bankers, decamped, taking with him a considerable amount in Bank-notes, &c. As soon as it was known that the clerk had proceeded to America, immediate steps were taken for forwarding to the British Consul in the United States, and to all the ports of the Union a description of the fugitive, the numbers of the notes, &c., and by the accounts received Saturday from the United States, it appears that the clerk, on landing in America, proceeded to Georgia, where he was taken prisoner, and property found upon him to the amount of about £3000, there being only a deficiency of £700 in the sum he decamped with. The delinquent was allowed his liberty on giving up the money he possessed."

Sir John Lubbock, the author of many valuable scientific works, introduced the Bill in Parliament for establishing four extra holidays in the year for the benefit of bankers' clerks, which holidays are now generally adopted by the whole population of England.

This bank occupies the site of three old houses, Nos. 15, 16, and 17.

Nos. 16 and 17 were LLOYD'S COFFEE-HOUSE, which originated with a coffee-house keeper of the name of Edward Lloyd, who, in September, 1696, started Lloyd's News. This house was at the west corner of Abchurch Lane. In a poem called the " Wealthy Shopkeeper," we read—

" Then to Lloyd's Coffee House he never fails,
To read the letters and attend the sales."

In the early numbers of London Gazette, Daily Courant, Post Boy, etc., advertisements of sales of various things appear almost daily, to be sold either by the candle, or otherwise. Lloyd, the coffee man, as he was called, died February 17, 1713. His coffee-house was moved to Pope's Head Alley, but, in 1774, it was again moved to the Royal Exchange, where it now exists as Lloyd's.

Through the kindness of Mr. Robarts, who permitted me to examine the title-deeds, I have ascertained that previously to this house being Lloyd's it was called PUNTACK'S HEAD. The back part of these premises originally belonged to Vyner, and afterwards to the Post Office, of which latter it was purchased by the bankers, including messuages in Abchurch Lane, called the Golden Ball, afterwards the Rose and Crown, and then the Bear. Although spelt Puntack in the deeds, we find by contemporary literature that the house was kept by a Monsieur Pontack or Pontac, a Frenchman, son of the President of Bordeaux, who was owner of the vineyards of Pontaq and O'Brien,* from which came to London to establish a famous eating-house, and set up his father's head as a sign, which is mentioned by Dryden, Swift, and Defoe, likewise Evelyn, who states that, in 1694, the Royal Society dined at Puntack's as usual. He also describes him as "having studied well in philosophy, but chiefly the Rabbins, and was exceedingly addicted to cabalistic fancies, an external hablador (romancer) and half distracted by reading abundance of the extravagant Eastern Jews. He spake all languages, was very rich, had a handsome person, and was well bred, about forty-five years of age. I think I may truly say of him, which was not so truly said of St. Paul, that much learning had made him mad." Swift, in his letters to Stella, says that the wine was charged seven shillings a flask—"are not these pretty rates?" Before Pontack had the house, it was known by the sign of the White Bear. The premises now form part of Messrs. Robarts' bank.

* Probably Haut Brion.

Lubbock's old house in Mansion-house Street was a portion of Sir Martin Bowes' bequest to the Goldsmiths' Company, and was leased of them.

The firm now consists of the following partners:—

- The Right Hon. Sir John Lubbock, Bart., M.P.
- Abraham John Robarts.
- William Cotton Curtis.
- Henry James Lubbock.
- Beaumont William Lubbock.
- Cecil Chaplin.
- Thomas Edward Robarts.
- John Birkbeck Lubbock.
- George Cotton Curtis.

Robinson, Richard.

From Ruding I take the annexed passage:

"In 1577 the offences of counterfeiting and diminishing the coins still continued to be practised, notwithstanding the precautions which had been taken to prevent them; for in this year Richard Robinson, goldsmith, was drawn from the Tower of London to Tyborne, and there hanged, for clipping of gold."

He was chief Assay Master of all the King's Mints throughout England, and Keeper of the King's Exchange at London, and was eight times Mayor, i.e. continuously from 1275 to 1281 and in 1285. He lived in Milk Street, in a house belonging to the Priory of Lewes, in Sussex, whereof he was tenant at will, paying twenty shillings by the year, without other charges. Such were the rents of those times. He was buried in Christ's Church, Newgate Street.

Rolfe, William,

Goldsmith, of Lombard Street, 1604-47. His name appeared in 1640 in the list of those inhabitants of Langbourne Ward who were able to contribute towards raising a loan of £200,000 for the use of Charles I.

Roux, Peter Le,

Goldsmith, circa 1678, of St. Martin-in-the-Fields.

Rowe, Thomas, (or Row

As it was sometimes spelt) was a goldsmith. His name appears as early as 1666 in the ledgers of Alderman Backwell, with whom he kept an account.

He was one of those goldsmiths who had money in the Exchequer when it was closed by Charles II. on January 2, 1672. The amount he lost by that royal proceeding was £17,615 17s. 8d., for which he had 6 per cent. interest paid him, amounting to £1056 19s. per annum. In the "Little London Directory" of 1677 the names of Rowe and Green, keeping running-cashes at the George,* in Lombard Street, lead one to suppose that he was not entirely ruined by the closing of the Exchequer, as so many others were. But he appears to have had some litigation, as the following extracts will show.

In the Public Record Office we have access to some information respecting him. Under Exchequer Special Commission, No. 6325, 36 Charles II. [A.D. 1683-4], a writ is issued to John Philipps and others, directing them to inquire into certain matters as set out in a decree of the Court of Exchequer, made on Thursday, February 10, 1682, which recites that Michael Clipsham, merchant, had exhibited his bill against Thomas Row, Thomas Greene, and Nathaniel Stone, said bill setting forth that he was a merchant trading in wines and other things which pay customs, and that he had "severall times money by him on purpose to leave at some Goldesmithe's ready for defraying such charges." He had dealt with the defendant Row, and about March 23, 1669, they had come to an account, and released one another. The complainant owed Row about £350. Row afterwards took Green into partnership, and the plaintiff continued dealing with them. About November last he demanded a statement of account, but could not obtain the same. Upon his requiring a sum of money, the defendants advanced it to him on his making over to them his interest in a ship called the "Abegail (sic) and Mary."

The complainant prayed relief, and that the defendants might come to a fair account with him.

The defendants appeared, and answered. An Order of Court on November 2 directed that Stone's name should be taken out of the list of defendants, to enable him to be examined as a witness for the plaintiff; and on the same day the whole matter was referred to Auditor Phillipps. In the interrogatories on behalf of the plaintiff, Row, Green, and Stone are described as "of London, Goldsmiths." By one witness Stone is spoken of as "Mr. Row's man."

Again, under Exchequer Special Commission, No. 6697, 1st James II., when a further examination of witnesses took place, one of the interrogatories on behalf of the plaintiff was : How did you discharge the credit given you, by ready money, or "by note on any or what Goldsmith"? Among the depositions on the part of the plaintiff we have that of Christopher Harrison, of London, merchant, complainant's servant ; who knows Row as keeping part of the account betwixt them [Row and Clipsham], and receiving and paying several sum and sums of money for account of the said plaintiff. Michael Prescott, of London, distiller, likewise deposes that in January, 1670, he bought a parcel of brandy of Michael Clipsham, and that in February he gave Clipsham's man "a note on a goldsmith" for £60—"he believes on Mr. Thomas Row."

Two of the defendants' interrogatories ran : Were you a servant, book-keeper, etc., for any of the defendants, or for one "John Addis, Goldsmith in Lombard-streete and his partners"? And : What sums of money did the defendants pay to the said "Addis and Company in August, 1678"?

He may probably have struggled on for a few years, but we find that he did fail, as in the London Gazette of October 9, 1690, there is an advertisement of a dividend in his estate to be paid. And again on May 25, 1704, occurs the following notice :—"The creditors of Thomas Rowe, late of London, goldsmith, deceased, who claim title to any part of the old Exchequer debt due to the said Thomas Rowe in the year 1677, from the late King Charles the Second and for which he settled a perpetual interest on the hereditary excise, are desired to meet together on Thursday the 29th day of June next at Laurence's Coffee house in Freeman's Court, Cornhill, London, at 4 in the afternoon, there to consider and agree upon some proper methods to be used for obtaining their right. The Creditors are desired to bring with them all such writings as they have to make out their claim." The partners were Thomas Rowe, Thomas Green, and Nathaniel Stone.

Rowland, John,

Goldsmith and banker, of Lombard Street. His name first occurs in the "Little London Directory" of 1677, in the list of merchants, his address then being in Winchester Street. He subsequently moved to Lombard Street, where he certainly was in 1682. He is reputed to have made a considerable fortune, and retired into the country before the close of that century. He became High Sheriff in Carnarvonshire, and was a large landed proprietor. He married a daughter of Sir Robert Owen, of the Porkington family, and died 1704.

Saint Dunstan

Was the patron saint of the goldsmith's craft : wherefore I cannot refrain from giving the following memoranda concerning him, gleaned from Herbert's "History of the Goldsmiths' Company" :—

"The honours paid by the Company to St. Dunstan showed their high veneration of that saint. His image, of silver gilt, set with gems, adorned their Hall, and his memory was drunk at particular times from a great cup equally rich, called 'St. Dunstan's Cup.' They had their 'St. Dunstan's light' in St. John Zachary Church, and their Chapel of St. Dunstan, with a second image of him, in St. Paul's Cathedral. The style given him in their book is 'Seynt Dunston, our blessed patron, protector, and founder.'

"The 10th Henry VIII. directs that the new livery shall be given on St. Dunstan's Day, then next coming, and that 'the gownys shalbe violet and the hoodys violet and scarlet.'

St. John, James,

Salesburie, William, 1379.

In the second year of Richard II., as we read in Ruding's "Annals," the King granted to William Salesburie, goldsmith, to hold the exchange in Lombard Street in London, by himself or his deputies, as well for the exchange of gold and silver as for the merchandise of all kinds of bullion, plates and vessels of silver and gold, in the King's name, paying yearly into the Exchequer £20 for the profit of the said exchange. Provided always that the King should not change his money ; and that the said William should cause all such plates and jewels of silver and gold so exchanged to be carried to the King's Mint in the Tower of London. The Mayor of London was commanded to proclaim the same ; and it was directed that the exchange should be held in no other place, on pain of forfeiture. In order to put the newly coined money into circulation these exchanges were established in various places, in which bullion was purchased for the supply of the Mint. The principal exchange in these days was near St. Paul's, which probably gave the name to the street now known as Old Change.

In 1820 it was Sansom and Postlethwaite, which continued to be the style thereof until 1831, after which date no trace of them is discoverable in the Directory.

Sapte, Muspratt, and Co.,

Of 77, Lombard Street. Their business has been conducted upon these premises since 1787, when Vere, Lucadon, Troughton, Lucadon, and Smart started as bankers, occupying the premises vacated in that year by Boldero, Kendall, and Co. This house was before 1770 known by the sign of the Vine.

In 1805 the firm was Veres, Lucadon, and Smart. In 1809 considerable changes took place, as the Directory for the following year shows that the firm consisted of Veres, Smart, Baron, Hawkins, and Turnbull. In 1814 the name of Turnbull had disappeared, otherwise the firm was unchanged. In 1818 it was Veres, Baron, and Hawkins; and in 1824 it became Veres, Ward, and Co. That style continued for ten years; but in 1834 it stood as Vere, Sapte, Banbury, and Co. In 1838 Mr. Muspratt's name appeared as a partner. The Directory of 1844 exhibits further change; Mr. Vere, the head of the firm for many years, ceasing to be connected with it, and the style becoming Sapte, Banbury, Muspratt, and Co. In 1856 it was Sapte, Muspratt, Banbury, Nix, and Co., which continued to be the designation until the amalgamation took place in 1859 between this firm and that of Messrs. Fullers and Co., of Moorgate Street, under the style of Fuller, Banbury, Nix, and Mathieson.

Sayre, Coote, Purdon, and Co.,

160, Oxford Street, 1774.

Scott, Humphrey,

Goldsmith, 159 $\frac{2}{3}$, of St. John Zachary.

Scott (Sir Samuel, Bart.) and Co.

Sir Claude Scott is said to have begun life in a very small way. By great application and industry, however, he gradually became a wealthy merchant, was created a baronet, and in his later years became a banker. It was in 1824 or 1825 that he started the business now so well known; and fortunately it derived a great impetus from the fact of his being able to secure a considerable remnant of Marsh, Sibbald, and Co.'s connexion, after the execution of Fauntleroy. They commenced business at Holles Street, Cavendish Square, and in the following year they took the premises they now occupy, No. 1, Cavendish Square. In 1827 Mr. John Villiers Dent, formerly a junior clerk at Child's, joined the firm, when the style of it became Sir Claude Scott, Bart., Dent, and Co. Sir Claude Scott and Co. continued to be the style until 1847, the firm consisting of Sir Samuel Scott, Bart., Claude Edward Scott, and Samuel Scott. After that date it was styled Sir Samuel Scott and Co., and the designation has been maintained to the present day.

It now consists of the following partners:—

Lady Scott.

His Grace the Duke of Fife, K.T.

Horace Farquhar.

Francis Hoare.

Scrimshaw, Michael (or Scrimshire, or Skrimshire),

Was a goldsmith at the Golden Lyon, in Fleet Street. We find his name in the London Gazette of February 18, 1674, in an advertisement for a silver inkhorn bearing the arms of the Earl of Euston, which was to be brought to him. On March 4 in the same year he offered £20 reward for the apprehension of the thief who stole a large quantity of silver plate from Sir Thomas Wolstenholme's, or for notice of any one offering any portion of the same for pawn or sale. Many of the advertisements that appeared in the London Gazette at this period were very quaint. When articles were lost, or even when servants ran away, the reward was usually notified to be paid by the goldsmith. The following is dated October 2, 1676:—"One John Ruddock, aged about 26, with brown flaggy hair, lean, slender, and of middle size, did on Monday the 2nd Instant, Steal out of the seat of his masters coach (as it stopt in Southampton Buildings) one bag of money of £100, another of £50, and another of £24. He then had on a Livery of Cloth blood colour, the coat thick lac'd with yellowish and black. Whoever can seize him and give notice thereto to Mr. Skrimshire a goldsmith, at the Golden Lyon, in Fleet Street, shall have £5 Reward."

Scrimshaw's name appears in the "Little London Directory" of 1677 as a goldsmith keeping running-cashes, and the London Gazette of January 30, 1689, announces a meeting of his creditors. Two others were announced in November, 1697, and May, 1701.

Seamour, James (also spelt Seamer and Seymour),

Was a goldsmith, between 1699 and 1734, at the Flower de Luce, corner of Mitre Court in Fleet Street. Many advertisements appeared in the London papers about 1705, stating that he received subscriptions for the Horse Race on Merrow Downs, at Guildford. Three plates were to be run for, and, as an additional attraction, cock-fighting was to continue for the whole week. In November, 1714, he advertised for a box of plate that was stolen from a waggon between Epsom and London. He became bankrupt; and in January, 1737, the assignees, under a commission of bankruptcy, advertised the sale of two freehold messuages in Salisbury Court, Fleet Street.

Sedgewicke, Symion,

Goldsmith, 1612-19, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Sellowes, John,

Goldsmith, circa 1598, of St. Matthew, Friday Street.

Seman, Bartholomew,

Goldsmith, who, being also by trade a gold-beater, was usually known as "Bartholomew Goldbeter." In 1422 he was made King's Exchanger. He died in 1430.

Seymour, Thomas,

Goldsmith, 1660-98, of Lombard Street. It is recorded by Mr. Chaffers that a person of this name presented the Goldsmiths' Company with a silver salt with a crystal cylinder; but he did not know his address. He died in 1698, and was buried in the church of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Shaa, or Shaw, Sir Edmund,

Goldsmith, and Engraver to the Mint in 1462, at a salary of £20 per annum; Sheriff in 1474; Warden of the Goldsmiths' Company in 1474; and Mayor in 1483. At the coronation of Richard III., which took place in his mayoralty, he attended as cup-bearer with great pomp, when his claim was admitted and placed upon record. He was goldsmith to this king, and sold him several pieces of plate. At his decease he appointed by his testament (writes Stow) his executors, with the cost of four hundred marks, and the stuff of the old gate, called Cripplegate, to build the same gate of new, which was performed and done in the year 1491. He also ordered sixteen rings of gold to be given to his friends. By his will, dated March 20, 1487, according to Herbert's "History of the Twelve Great Livery Companies," he directed his executors to purchase and convey to the Goldsmiths' Company sufficient property whereout they might pay an annual quit-rent of £17; of which £10 should be paid to support a priest "cunning in grammar, and able to teach it," in the parish of Stopford (Stockport), in the county of Chester; and the remaining £7 be applied to certain superstitious uses. And he further directed that the same priest should keep a grammar school.

Shaa (or Shaw), Sir John,

Goldsmith, of Wood Street, Cheapside; Engraver to the Mint in 1483; Warden of the Goldsmiths' Company 1492-7; Mayor 1501, in which year he was knighted on the field of Bosworth by Henry VII. It is also recorded that the first Lord Mayor's feast in the present Guildhall was given by him. Stow writes that he appointed by his testament the church and steeple of St. Peter the Apostle, Wood Street, to be newly built of his goods, with a flat roof; notwithstanding, Thomas Wood, goldsmith, one of the Sheriffs 1491, is accounted principal benefactor, because the roof of the middle aisle is supported by images of woodmen. Sir John Shaw died 1508.

Shakleton, William,

Goldsmith, 1578, of the parish of St. Mary Woolchurch Haw.

Shales and Smithin

Were goldsmiths keeping running-cashes, and had both been apprentices or servants to Alderman Charles Duncombe. From evidence at command they signed for him in 1684. Upon Duncombe's giving up his business they appear to have started for themselves as goldsmiths, at the Unicorn, in Lombard Street. Charles Shales was a party to a deed of sale and bargain in which he and others purchased the lease of the premises known as the Unicorn, in Lombard Street, lately in the possession of Henry Lambe and formerly of Edward Backwell. The next time we find him mentioned is in the Public Record Office (amongst the "Exchequer Bills and Answers, William III., London and Middlesex," No. 553), April 28, 1694. The following is a short abstract. The Complaint of Charles Shales of London, Goldsmith, states that Richard Kent, late of London, deceased, in 1687 and 1688, had dealings with him about the paying and receiving money for the said Kent. Kent desired him to pay to Robert Chamberlayne of London, Merchant, and to Charles Danvers of Devizes, a sum of moneys. This he (Shales) did.

"Mr. Kent came to your orator's house in Lombard Street in London," and left a bond with him. Interest was charged at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum. Kent died about 1690.

The answer of Chamberlayne refers to Shales as a "Banker and Keeper of cash and ready money of y^e said Mr. Kent;" while that of Charles Danvers deposes that he (Danvers) received money "att a goldsmith's shoppe in Exchange Alley near the Royal Exchange."

It would be interesting to know whether this said Richard Kent was the partner of Duncombe, as so little can be ascertained concerning him. In 1715 we find that Shales had a new partner, and that Shales and Bowdler were then at the Vine, in Lombard Street. They were goldsmiths to Queen Anne and George I. and II.

The Directory of 1736 shows us that one Thomas Bowdler remained; but nothing further can be traced of him. This Thomas Bowdler witnessed the signature of Alderman Backwell at the Exchequer, in 1677–8, when he assigned his debts.

Sharpe and Sons

Were established in West Smithfield as bankers about 1810. They failed early in the year 1825. Upon that event Mr. Hill, who had been their manager, immediately set up for himself.

Shelden, Richard,

Was a goldsmith occupying the sign of the Red Cross, in Lombard Street, in 1680.

Shelley, Philip,

Goldsmith, died in 1603, and bequeathed money to the Goldsmiths' Company, also to the poor of his parish, that of St. John Zachary.

Sheppard, William,

A goldsmith, at the Angel, in Lombard Street, and keeping running-cashes in 1690. We ascertain from the Vestry-books of St. Edmund King and Martyr that in 1690 William Sheppard, goldsmith, occupied the first house westwards of a void space in front of the church, which had a frontage in Lombard Street of 3 feet 3 inches, with 3 feet 1 inch backwards and 21 feet deep. From this fact, therefore, we may assume that this house was known by the sign of the Angel.

He was authorized by the Treasury in April, 1694, together with several leading goldsmiths, to receive contributions in his shop for the raising of £1,000,000 sterling upon the duty on salt and on the new rates of excise. In 1696 he took into partnership Joseph Bragg, who had been clerk to Sir John Sweetapple of Lombard Street, the firm then becoming Sheppard and Bragge. It is recorded in

Luttrell's Diary that on February 4, 1701, "Mr. Shepherd (sic), a noted banker of Lombard Street, having great sums of money drawn from him, occasioned by the fall of the public stock, was forced to stop payment at present." He evidently could not recover his credit, as the London Gazette of November 30, 1702, announces that William Shepard (sic), Joseph Bragg, and John Shepard were bankrupts.

Shipman, John,

Goldsmith, circa 1621, of St. Vedast.

Shorden, William,

Goldsmith, circa 1611, of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Shordych, Robert de, Senior,

Goldsmith, 1349. He desired to be buried in the church of St. Vedast. He was a Warden of the Goldsmiths' Company.

Shordych, William de,

Goldsmith, 1349. To the Prior and Convent of St. Trinity within Algate he left a moiety of his tenement in the parish of St. Nicholas Oloef in Bredstret, charged with the payment of the debts of Robert de Shordych, called "le Hornere," and of his own, which amount to the sum of forty pounds, the same to be paid within three weeks after the testator's decease ("Calendar of Wills, Court of Husting, London").

Shore, Matthew,

Was a goldsmith residing in Lombard Street about 1461. He was the husband of the celebrated Jane Shore, who was mistress to King Edward IV.

Mr. Martin says that it has been stated, though there does not seem to be any evidence to support the tradition, that Matthew Shore carried on the business of a goldsmith at the Grasshopper. That he lived in Lombard Street is recorded in the ballad entitled "Jane Shore" in Percy's "Reliques":—

"In Lombard Street I once did dwelle,
As London yet can witness welle;
Where many gallants did beholle
My beauty in a shop of golde.

"At last my royll King did dye,
And then my dayes of wo grew nighne;
When crook-back Richard got the crowne,
King Edward's friends were soon put downe.

"I penance did in Lombard Street,
In shamefull manner in a sheet."

Nothing further can be ascertained about M. Shore. It is probable that he was compelled to leave London in consequence of his wife's infidelity. Jane Shore, however, lived as late as the reign of Henry VIII., circa 1527.

Shute, Francis,

Goldsmith, 1580–1608, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth. He died in May, 1608, and was buried in the church.

Sicklemore,

Goldsmith, 1692, at the Star, on St. Margaret's Hill, Southwark. All that is known of him centres in the following advertisement, which appeared in the London Gazette of November 17, 1692:—

Sicklemore—continued.

"Went away from his Master the 19th past, Edmund Sicklemore, aged 16, middle stature, fresh colour, light brown hair, a little curl'd, talks quick, with a Drabduberry coloured cloth Coat and Breeches. Whoever gives notice of him to Mr. Tho. Smith, distiller, at the Feasant and Bottle behind the Compter in Southwark, or to Mr. Sicklemore, Goldsmith, at the Star, on St. Margaret's Hill, Southwark, shall have £50 Reward and charges; or if he will return to any of his Relations, he shall be kindly Received."

Smith (Nicholas) and Potter, 1683,
At the Phoenix, in Lombard Street.

Smith, Payne, and Smiths.

This banking firm is first found in the London Directory in the year 1759, when its style was Smith and Payne, carrying on their business near Coleman Street, Lothbury. The same authority shows us that in 1766 they had removed to 18, Lombard Street, a house known by the sign of the Hare.

This large business originated in Nottingham, nearly one hundred years before they established the bank in London.

I am indebted to Mr. F. C. Smith, a partner in the bank at Nottingham, for the following information:—

John Smith, of Crosswell Butler, Notts, a small farmer, died in 1641. His son Thomas was apprenticed to a mercer in Nottingham, and in 1653 bought the shop where he carried on his business for many years. It was this Thomas Smith who gradually added the new business of banking to that of mercer; and from documents in possession of the Nottingham Bank we conclude that some time before 1688 the bank was fairly established. At his death [in 1699] he was succeeded in the bank by his eldest son Thomas, who was in 1717 High Sheriff of Leicestershire, having considerable property in that county. This second Thomas died in 1727, and his balance sheet then prepared shows a considerable business with the gentry of the county and merchants of the town.

His brothers Samuel and Abel succeeded him; and it was the son of this Abel who founded the bank of Smith and Payne in conjunction with Mr. John Payne. This second Abel also founded the Hull and Lincoln Banks. He was an M.P. for different boroughs, and the father of George (afterwards Sir George) Smith, and the first Lord Carington.

The Nottingham Bank is the oldest existing county bank in England.

In 1773 Messrs. Smith and Payne took an additional partner, when the firm became Smith, Payne, and Smith. In 1778 they were located in George Street, Mansion House; and in 1785 the London Directory discloses the firm as consisting of Smith, Payne, Smith, and Payne. In 1824 Smith, Payne, and Smith were at Mansion-house Place; and in 1830 they found a local habitation in No. 1, Lombard Street, where they still are. The style of the firm continues to be Smith, Payne, and Smiths, consisting of the following partners:—

Samuel George Smith.
Robert Smith.
Oswald Augustus Smith.
Eric Carrington Smith.
Martin Ridley Smith.

Smith, Richard, 1688. (See MARTIN.)Smith, Samuel, and Son

First appear in the London Directory in 1776 as occupying 12, Aldermanbury. In 1794 the style of the firm was changed to Samuel Smith, Sons, and Co.; and in the year following they removed to 73, Lombard Street, where they remained until 1800, when they probably transferred their business to Bosanquet and Co., whom we find in occupation of the premises in 1801.

Smith, Wright, and Co.

21, Lombard Street. The business of this firm was established about the year 1758 by Bland, Gray, and Stephenson, at the Three Kings, in Lombard Street. In the "Royal Annual Kalendar" of 1765, however, their house is called the Golden Ball. In 1762 Mr. Stephenson left the firm, probably to join Batson and Hoggart in forming a new one about this time (see REMINGTON). In 1763 the style became Smith, Wright, and Gray. In 1770 their house was numbered 55, and in 1774 they moved to the Anchor and Crown, 21, Lombard Street, where they continued until they amalgamated with Esdaile and Co. in 1792.

The following curious story, illustrating the dangers bankers' walk-clerks were exposed to in those days, is extracted from the Gentleman's Magazine of 1780:—

"Abraham Darnford and Will^m Newton were ex^d before the magistrate at Guildhall, being charged by W^m Warts, clerk to Smith, Wright, and Gray, Bankers, with robbing and attempting to murder him. It appeared on examination that one of the men had lodged an accepted bill at the banking house to be rece^d when due, and the money to be remitted into the country according to direction. As this pretended bill was directed to an empty house and had several days to run, the villains in the mean time applied to the persons who had the letting of the house, to take it, had taken it, and got the key, under the pretence of getting the house cleaned. The landlord, being made acquainted with the haste his new tenants were in to take possession, and not very well liking their description, desired the mistress of the Public house on the opposite side of the way to have an eye to their proceedings. Accordingly, upon the day when the bill became due, she observed two men enter the house and open the parlour windows, and presently after a third man came and knocked at the door, was let in, and the door shut. Attending to see the event, she thought she heard an uncommon noise, and stepping over the way, and listening, was struck with the sound of 'Murder' pronounced in a hoarse faint voice, succeeded by a kind of groaning, wth very much alarmed her; and, looking through the key hole, she saw two men dragging the third down the cellar-stairs, on wth she cried out violently, they're murdering a man, knocked hard at the door, and begged people in the street to break it open; but none would interfere. Being enraged at their brutality, she burst open the window herself, and was entering when one of the villians opened the door and was running off, but on the cry of 'Stop thief' he was instantly taken. The other she seized by the throat herself, and dragged him to her own house, by wth this horrid contrivance was brought to light. They had robbed the man of his pocket-book, and had nearly throttled him to stop his noise, till they had got him into the back cellar, where they certainly designed to have murdered him, had not the woman by her fortitude providentially interposed to save his life."

Smithe, Luke,

Goldsmith, circa 1580, of St. Mary Woolchurch. He died 1604.

Smithies, George,

Goldsmith and Alderman, of St. Matthew, Friday Street. He died 1615, and was buried in St. Mary Staining church.

Snagg, Richard.

In 1681 he was described as a goldsmith at the Unicorn, in Lombard Street, formerly the house in which Alderman Backwell carried on his business. I have reason to believe that Snagg was one of his apprentices. He certainly had something to do with the Alderman, as evidenced by an advertisement in the London Gazette of June 1, 1682, in which the creditors of Edward Backwell are desired to take notice that he has published his proposals, which would be delivered to them personally, or to any others whom they may send for them, by Mr. Richard Snagg or by some other person, at Mr. Valentine Duncombe's shop; which the said E. Backwell formerly occupied. He appears to have left the Unicorn soon after this, as in 1683 he was at the sign of the Exchange, and in 1691 at the Flying Horse, both in Lombard Street. He prospered until 1708, when we learn from the London Gazette of May 27 of that year that a sad calamity had befallen him: "Whereas, Robert Yate late of Lombard Street, Goldsmith, has lately absconded himself from Richard Snagg of Lombard Street, Goldsmith, with a great sum of money taken from the cash, and committed other indirect practices and embezzlements, which occasioned a stop of the currency of Payments in the shop. The creditors of the said Richard Snagg are desired to meet on Thursday the 3rd June at 10. a clock in the morning at Mr. Stracey's house in Guildhall Yard in order to receive proposals for due satisfaction of all their just debts." He died in 1715.

Snell, George,

Goldsmith, of Lombard Street, in 1649. He was one of a committee of goldsmiths elected and sworn by the Commonwealth to make two standard trial pieces for the coins. He married Mary Vyner, in 1631, at St. Mary Woolnoth's. On January 20, 1651, he requested the discharge from delinquency of Dr. Snell, of Wannerton, co. Chester.* He was one of the unfortunate men who had entrusted their money to the Exchequer at the time of its closing in 1672. The sum he lost amounted to £10,894 14s. 5d., for which the interest granted by the King was £653 13s. 6d. per annum. He was succeeded in the business by his fourth son, John Snell, who had been educated at Merchant Taylors' School. From the "Little London Directory" of 1677 we ascertain that John Snell was keeping running-cashes at the Fox, in Lombard Street, which house subsequently became No. 73. His name is frequently met with in advertisements in the papers of the period. In 1680 he is described as living at the Cock, in Lombard Street; and in 1683 Sir Robert Vyner desired his creditors to meet him at the Cock, the shop of John Snell. We have ascertained that he was there some years afterwards.

Snow and Co. { 1732-73.
{ 1799-1842. } (See STRAHAN.)

Snow, Sir Jeremiah (or Jeremy),

Was a goldsmith of great repute in the days of the Commonwealth, and in the reign of Charles II. He resided in Lombard Street, upon the site of the present No. 58, which is the next house eastwards of the church of St. Edmund the King and Martyr. The sign of the house cannot be ascertained, the old deeds relating to property always referring to it as "Snow's House."

He had a large account with Backwell in 1664.

We learn from the following advertisement, which appeared in the London Gazette, February 28, 1666, that he had sustained some severe losses:—"Whereas Jeremiah Snow late of Lombard Street, Goldsmith, now living in Broad Street, did owe divers persons, anno 1652, Eight thousand three hundred pounds, who at his desire did accept of 6225 pounds in full, and gave him discharges absolute (which was occasioned by the failing of two French Merchants, who were at that time indebted to him, three thousand four hundred pounds, but never paid him a fifth part, as by the Testimonials remaining with the Publick notary it may appear) since which time it hath pleased God to bless his endeavours with some small Estate. He therefore, in gratitude and justice, invites them to receive the full remainder of their principal money, excepting such as by his Oath he shall affirm to have paid in part or in whole. And he declares this Publication is not for vain Glory (Retribution in this kinde being indispensable), nor to get more Credit, but because his Friends have adjudg'd it conveniently necessary that his Vindication might be as Publick as there was the Scandal."

In common with most members of his trade, he lent his surplus balances to the Exchequer. When Charles II. shut it up in 1672, he had as much as £59,780 18s. 8d. in it, in consideration of which he received a bond from the King covenanting to pay him £3586 17s. as an annuity, which represented 6 per cent. upon the sum royally abstracted from him. It may be surmised that after this severe blow he either failed or gave up business, as no more is known of him.

In 1668 he was living at Shenley.

volume in the British Museum, containing miscellaneous notes relating to the affairs of one John Sanderson, a Turkey merchant of that day. There is a copy of a bond, dated March 4, 1603, whereby two persons, styled "Thomas Heigheham of Bethnal-Green in the county of Middlesex, Esquire, and Richard Sparrow, citizen and goldsmith of London," engage to pay to Sanderson a sum of money on May 5 following, the payment to be made "at the new shop of John Milton, scrivener, [at the Spread Eagle,] in Bread Street, London." The name "Jo. Milton, Scrivⁿ," is appended as that of the witness in whose presence the bond was sealed and delivered. This John Milton was the father of the poet. In the same volume is a bill of sale, dated April 2, 1603, whereby, for the sum of £50 received from Sanderson, Richard Sparrow makes over to him a certain ornament of gold "set with a great ruby;" retaining the right to redeem it by paying to Sanderson £52 10s. on October 3 following, i.e. the principal with 5 per cent. of interest for the six months' loan. In this case the payment is to be made at Sparrow's own shop in Cheapside; but the witness who attests the transaction is "Peter Jones, servant to John Milton, scrivener."

Spooner, Attwoods, and Co.

Started as bankers at 40, Fish Street Hill, in 1801. The firm at that time consisted of Spooner, Attwood, and Holmar. Upon reference to the Directory it will be seen that in 1812 they had moved to 27, Gracechurch Street. In 1846 the same authority shows that the firm consisted of Matthias Attwood and John Twells, trading under the style of Spooner, Attwoods, and Co., by which designation it continued to be known until 1863, when the business of the firm was taken over by Messrs. Barclay, Bevan, Tritton, and Co., who then became Barclay, Bevan, Tritton, Twells, and Co.

Spycer, Robert,

Goldsmith, 1538, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Staley, Richard,

Of Covent Garden, 1677, a goldsmith keeping running-cashes.

Staley, John,

Goldsmith, of Covent Garden, appears in the London Gazette of 1679 as a bankrupt. He was most probably a relation and descendant of the above. In 1683, he being lately dead, some of his creditors desire that all his creditors will meet at the Rose Tavern, without Temple Bar, on Wednesday, the 6th June next, at three of the clock in the afternoon, to understand what proceedings have been already had upon the statute, and to advise what further course to take for the benefit of all his creditors. In 1704 a notice of a small dividend was announced.

His son, William Staley, was executed for speaking dangerous words against the life of Charles II.

Standulf, John,

Goldsmith, 1369.

Stanes, Richard de,

Goldsmith, circa 1306. He resided in the parish of St. Giles, Cripplegate. By his will he left Emma, his wife, shops in a lane called "Everardeswellestrate," parish of St. Giles without Crepelgate, with fountain and garden adjoining, for life; remainder to John de Stanes, his son; remainder to pious and charitable uses ("Calendar of Wills, Court of Husting, London.")

Stanford, John,

Goldsmith, circa 1600, of St. Peter, Westcheap.

Staples and Co., 1781. (See Dimsdale.)

Staples and Co.

Started business as bankers at 79, Cornhill, in 1796, having seceded from the firm of Staples, Newman, Anderson, and Co. They were not heard of after that year, so we may surmise that three secessions were too much, and that they ceased to exist.

Staples, Day, Cox, Staples, and Lynn,

Bankers, started into existence at 83, Cornhill, about the year 1791; Staples having originally been in the firm of Messrs. Dimsdale, Sons, Barnard, and Staples. In 1795 it became Staples, Newman, Anderson, Staples, and Lynn. In the following year a split took place, and Staples left to found a new firm at 79, Cornhill, styled Staples and Co., whilst Newman, Anderson, and Lynn remained at 83, Cornhill, until 1797, when they removed to Lombard Street, but in 1799 they occupied 80, Cornhill; the firm then being styled Mainwaring, Sons, Chatteris, and Co. They became extinct in 1815.

Steel Yard (Steleyard, or Stilliard)

Was situated in Upper Thames Street. Lawson represents that the merchants of the Steel-yard were a corporation established in the reign of Henry III. They were principally German merchants trading with London, and were endowed with important privileges, and exempted from several fiscal duties paid by other aliens. Stow says that their hall was "large, built of stone, with three arched gates towards the street; the middlemost whereof is far bigger than the others, and is seldom opened; the other two be secured up; the same is now called the old Hall."

Cunningham writes that he was assured by his friend, Mr. T. Hudson Turner (than whom, he says, no person alive was better versed in the history of mediæval London), that the Steelyard derives its name from its being the place where the King's steelyard, or beam, was erected for weighing the tonnage of goods imported into London. When the tonnage was transferred to the Mayor and Corporation, the King's beam was moved first to Cornhill, and afterwards to Weigh-house Yard, in Little Eastcheap.

These merchants were settled in London as early as 1250. In addition to the valuable privileges which were granted them by the King, the Corporation of London likewise granted them others, in return for which they were expected to keep in repair the City gate of Bishopsgate, and to bear a portion of the expense of fortifying it in case of need.

Lawson goes on to say that, previously to the year 1284, they were not permitted to rent any houses or warehouses in London, but lodged during their stay with the brokers who sold their produce for them. When, however, they were permitted to occupy houses and warehouses of their own, they no longer employed the brokers, but sold their merchandise themselves; wherein they practised many frauds, particularly in their weights. They were detected in the year 1286, when many of them were sent to the Tower; and, according to Fabian, their weights were publicly burnt. They were afterwards pardoned and their privileges renewed; and all went well with them until the reign of Elizabeth, when they again fell into disgrace.

In the year 1597 Queen Elizabeth issued a commission to the Mayor and Sheriff of London to shut up the house inhabited by the merchants of the Steelyard in London, and ordered all of them to quit her dominions. From that time the Steelyard was never used for a like purpose.

It was from such bodies as these (writes Mr. Francis in his "History of the Bank of England"), the "Steelyard merchants," our masters in the art of commerce, that the Kings of England, on any sudden exigency, sought and obtained their principal supplies, on what now appears an exorbitant interest. The important body of Steelyard merchants was cherished with great and peculiar privileges. If great privileges were granted, however, great services were often claimed in return ; for, as Mr. Gilbart remarks, "The Steelyard Company was a kind of bank to our kings whenever they wanted money on any sudden emergency ; but the company was sure, in the end, to be well paid for such assistance."

Stephens, Roger, 1654–73,

Goldsmith, of the parish of St. John Zachary. He was the father-in-law of John Duck.

Stephens, or Stevens, Thomas,

Goldsmith, 1549. In the records of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth is an entry that "he was to be buried in St. Mary Woolnoth, and to have a monument." He probably dwelt in Lombard Street.

Stephenson and Co., 1794–1812. (See REMINGTON.)Stevens, or Stephens, Humfrey,

Goldsmith, 1552–79 ; at which latter date he was buried in St. Mary Woolnoth's.

Goldsmith ; Sheriff 1351–2. He was buried in the church of St. Mary de Stanynglane, 1354–5.

Stirling, Sir W., and Co.

This firm originated in the business of William Hodsoll, a goldsmith, at the sign of the Sun, opposite Katharine Street in the Strand. Such is his description from 1712 to 1752. In the London Directory for 1770 Edward Hodsoll appears among the bankers, near Catharine Street in the Strand. In 1776 he had a partner, as we find the firm was Hodsoll and Michell ; and in 1795 they took into partnership Sir Walter Stirling, as junior partner. In 1799 the style of the firm was Hodsoll and Stirling at 345, Strand, and that continued until 1824, when it became Sir W. Stirling, Bart., Stirling, and Hodsoll. In 1828 they gave up business, and most of the accounts were transferred to Snows'.

Stocks, Humphry (or Stokes,

As he is called by Samuel Pepys in his Diary). The "Little London Directory" of 1677 shows that he was keeping running-cashes at the Black Horse, in Lombard Street ; but Pepys' references to him indicate that he was established many years previous.

Bland and Son were subsequently established at this sign. (See BARNETT, HOARE, AND CO.)

Stone and Co., 1704. (See MARTIN.)Strahan, Paul, and Co.

This was an old-established bank, supposed to have been started by Snow and Walton, goldsmiths, at the sign of Y^e Golden Anchor in the Strand, 1660 (?) ; but it might have been much older. We have been informed that their earlier books show they kept their accounts in decimals ; which appears doubtful. It is quite evident, however, that in 1672 they, in common with all goldsmiths, did some pawnbroking, as under date March 10 in that year the following entry occurs :—“ To fifteen pounds lent to Lady ——, on deposit of a golden pot de chambre.”

In his “Memorials of Temple Bar” Mr. T. C. Noble says that John Snow in 1636 had to pay £4 10s. 8d. for expenses attending the plague then raging in his three houses in St. Clement’s parish ; but whether he was then a goldsmith is unknown. A half-century later the Snows were flourishing in Fleet Street as well as the Strand, as proved by several entries in the St. Dunstan registers. Gay, the poet, celebrates Thomas Snow for his sagacity during the fatal year 1720, so well known as the “great bubble year.”

“ Disdain not, Snow, my humble verse to hear ;
Stick thy black pen awhile behind thy ear.

O thou, whose penetrative wisdom found
The South-sea rocks and shelves, where thousands drown’d !
When credit sunk, and commerce gasping lay,
Thou stood’st, nor sent one bill unpaid away.
When not a guinea chink’d on Martin’s boards,
And Atwell’s self was drained of all his hoards,
Thou stood’st (an Indian king in size and hue) :
Thy unexhausted shop was our Peru.”

The name of Snow does not appear in the “Little London Directory” of 1677 ; and, as no other appeared until 1736, I have recourse to the endorsements on the old cash-notes of Messrs. Child and Co. Upon them in the year 1729 we find the names of “Snow and Paltcock, witness J. Thomson.” John Paltcock had been a goldsmith in Fleet Street for some years ; and here is a proof of his having amalgamated with Mr. Snow.

It is supposed by some that this business was carried on in Fleet Street as well as in the Strand for some years. On a cash-note, dated 1736, I find the name Thomas Snow and Co., witnessed by Alex. Ross. The firm appears to have continued as Thomas Snow and Co. until about 1742.

The following story is told by Mr. Frederick Martin in his “Banks and Bankers.” Sampson Gideon, a great Jew broker, had occasion to borrow £20,000 of Mr. Snow, the banker. Very shortly afterwards a panic occurred ; and Mr. Snow, alarmed for the safety of his loan, addressed a piteous epistle to the Jew, entreating him to pay the money at once, and thereby save him from bankruptcy and utter ruin. Gideon knew his man well, and determined to give him back his coveted property, but to punish him at the same time for his want of confidence. Accordingly he sent for a phial of hartshorn, and, wrapping it in twenty notes of £1000 each, returned the loan in that form to “Mr. Thomas Snow, goldsmith, near Temple Bar.”

The old firm of Sir W. Stirling and Co. gave up business about 1828, as I have recorded under that head ; and it was taken over by Snow.

In 1754 Mr. Snow took into partnership Mr. William Denne, who was a goldsmith in Cheapside, and the style of the firm continued Snow and Denne until about 1768, when they associated with themselves William Sandby, who had for many years been a successful bookseller in Fleet Street. The firm was then known as Snow, Denne, Denne, and Sandby. In 1798 Mr. J. D. Paul was admitted into it, the style then being Snow, Sandby, Paul, and Knick. In 1833 the firm was “Robert Snow, Senior and Junior, William Strahan, Sir J. D. Paul, Bart., and John D. Paul, junior.” About this time Mr. Snow changed his name from Snow to Strahan, in consequence of the late Queen’s Printer having left him £180,000 on condition that he should assume his name. After 1843 we find it styled Messrs. Strahan, Paul, and Bates ; which designation continued until 1856, when this old-established house failed through the unscrupulous conduct of the firm, who misappropriated the securities left in their charge. They were all convicted of the offence, and sentenced to penal servitude for various terms. Mr. Bates, who was the least culpable, was released some years ago ; but he has since died.

The business was taken over by the London and Westminster Bank, who established a branch on the same premises, which they have occupied ever since. During alterations recently made in the front shop, the old sign of the Golden Anchor was taken down from the wall, and probably has been destroyed.

Strange, Dashwood, and Co.,

Of 150, New Bond Street, originated in the firm of Walwyn, Petrie, Hassell, Ward, and Macgeorge, about 1793. The name of Hassell is not seen in the Directory after 1795. In 1799 the firm consisted of Walwyn, Strange, Dashwood, Steward, Agnew, and Maegeorge. The name of Walwyn does not occur in the list in 1801; but the firm had changed its style to Strange, Dashwood, Steward, Agnew, and Co.; and it disappeared from the roll of bankers about 1802.

Stride, John, and William Stephen,

Of 41, West Smithfield. This business appears to have been originated by John Jones, about 1809, at 18, West Smithfield. A few years afterwards he moved into No. 41. In 1827 he took his son into partnership, under the style of Jones and Son; and that continued to be the designation until 1848, notwithstanding the business was in the sole hands of Alfred Jones. It would seem from the Directory that it was taken over by Stride and Stride in 1849, as I find that in that year they were occupying the same premises. The name does not find record after 1873.

Sutton, John,

Goldsmith. Stow records the following epitaph as being in the church of St. John Zachary:—
“Here lieth the body of John Sutton, citizen, goldsmith and Alderman of London, who died July 6, 1450. This brave and worthy Alderman was killed in the defence of the City, in the bloody nocturnal battle on London Bridge against the infamous Jack Cade and his army of Kentish rebels.”

Swann, William, and Co.,

—Of the Seven Stars, in Friday Street, 1702–23. There is reason to suppose that they were bankers, but little can be gleaned about them.

Swartbright, William,

Goldsmith, died of the Plague, 1577, and was buried in the church of St. Mary Woolchurch Haw.

Sweetaple, John,

Whose name is recorded in the “Little London Directory” of 1677 as keeping running-cashes at the Black Moor’s Head, in Lombard Street, was one of the Sheriffs of London in 1694. His name occurs frequently in the London Gazette between 1680 and 1690. Under date of September 20, 1683, we read that a cash-note of his was lost, payable to one Edward Callender or bearer, for £99 10s.; the finder being assured of “a reasonable reward” upon bringing it to his shop in Lombard Street. The next notice of him occurs January 29, 1701, when we learn that Sir John Sweetaple, Benjamin Hodgkins, and Richard Harris were bankrupts. Notice of a second dividend is advertised in the same medium for August 7, 1704.

Sympson, Giles,
Goldsmith, 1590, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth. He died in 1608.

Sympson, Thomas,
Goldsmith, 1571, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Symson, William,
A goldsmith of London, 1531.

Talboys, Robert,
Goldsmith, of Lombard Street, between 1549 and 1580.

Tasker, Roger,
Goldsmith, 1574, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Tassell, John,
A goldsmith, carrying on his trade at the Bunch of Grapes, in Lombard Street, between the years 1670 and 1692. The house was afterwards numbered 72.

Tayler, James,
A goldsmith, at the sign of the Spread Eagle, in Lombard Street, afterwards No. 66. Very little information is to be had concerning this goldsmith. His name occurs in a curious advertisement that appeared in the London Gazette of August 7, 1676: "John James, formerly belonging to the new Exchange, about 14 years of age, somewhat freckled in the face, brown hair, went away from his friends about a twelvemonth since in a gray coat and pewter buttons. Whoever gives notice of him to Mr. James Tayler, goldsmith, at the Spread Eagle in Lombard Street, shall be very well rewarded."

Taylor, —
In a ledger of Edward Backwell's for the year 1663 we find the following entry under the date of July 7: "Mr. Taylor the goldsmith for the lease he had in y^e signe of y^e Lyon £040:00:00."

Taylor, Lloyd, and Co., 1784-1801. (See HANBURV.)

Tempest, Robert,
A goldsmith, occupied the Three Crowns in 1723, afterwards No. 7, Lombard Street.

Temple, John,
Mentioned by Pepys in his Diary, under date September 30, 1665: "Mr. Temple, the fat blade, Sir Robert Viner's chief man." It is supposed that Sir Robert Viner, having lost a vast sum of money by the closing of the Exchequer on January 2, 1672, was obliged to give up his business, and that John Temple, his chief man, set up as a goldsmith, as in the "Little London Directory" we find John Temple and John Seale were keeping running-cashes at the Three Tuns, in Lombard Street, in 1677.

For the following remarks respecting the Harp and Cross money (money coined by the Commonwealth) I am indebted to Pepys, who states that he took them down in writing from Temple's own mouth:—"Before the Harp and Crosse money was cried down, he and his fellow goldsmiths did make some particular trials what proportion that money bore to the old King's money, and they found that it generally come to, one with another, about £25 in every £100. Of this money there was, upon the calling of it in, £650,000 at least brought into the Tower; and from thence he computes that the whole money of England must be full £16,250,000, but, for all this, believes that there is about £30,000,000: he supposing that about the King's coming in, when he begun to observe the quantity of the new money, people begun to be fearful of this money's being cried down, and so picked it out and set it a going as fast as they could to be rid of it; and he thinks £30,000,000 the rather, because, if there were but £16,250,000, the King, having £2,000,000 every year, would have the whole money of the kingdom in his hands in eight years.

"He tells me about £350,000 sterling was coined out of the French money, the proceeds of Dunkirke: so that, with what was coined of the Crosse money, there is new coined about £1,000,000, besides the gold, which is guessed at £500,000.

"He tells me that, though the King did deposit the French money in pawn all the while for £350,000, he was forced to borrow thereupon till the tools could be made for the new minting in the present form. Yet the interest he paid for that time came to £35,000: Viner having to his knowledge £10,000 for the use of £100,000 of it."

Alderman Backwell also must have profited from this source, as his ledgers show that he kept separate accounts headed "Harpe and Crosse Money."

On May 19, 1663, Pepys visited the Tower with Sir John Minnes; when he was shown by Mr. Slingsby and Mr. Howard, Comptroller of the Mint, the method of making the new money, of which they coined 16 or 24,000 pounds per week. After relating the process, and an anecdote about a man swallowing the silver in small globules, by which means he acquired a large amount of metal, he goes into a calculation about the Harp and Cross money, which I quote: "At dinner they did discourse very finely to us of the probability that there is a vast deal of money hid in the land, from this: that in King Charles's time there was near ten millions of money coyned, besides what was then in being of King James's and Queen Elizabeth's, of which there is a good deal at this day in being.

"Next, that there was but £750,000 coyned of the Harp and Crosse money; and of this there was £500,000 brought in upon its being called in. And from very good argument they find that there cannot be less of it in Ireland and Scotland than £100,000; so that there is but £150,000 missing; and of that, suppose that there should be not above £50,000 still remaining, either melted down, hid, or lost, or hoarded up in England, there will then be but £100,000 left to be thought to have been transported.

"Now, if £750,000 in twelve years' time lost but £100,000 in danger of being transported, then £10,000,000 in thirty-five years' time will have lost but £3,888,880 and odd pounds; and, as there is £650,000 remaining after twelve years' time in England, so, after thirty-five years' time, which was within this two years, there ought in proportion to have been resting £6,111,120, or thereabouts, besides King James and Queen Elizabeth's money. Now, that most of this money be hid is evident, as they reckon, because of the dearth of money immediately upon the calling in of the States' money, which was £500,000 that come in; and then there was not any money to be had in this City, which, they say, to their own observation and knowledge was so. And therefore, though I can say nothing in it myself, I do not dispute it."

We learn from the Register of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth that in February, 1672, John Temple was married to Dorrothie Colvill, spinster, by the Archbishop's licence. She was a daughter of John Colvill, goldsmith, of Lombard Street. Nothing can be traced of John Seal, with whom Temple went into partnership about this time; but I find that his future partner, Thomas Temple, was in 1672 associated with Robert Wealstead, a goldsmith, their firm being then styled Welsted (sic) and Temple. Unless there were two Thomas Temples at this time, we may infer that he did not remain long with Wealstead; as the annexed advertisement will testify.

In the London Gazette of September 18, 1684, we read the following:—"Notice to Creditors of John and Thomas Temple of London, Goldsmiths, that they repair to the house of the said Temples, being the sign of the Three Tuns in Lombard Street, to make proof of their debts before the Commissioners executing a commission of Bankrupt." Again on March 2, 1684:—"These are to give notice to Mr. Temple's creditors, That if they repair any day to Mr. Temple's shop in Lombard Street, they may receive their first dividend." On June 9, 1690, there was notice of a dividend of sixpence in the pound to be paid to the creditors of John and Thomas Temple, making in all six shillings in the pound.

Terrey, William,

Goldsmith, of Lombard Street, between 1600 and 1629.

Thame, James,

Goldsmith, 1349. His monument was set up in Allhallows Church, Bread Street.

The National Penny Bank (Limited).

This institution was established in 1875. Head office, 59, Victoria Street, Westminster, with fourteen branches in London and suburbs. It was started for the purpose of encouraging thrift, and receives sums of money ranging from one penny to any superior amount, upon which it gives three per cent interest. On January 1, 1890, it had 64,121 accounts, with a sum in hand amounting to £547,484.

Tho,

Goldsmith, circa 1694, at the sign of Cupid on a shell rock, in Green Court, Old Jewry.

Thomas, Jeremiah,

Goldsmith, 1684, at the Hartichoak, in Exchange Alley.

Thorney,

Goldsmith, Lombard Street. There is an entry, dated September 22, 1648, in the "Books of Committee for the advance of Money" to the effect that he had money of Earl of Lanerick, a delinquent.

Thorneycroft, Edward,

Goldsmith in the Strand, 1714-19, in which latter year he was bankrupt.

Thorneycroft, Henry,

Goldsmith, in 1702, at the Golden Bottle, in the Strand.

Thorpe, Thomas,

Goldsmith, in 1684, at the Goat, near the Temple Gate, in Fleet Street.

Thovy, Michael,

Goldsmith, was hanged in 1275.

Throwstone, John, or Thurstone,

At first embroiderer, then goldsmith, and Sheriff in 1516, gave forty pounds towards the purchase of the Embroiderers' Hall, Guthurun's Lane (Gutter Lane), which was principally inhabited by gold-beaters. By testament he left £100 towards the building of St. Dunstan's Chapel. He died 1519.

Thursby, John,

Was at the Ball, in Lombard Street, in 1677, in which year his name appears in the "Little London Directory." We likewise meet with it in the London Gazette of 1686, in an advertisement for some article lost, for which he will pay a reward. He died in 1700, and was buried at St. Mary Woolnoth's.

Timbrell, Robert,

Goldsmith, of Sherborne Lane, 1690–1715.

Timbrell, Thomas,

Goldsmith and banker, of Lombard Street, became bankrupt in 1740.

Toppesfeld, John de,

Goldsmith, 1349.

Totenhale, Nicholas de,

Goldsmith, 1348, of St. John Zakary.

Townley, Thomas,

Of Lombard Street. He probably was at the sign of the Ram, as in the "Little London Directory" of 1677 we find Ward and Townley were at that sign in Lombard Street, keeping running-cashes. In August of that year we read in the London Gazette that a small picture set in gold was found on the road between Islington and London, near the Pest-house, and that the true owner might hear of the same at Mr. Tho. Townley's, a goldsmith, in Lumbard Street. The sign of the Ram has since become No. 57.

Townsend, Thomas,

Goldsmith, 1655, of St. Botolph's parish.

Trapis, Robert (or Trappis),

A goldsmith in 1526. All that can be gathered concerning him is from an epitaph recorded by Stow as being put up in the choir of the church of St. Leonard in St. Martin's-le-Grand:

" When the bels be merily roong,
And the masse devoutly sung,
And the meat merily eaten,
Then shall Robert Trips, his wives
And children be forgotten."

Treat, Richard,

Goldsmith, circa 1626, of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Treat, Robert,

Goldsmith, circa 1622, of St. Botolph, Bishopsgate.

Turner, Bernard,

Was a goldsmith at the Golden Fleece, in Lombard Street; one of those who suffered by the closing of the Exchequer on January 2, 1672. The amount of money he had lent was £16,275 9s. 8d., for which he received a bond covenanting to pay him 6 per cent. interest, i.e. £976 10s. 6d. per annum. The following curious advertisement is in the London Gazette of February, 1674:—

"Lost from a coach between Tottenham High Cross and Kingsland, a box of Table and Childbed Linnen, notice to be given to Bernard Turnor, Goldsmith, at the Golden Fleece, in Lombard Street, who shall have £5 for his panes."

In the "Little London Directory" of 1677 Barnard Turner and Samuel Tookie were keeping running-cashes at the Fleece, in Lombard Street.

In 1718 there was a firm of bankers styled Turner, Caswall, and Co., in Lombard Street. May they not have been the descendants of Turner and Tookie?

Turner, Caswall, and Co., 1713. (See CASWALL.)Twiford, Sir Nicholas (sometimes written Twyford),

Was a goldsmith to Edward III. He was Mayor in 1388. Stow records of him that he and Dame Margery, his wife, rebuilt the church of St. John Zachary, and made a tomb for themselves and others of their race. He also gave to the church of St. Matthew, Cheape, a house with the appurtenances called the Griffon on the Hope, in Friday Street.

Twining and Co.,

Bankers, of 217, Strand.

Thomas Twining,* an ancestor of the present firm in the Strand, established the business of a tea-man at Tom's Coffee House, the sign of Y^e Golden Lyon, in Devereux Court, at the commencement of the eighteenth century, the same forming part of the premises in which the trade has been carried on by his lineal descendants to the present day.

In the Spectator of May 18, 1712, an advertisement named Mr. Twining to pay a reward for some article lost, at his Coffee House, in the Strand.

During a considerable period of their existence the firm had exercised the function of bankers to their family connexions; but it was not until the year 1824 that the then partners (great-grandsons of the founder) opened an office with a separate entrance in Devereux Court, for their banking business. The result fully justified their expectations, and the premises soon became inconveniently small for their purpose. A site was accordingly cleared for the erection of the present banking-house, on their property in the Strand, the line of Devereux Court having been altered for the purpose under the authority of a writ from the Crown, and the business of their bank was removed to it in the year 1836. The partners at that date consisted of:

Richard Twining.
George Twining.
John Aldred Twining ; and Richard Twining, junior.

At the present time, 1890, the firm consists of:

Richard Twining.
Samuel Harvey Twining.
Herbert Haynes Twining.
Arthur James Tweed (a grandson of the senior partner); and Samuel Twining.

Twiselton, John,

Goldsmith and Alderman, died in 1525, and was buried in St. Mathew's, Cheape.

Tysoe and Co., 1752-5. (See WILLIS.)Union Bank of London (Limited),

2, Princes Street, was established in 1839. It has eight branches in London, and has a paid-up capital of £1,705,000.

* The name is spelt Twinning in the indenture of apprenticeship of Thomas Twining in 1694, but he signed his name with only one "n."

Union Bank of London (Limited)—continued.

The Chancery Lane branch absorbed the banking business of Messrs. Dixon, Brooks, and Co. in 1860.

Its reserve fund amounts to £850,000.

Urber, Jeffrey,

Banker in Fenchurch Street, stopped payment in 1721. In the London Journal of March 10, 1722, we find a note stating that he was formerly a banker in Lombard Street, and was appointed assistant to Mr. De Gols, as treasurer to the trustees of the forfeited estates of the late directors, and also one of the clerks of the treasury of the South Sea Company.

Vance, Richard,

Goldsmith, 1636, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth. He died in 1641.

Vandolph, John,

Goldsmith, circa 1497. He was a Dutchman. In the Privy Purse expenses of Henry VII. the following item is recorded : "To John Vandelf for a collar of gold for the King xxxii." Also : "For garnyshing a salett xxxvij*l.* is*h.* iii*d.*"

Vanne, John,

Of the Society of the Ballardi. This was a society of Lombard merchants, who were usually money-lenders and bankers, circa 1316. He appears to have lived in the parish of St. Antonin, and was possessed of tenements elsewhere in the City of London and in the realm of France ("Calendar of Wills, Court of Husting, London").

Banker, in London, locality unknown, circa 1748. I am favoured with this name, hitherto unknown to me, by Mr. C. A. Ward, who found a letter addressed to him amongst some papers he had by him.

Viner, Sir George,

Eldest son of Sir Thomas Vyner, was a goldsmith and banker in Lombard Street, in which he was born in 1638. He was educated at Merchant Taylors' School, and St. John's College, Cambridge ; and was knighted by Charles II., to whom he was goldsmith. He died in 1673.

Viner, James,

Goldsmith, Lombard Street ; died in 1666. He was a son of William Viner.

Violet, Thomas (circa 1634–60),

Was the grandson of Rafell Violet, born in Antwerp, and mentioned in the Visitation of London, 1634. Charles I. entrusted him with various commissions of enquiry, etc., and wrote him several letters ; in one of which, dated Oxford, November 19, 1643, after thanking him for his services, the King promises to pay him for them "when God shall enable us." He was also entrusted by Charles with a letter of peace to the City, which was received in Common Hall on January 6, 1643, and resulted in its being "frustrated, made void, and contemned," and in Violet being sent to the Tower ! In 1660 he petitioned Charles II. for redress, and published in 1660 a quarto tract, now scarce and curious, entitled "An Appeal to Cæsar, wherein Gold and Silver is proved to be the King's Majesties' Royal Commodity, &c."

On page 20 we read : "All the world knows the whole stock of the money of the Kingdom is to be disposed of by the credit of the City of London ; the City of London gives the vote to the kingdom, and the merchants of London, for credit upon money rules the City."

On page 22 : "The merchants of London have transported all the gold and most of the silver out of England, principally by the confederation and assistance of the goldsmiths in Lombard Street, who are just in the nature of the bankers at Amsterdam ; and the goldsmith is your merchant's jacall, as the jacall is to the lion—they hunt for the lion's prey. The goldsmiths lay up gold and silver for the merchants to transport, some goldsmiths in Lombard Street keeping at this day many great merchants of London cashes and some noblemen's cash ; by this credit of several men's monies, the goldsmiths in Lombard Street are in the nature of bankers, and have a great stock of treasure by them always of gold, forraign coines, and silver."

And on page 23 : "The goldsmiths goe between the Mint and the merchants that transport gold and silver, and outbid the Mint a 1*d.*, and sometimes 2*d.* and more, the ounce in silver, and 5*s.* the ounce in gold at this day ; and so catch up all the gold and silver to transport, being factors and purveyors to the merchant that transports gold and silver."

The following entry I extract from Ruding's "Annals of the Coinage," under date 1639–40 :

"About this time the House of Commons appears to have directed its attention to the evils which were occasioned by the exportation of gold, the consideration of which was, on the 18th of March, referred to a committee ; and Thomas Violet, of London, goldsmith, one who followed that business, was ordered to attend from time to time, and to have the privilege of the House freely to come and go, without the molestation of any during the dependance of that business, unless, upon any complaint against him to the House, it should be otherwise ordered."—Commons Journals, vol. ii. p. 106.

Violet, in 1636, was accused of collecting the heaviest coins, both gold and silver, and melting them into bullion. He also gave a higher price than was allowed by the Mint. For this he was informed against in the Star Chamber, and imprisoned for a long time ; but he was pardoned on paying a fine of £2000 in gold, and delivering up the names of his accomplices. The cause was heard in the Star Chamber on February 17, 1646 : "For transporting gould out of this kingdom and other Offences." Then follow the names of twelve goldsmiths, who were brought to trial (State Papers, Domestic : Charles I., vol. 347, Nos. 38 and 39).

A small quarto volume was published in London in 1660, entitled, "The Great Trappaner of England Discovered ; being a true narrative of many dangerous and abominable practises of one Thomas Violet, goldsmith, to Trappan the Jewes, &c."

We may assume that he lived in Fleet Street, from the following return of hearth-tax for St. Bride's parish, Shoe Lane and Fleet Street precinct, which we find in "Lay Subsidies" in the Public Record Office : "— Violet, charged for 1 hearth, 1660–5."

Vyner or Viner, Sir Robert

(The name was spelt both ways), was a goldsmith and banker in a very large way of business; indeed, he has been called the "Prince of Goldsmiths." He resided in Lombard Street, next to St. Mary Woolnoth's church on the east side, on the site of the present Post Office, the house and grounds occupying about a quarter of an acre. He was born in 1631, and he continued the business of Sir Thomas Viner and Sir George Viner.

Sir Robert Vyner made the Regalia for Charles II., and the Treasury paid him £21,978 9s. 11d. and £10,000 for two crowns, two sceptres, and a globe of gold, set with diamonds, rubies, sapphires, emeralds and pearls, St. Edward's staff, the armilla, ampull, and other the regalia, all of gold. He likewise lent jewels and plate to his Majesty for the ceremony, at a good profit. He was paid this account on June 20, 1662.*

Sir Robert Vyner was Sheriff in 1666, and the Goldsmiths' Company lent their plate to him during his shrievalty. He was Lord Mayor of London in 1674. An amusing anecdote is told of this "Prince of Goldsmiths" on the occasion of his entertaining King Charles II. at Guildhall during his Mayoralty. In Grammont's "Personal History of Charles II." it is recorded that

"Charles more than once dined with the good citizens of London on their Lord Mayor's Day, and did so the year Sir Robert Viner was Lord Mayor. Sir Robert was a very loyal man, and, if you will allow the expression, very fond of his sovereign; but what with the joy he felt at heart for the honour done him by his Prince, and the warmth he was in with continual toasting healths to the Royal Family, his Lordship grew a little too fond of his Majesty, and entered into a familiarity not altogether graceful in so public a place. The King understood very well how to extricate himself in all such difficulties, and, with a hint to the company to avoid ceremony, stole off, and made towards his coach, which stood ready for him in Guildhall-yard. But the Mayor liked his company so well, and was grown so intimate, that he pursued him hastily, and, catching him fast by the hand, cried out, with a vehement oath and accent: 'Sir, you shall stay, and take t'other bottle.'

"The airy monarch looked kindly at him over his shoulder, and with a smile and graceful air repeated this line of the old song:

"He that's drunk is as great as a King,"

and immediately returned back and complied with his host's invitation."

In the Stocks Market Sir Robert Vyner set up an equestrian statue of Charles II. trampling on his enemies. The statue was originally made to represent John Sobieski, King of Poland, upon horseback trampling on the Turk; but, that monarch's head being taken off, that of Charles was substituted, and, in the place of the Turk, the head of the prostrate foe was altered to represent Oliver Cromwell. This statue was removed in 1736 to make room for the Mansion House; and in 1779 the Corporation presented it to Robert Vyner, Esq., the legal representative of the loyal and convivial Lord Mayor, who had it conveyed to his country seat, Swakeley House, Middlesex.

A happily conceived bon mot is ascribed to Vyner. "I am absolutely afraid," said the Duke of Buckingham to Sir Robert, "that I shall die a beggar." "At the rate you go," replied Sir Robert, "I am afraid you will live one."

After the Great Fire of 1666, Sir Robert Vyner temporarily occupied the African House, near the middle of Broad Street. Several other goldsmiths carried on their business in Broad Street and Winchester Street. The London Gazette of June 20, 1670, however, announced that they had removed to their several houses in Lombard Street, as formerly.

Pepys mentions Sir Robert Vyner several times in his Diary. I give the following few extracts therefrom, as bearing upon the goldsmiths' trade.

On September 30, 1665, Pepys records: "Thence to the office, and thence to Captain Cocke's, where I find Mr. Temple, the fat blade, Sir Robert Viner's chief man."

This Mr. Temple afterwards set up himself as a goldsmith in Lombard Street. (See "Little London Directory" of 1677, and under the head of TEMPLE in this work.)

* "Archæologia," xxix. p. 262.

In December, 1665, Pepys paid in £1258 to Vyner, for Lord Sandwich's use.

It would appear from the following extract from Rev. Mynors Bright's edition of Pepys' Diary, that Samuel Pepys kept a private account at Vyner's, as well as at Stokes'. On February 1, 1666, he writes: "I to Ald. Backwell's to set all my reckonings straight there, which I did, and took up all my notes." (This was probably official business.) "So evened to this day, and thence to Sir Robert Viner's, where I did the like, leaving clear in his hands just £2000 of my owne money, to be called for when I pleased." No doubt this was a deposit account he had opened at Viner's. On March 29 following he notes that he went to Viner's "to look after the getting some money, that is lodged there, I having no mind to have it lie there longer." The next day he writes as follows:—"I out to Lombard Streete, and there received £2200 and brought it home; and, contrary to expectation, received £35 for the use of £2000 of it for a quarter of a year, where it hath produced me this profit, and hath been a convenience to me as to care and security of my house, and demandable at two days' warning as this hath been." Thus it would seem that Viner allowed him 7 per cent for his money at two days' call. Again, on July 11, 1666: "To Sir Robert Viner, and there did agree with him to accommodate some business of tallys so as I shall get in nearly £2000 into my own hands, which is in the King's upon tallys; which will be a pleasure to me, and satisfaction to have a good sum in my own hands, whatever civil disturbances should be in the State; though it troubles me to lose so great a profit as the King's interest of ten per cent. for that money."

On October 19, 1666, Pepys records that "Viner, too, and Bakewell were sent for this afternoon; and was before the King and his Cabinet about money."

In Herbert's "History of the Goldsmiths' Company," under date Wednesday, December 11, 1666, we read: "Mr. Warden made known that he had delivered to Sir Robert Vyner a bag with some of the standard pieces, and some molten silver, sealed, both which belonged to the Company."

On April 5, 1667, Pepys went to see Sir Robert Vyner and made up his accounts with him to his great content, but he remarks: "I find they do not keep them so regularly as to enable them to do it easily, and truly, and readily, nor would it have been easily stated by anybody on my behalf but myself, several things being to be referred to memory, which nobody else could have done, and therefore it is fully necessary for me to even accounts with these people as often as I can."

On May 17, 1667, Pepys writes: "To Sir R. Viner's, with 600 pieces of gold to turn into silver, for the enabling me to answer Sir G. Carteret's £3000."

And again on June 17, 1667, Pepys records his fears "That the bankers are broke as to ready money, though Viner had £100,000 by him when our trouble began: that he and the Duke of Albemarle have received into their own hands, of Viner, the former £10,000, and the latter £12,000, in tallies or assignments, to secure what was in his hands of theirs; and many other great men of our masters have done the like."

In 1667, on the first appearance of the Dutch, Pepys records that the King and Court are much troubled at the idea that the bankers will be broke as to ready money, though Viner had £100,000 by him when the trouble began.

In June, 1673, a gilt-chased dish and gilt sugar castor, bearing his Majesty's arms, were stolen from the Confectionary Office in Whitehall. Information concerning the robbery was to be given to Sir Robert Vyner in Lombard Street.

In 1677 great loans were advanced to the Government by the goldsmiths, on the credit of the hereditary excise. To pay the interest of these loans terminable annuities were secured and charged upon that revenue, by letters patent granted to the several contractors or principal creditors, who, in their turn, made assignments of divers portions of those annuities to the persons who had contributed towards their loans. In the Assumption Books, for the payment of interest upon the bankers' loans from 1677 to 1688, a great many transfers were made by Vyner and the other goldsmiths, who had lent their customers' money to the Exchequer.

By that memorable closing of the Exchequer on January 2, 1672, Sir Robert Vyner lost the sum of £416,724 13s. 1½d., in consideration of which he was awarded £25,003 9s. 4d. per annum out of the Excise; and customers were commanded in the mean time not to sue him. Whether the same injunction applied generally to the protection of all the goldsmiths who were similarly robbed, I have no means of ascertaining.

It is not known how long Vyner continued at his old shop after this heavy loss. We find, however, that he was in Coleman Street in 1680.

In the London Gazette of March 13, 1683, an advertisement runs thus: "Sir Robert Vyner desires his creditors to meet him at the Cardinal's Cap Tavern in Lombard Street, on the 25th Instant, at nine in the morning to consider the best way for the satisfaction of their debts." In December of the same year he desires them to meet him at the Vine, in Lombard Street, for a similar purpose. Sir Robert did so much for the church of St. Mary Woolnoth that it was called Sir Robert Vyner's church.

He had a black boy, who died of consumption. He had his body embalmed and kept in a box at his seat, Swakeley House, Middlesex. Pepys mentions having seen it (Diary, September 8, 1665).

He died on September 2, 1688, at Windsor Castle, and was buried at St. Mary Woolnoth's, in Lombard Street.

Vyner, Sir Thomas,

Was a goldsmith of high standing in the days of James I., Charles I., the Commonwealth, and of Charles II. He was established before 1620 in his trade.

It is recorded by Ruding that, on December 20, 1649, Lord Commissioner Whitelock reported from the Council of State that in pursuance of an order of Parliament of November 16, for the making of standard pieces of gold and silver, a jury of goldsmiths appeared before the Council, and were sworn for the making thereof:

- Sir John Wollaston, Knight and Alderman.
- Thomas Viner, Alderman.
- Thomas Noell, Alderman.
- Francis Ash.
- Thomas Smithies.
- Francis Hall.
- George Courthrop.
- John Perryn.
- Richard Morrell.
- Samuel Moore.
- George Snell.
- Richard Gibbes.
- Matthew Mason.
- Alexander Jackson.

He served the office of Sheriff in 1648.

In his "Table of English Silver and Gold Coins" Folkes (as quoted by Ruding) deposes:

"On the 6th December, 1651, Sir Thomas Vyner Kn^t. and Bart. Francis Meynell, Esq^r the Sheriff of London, and Edward Backwell, Esq^r contracted with His Majesty to take in by tale, and to coin with convenient expedition, at their own charge, into English current monies, the coins which were called all Crown and Harp monies; receiving for the same a consideration of £5 10^s for every £100 in tale, in lieu of want of weight and expense of coinage. Upon which there was accordingly recoined, of the said monies, the sum of £500,000 in tale." For this statement no authority is given. The transaction, as Ruding observes, is very extraordinary on every account, and the date not quite two months after Charles's escape into France, subsequent to the battle of Worcester.

Throughout the period of the Commonwealth, Sir Thomas Vyner and Edward Backwell made

In February, 1658, two thousand pounds' worth of bullion was delivered to Peter Blondeau for coinage into milled money with Cromwell's head.

I am informed by a member of this family that Sir Thomas Vyner wrote a paper justifying the killing of Charles I. He was friendly with Cromwell, but he subsequently quarrelled with him, and he voted for the return of Charles II. He married Honor Humble, the daughter of George Humble, an ancestor of the present Earl of Dudley.

Sir Thomas Vyner was joint Master of the Mint with Sir Robert Vyner in the early part of the reign of Charles II.

Sir Thomas Vyner was Lord Mayor in 1653, and during his Mayoralty, on February 8, 1654, he was knighted at Grocers' Hall by Cromwell, when he was being entertained at a banquet, and was created a baronet in 1660. He died on May 11, 1665, and was buried at St. Mary Woolnoth's, in Lombard Street. Pepys records, under date of June 1, that he "with Creed to Goldsmiths' Hall, to the burial of Sir Thomas Viner, which Hall and Haberdashers' also was so full of people, that we were fain for ease and coolness to go forth to Pater Noster Row, to choose a silke to make me a plain ordinary suit. That done we walked to Cornehill, and there at Mr. Cade's stood in the balcon and saw the funeral which was with the blue coat boys and old men, all the Aldermen and Lord Mayor and the number of the company very great; the greatest I ever did see for a taverne."

He left £200 to the Goldsmiths' Company, to pay "for ever" to seven poor men of the company who were, or had been, dwellers in or near Lombard Street, severally 10s. half-yearly, at the discretion of the Wardens, and to the company's clerk every half-year, 6s.

Wade, Peter,

Goldsmith, keeping running-cashes at the Mearmaid, in Lombard Street, in 1677. His name is not met with after 1687.

Waldgrave, Edward,

Anchor and Crown, Russell Street, Covent Garden, 1699. He was a bankrupt on February 21, 1709, but was still in business in 1721, as we learn from the London Journal of that year.

Walker, Richard,

Goldsmith, circa 1597, of St. Peter, Westcheap.

Wallington,

A goldsmith, 1667. He is mentioned by Pepys in his Diary on September 15, 1667, in the following humorous terms:—"He is a little fellow, did sing with a most excellent bass, and yet a poor fellow, a working goldsmith that goes without gloves."

Wallis, Major Joh,

Was at the Angell (the site of No. 1), in Lombard Street, in 1677. The London Gazette of September 28, 1702, announces that William Wallis and Nathaniel Studley, of London, goldsmiths, were bankrupts. They might well have been the descendants of the above in the business.

Walpol, John de, 1349,

A goldsmith, to whom a monument was set up in Allhallows Church, Bread Street. He left many legacies, and some for pious uses.

Walpole, Clark, and Sisson.

This business was established at the corner of Clement's Lane, in Lombard Street, by Robert Surman, who had been in his early days with Caswall and Mount, and so was connected with the South Sea Company. From 1731 to 1748 he was in partnership with Martin and Co. Shortly after this he started a bank of his own. The firm makes its first appearance in the list of bankers of 1754, which shows that the style of the firm in that year was Surman, Dinely, and Cliffe. In 1756 it was Surman and Cliffe, and in 1759 the style changed again, becoming Cliffe, Walpole, and Clark. This continued until 1769, when Cliffe's name vanishes, and Walpole and Clark take in a new partner of the name of Bourne; thus, in 1770, the firm was Walpole, Clark, and Bourne, located at 28, Lombard Street. In 1776 they assumed a fresh partner of the name of Mr. Potts; and in 1789 another Mr. Clark took the place of Mr. Potts, when the firm became Walpole, Clark, Walpoles, and Clark. The next change was in 1794, when the firm was Walpole, Walpole, Clark, and Sissons. That continued to be the style until 1798, when it was altered to Walpole, Clark, and Sissons, the designation enduring until the firm came to an end in 1808.

Mr. J. B. Martin has informed me that for some years previous to (and including) 1748, Robert Cliffe and Thomas Dineley had current accounts at the Grasshopper, but their accounts were closed in 1749. Therefore we may fairly infer from this circumstance, that this new firm were seceders from Martins. Cliffe had been their clerk, and witnessed the signatures of the firm 1737–40.

Walsh, John,

Goldsmith, circa 1370. Edward IV. is reported to have bought a silver-gilt cup of him, decorated with enamel.

Walsh, Nicholas,

Goldsmith, 1348. All he died possessed of was devoted to pious and charitable purposes.

Walton, William,

Goldsmith. He was a great benefactor to the Goldsmiths' Company, to whom, in 1458, he left several houses in the parish of St. Peter, West Cheap, for charitable uses.

Walwyn and Co., 1793–1800. (See STRANGE.)Wanley, George, and Co.

Were goldsmiths, at the Three Squirrels, in Fleet Street, between 1713 and 1719. (See GOSLING.)

Ward, Robert, and Towneley, John,

Were at the Ram, in Lombard Street, in 1677, keeping running-cashes; but how much earlier they may have been in business, or how long they continued in it, there is no evidence to prove.

Ward, Sir William,

A goldsmith and jeweller to Queen Henrietta Maria about 1630. He became wealthy, and retired to his seat in Staffordshire. His wife was a daughter of Mr. Humble, whose sister Honor married Sir Thomas Vyner, a goldsmith and banker, also Mayor in 1653. Sir William Ward's son, Humble Ward, was elevated to the peerage in 1644 as Baron Ward of Birmingham. His present representative is the Earl of Dudley and Ward.

Ware,

A goldsmith, circa 1663. The following entry occurs in one of Backwell's ledgers, July 8, 1663:—

“For a tankard, wey. 24^{oz} 10^{dt} at 5. 7. per oz. lb. 6. 16. 9¹₂.”

with a memorandum: “which was paid for in gold.”

Warham, William, 1698–1722,

Goldsmit, at the Golden Cup, in Shire Lane, Temple Bar. In 1721 he was in Chancery Lane, and advertised for a lost lottery order. He was bankrupt in 1722.

Warley, Nicholas,

Goldsmit, who died in 1520, requested to be buried in St. Mary Woolnoth's church.

Warner, John,

Goldsmit keeping running-cashes, was established in the Strand, without Temple Bar, as early as 1663. He was referred to in an advertisement in the London Gazette of August 3, 1693, as authorized to pay a reward of three guineas for the recovery of a black mare, stolen from Lord Saye and Sele's coachman in Gloucestershire, by two highwaymen, "the one a lusty full-faced man in a short bob-wig and a large brown Riding Coat, the other a tall thin-faced man, with bob-wig; both aged about 30." It would appear from this that, so long as the mare was recovered, they did not care at all about apprehending the highwaymen, who would probably re-steal the mare at the first opportunity. This is only one of the many strange advertisements which were inserted in the papers of that date, promising a reward if the missing, stolen, or lost article be taken to the house of such and such a goldsmith.

By a cheque dated 1700 we find that John Paltock was signing for him. In 1712 two cheques of Lord Weymouth's, payable to the order of Thomas Snow, are witnessed by John Paltock for Mr. Warner. In 1716 a signature proves the firm to have been John Warner and Co., and, later in the same year, John Paltock and Co. Between this year and 1729 John Paltock entered into partnership with Thomas Snow, described of Fleet Street, when they moved to the sign of Y^e Golden Anchor, without Temple Bar, in the Strand. The following advertisement appeared in the London Gazette of June 1, 1702:—"Lost, a gold striking watch, whoever gives notice to John Warner, goldsmith, without Temple Bar, shall have 5 guineas reward on delivery."

An interesting advertisement appears in the London Gazette of January 4, 1706, for two notes lost, one for £200 and another for £150, under the hand of his servant T. Snow. This is the first mention of this name, under which the business thereafter was so well known.

For further particulars of this business see under the heading of STRAHAN.

Warren, Laurence,

Goldsmit, Assay Master of the Mint in 1545.

Warter, Richard,

Of the Golden Lion, Holborn, 1708. A formal announcement in the Gazette of November, 1747, informs us that Mr. Warter, formerly an eminent goldsmith at Holborn Bridge, died at his house in Hatton Garden.

Wasson, John,

Goldsmit, 1662, was at the Star, near Exchange Alley, Lombard Street.

Wealstead, Robert,

At the sign of the Hare, in Lombard Street (now No. 18), in Alderman Backwell's ledgers of 1663 is described as a goldsmith. In the list of goldsmiths who lost money by the closing of the Exchequer in January, 1672, appears the name of Robert Welsted (sic). His claim was for £11,307 12s. 1d., and the amount he received per annum was £678 9s. Early in 1672 we learn from Edward Backwell's ledgers that Welsted was in partnership with one Thomas Temple. The latter appears to have joined John Temple at the Three Tuns shortly afterwards, unless, of course, it should happen to be the same name. His name appeared in the London Gazette of 1695 as a bankrupt, and notices of dividends on the estate were advertised some years afterwards.

Webb, Robert,

Goldsmith, in St. Martin's-in-the-Fields. The following advertisement concerning this man, who evidently did pawnbroking business, is interesting. It appeared in the London Gazette for October 9, 1690:—

"Whereas Nathaniel Oldfield, administrator to Robert Webb, late of St. Martins in the Fields, goldsmith, Hath several things in his hands which he supposeth to be Pawns; He desires the owners to come to the Mitre Tavern in King Street, Westminster, by the 1st Nov. next, otherwise the same will be sold."

At this time it was quite the usual thing for even the large goldsmiths to take in pawns. Many such transactions are upon record in their books.

Webb, William,

Goldsmith, circa 1620, of St. Bride's, Fleet Street.

Webbe, George,

Goldsmith, 1539–51, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Welch and Rogers, 1766. (See OLDING.)Weld, John,

Goldsmith, circa 1625, of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Wentworth, Chaloner, and Rishworth,

At 25, Threadneedle Street, 1813–25.

Were and Co., 1802. (See BRUCE.)Werlyngworth, Nicholas,

Goldsmith, 1349, probably of Chepe. He was buried in St. Paul's churchyard ("Calendar of Wills, Court of Husting, London").

West, Matthew,

A goldsmith, of the Seven Stars, Clare Street, Clare Market, advertised in the Flying Post of 1713 that he had purchased a number of lottery tickets, which he wished to dispose of. The following is one of his advertisements, which appeared in the London Journal, May 19, 1722:—

"¶¶ MATTHEW WEST, Goldsmith, at the Seven Stars in Clare street, Clare Market, gives Notice, that he is empowered by the Director of the Lottery set forth by the States of Groningen in Holland, to dispose of 10000 Tickets, viz. from No. 16001 to 26000 inclusive, it being the most advantagious that hath been set on Foot, consisting of 25000 Tickets being Prizes, and 7000 Premiums which are given in gratis. This Lottery is divided into 10 Classes, the Subscribers only paying 5s. in the 1st Class, 10s. for the 2d, 15s. for the 3d, £1 for the 4th, and £1 5s. for the 5th Class. Credit is given by the States for the other 5 Classes; and may gain by one Ticket from £1000 to £9000 or upwards, as may be seen by the Scheme at large, given Gratis at my House aforesaid or at my Offices at North's Coffee-house in King street, near Guildhall, and at John's Coffee-house in Exchange Alley; likewise at Mr. Isaac Barbutt's, Merchant, at the Blue Ball in Great St. Hellen, Bishopsgate street, who is empowered by the Director to dispose of the like Number, viz. from 38001 to 48000 inclusive."

He appears to have been established at the above address from 1697 to 1732.

Weston and Co., 1796. (See YOUNG.)

Wetherell, Thomas,

Goldsmith, 1540–53, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth.

Wetherhill, John,

Goldsmith, 1571, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth, died 1578.

Wheeler, Charles,

Goldsmith, 1681, at the Golden Tun, near Ivy Bridge, Strand.

Wheeler, John, 1559–75. (See CHILD.)Wheeler, William, 1666. (See CHILD.)White,

A goldsmith, before the Great Fire, residing at the Buck and Cock, in Lombard Street, west of the Post-house, rebuilt by Sir Robert Vyner in 1683, and called the Phoenix.

White and Churchill, 1677. (See PETER WHITE.)White, Peter,

Was a goldsmith keeping running-cashes in Lombard Street. The first time his name has been met with was in 1672, but there is evidence that he was located there before that date. In the Register of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth, November 26, 1674, we find that his apprentice "threw himself from off the top of his master's, Peter White's house, the corner house, next Exchange Alley against Abchurch Lane." This, to a certain extent, fixes the position where he resided. From the "Little London Directory" of 1677 we learn he was in partnership with Thomas Churchill, at the Plough, in Lombard Street. Thus we may conclude that his house, situated between the present 67 and 68, or probably a portion of the site of one of them, was called the Plough. By notices in the London Gazette and elsewhere, we find that Peter White was at that sign as late as 1690. His partner, Thomas Churchy, appears in the Directory of 1667 as Churchill, which is evidently an error.

White, Thomas,

Was keeping running-cashes in 1677 at the Blue Anchor, in Lombard Street, as is shown by the "Little London Directory" of that year, and that he was at the same sign in 1693 is determined by a notice in the London Gazette. A plan of the parish of St. Edmund the King and Martyr enables us to pronounce that this house was afterwards numbered 67.

Whitehall, Gilbert,

Was a goldsmith, and must have been in a large way of business, judging from the sum of £248,866 3s. 5d. he lost by the shutting up of the Exchequer in January, 1672, for which he was awarded 6 per cent. interest, amounting to £14,931 19s. 4d. per annum.

In 1678 he made a large number of assignments into the Exchequer, by transferring the moneys of customers, taken on deposit and probably included in the above large sum, into their own names. His troubles appear to have been considerable, as may be deduced from the following extract from the Public Record Office ("Exchequer Bills and Answers, London and Middlesex, James II.", No. 28, Easter, 1 James II., A.D. 1685):—

Complaint of "Gilbert Whitehall of London Goldsmith," that "whereas your orator together with Isaac Meynell and John Grimes late of London, Goldsmiths, deceased, became bound unto Benjamine Peake of London, Merchant," in a bond for £2000 dated October, 1671, "conditioned for the payment of £1000 and interest thereof, at a day now long since past; and although by stopp of payments in the Exchequer your orator was disabled from paying the [said] debt, yet he endeavoured by all the ways he could the payment thereof and did at several times pay severall sumes of money in parte thereof unto the said Benjamin Peake," amounting to £400. Last October Peake pressed for another £100, promising not to sue Whitehall for one year if he paid it. Whitehall complied with the demand; but notwithstanding this, the said Peake has lately arrested Whitehall and keeps him in prison.

The answer of Benjamin Peake "to ye bill of compl^t of Gilbert Whitehall, Compl^t of London, Goldsmith or Banker," October 21, 1685, records that his promise was given on condition that Whitehall should pay the quarterly interest on the bond in addition to the £100, which he has not done. And further, "that he is the worse by knowing of ye complainant and his partners and other goldsmithes [having?] the sum of £5000, which money was layd up to pay his late Majesties Customs," etc.

He thinks he will be a loser if he forbears taking action to recover his debt.

Whitehall died between 1707, the date of his will, and April 20, 1710, when it was proved. He left property in Derbyshire and a considerable sum of money.

Whitehead and Co.

This business was started about 1784 at 5, Basinghall Street, by John and George Whitehead. In 1791 John Whitehead, junior, was admitted into the firm. In 1795 John Whitehead, the senior partner, retired, and in the following year it consisted of George and John Whitehead. In 1797 the style of the firm became Whitehead and Howard, and the next year they moved to 24, Cateaton Street.*

In 1804 they assumed a partner of the name of Haddock. Whitehead, Howard, and Haddock failed about 1815.

Wiggs, Robert, or Wygge,

A goldsmith in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. He was left a legacy by Dame Juliana Munday, the widow of Sir John Munday, goldsmith. There is an account for plate published in "Surrey Church Notes," by J. R. D. Tyssen.

Whitmore's.

This banking-house was started at the sign of the Artichoke, now No. 24, Lombard Street, about 1769, by William Fuller and Son. In 1799 the style of the firm was Fuller and Chatteris, which it continued to be until 1808, when it became Chatteris, Yapp, and Co.; and in 1812 it was Chatteris, Whitmore, and Co. In 1821 it finally changed to Whitmore, Wells, and Whitmore; which firm continued until 1841, when they failed.

Wickenden and Co., 1775–85. (See KENSINGTONS.)Wilkes, Dickenson, and Co.'s

Business was established at 33, Poultry, in 1790, under the style of Peeles, Wilkes, Dickensons, and Goodall. In 1793 the firm became Wilkes, Dickenson, Goodall, and Fisher. In 1801 the name of Fisher disappears, and that of Dickenson is substituted.

The firm came to an end in 1805.

Wilkinson and Co., 1796–1804. (See BLOXHAM.)

* The street was renamed Gresham Street in 1845—very improperly, Cunningham says. "Catte Street, corruptly called Catteten Street, beginneth at the north end of Ironmonger Lane, and runneth to the west end of St. Lawrence Church" (Stow, p. 102).

Willaume, David,

A goldsmith having running-cashes at the Windsor Castle, Charing Cross, 1686-90. He afterwards moved to the Golden Ball in St. James' Street, where he was in 1716. He was one of the Protestants who fled from Metz after the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes declared on October 24, 1685.

Wilkins, John,

Goldsmith, 1576, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth, died in 1600.

Williams, Deacon, and Co.

I have been unable to trace this banking-house further back than the year 1771, when they appear in the London Directory under the style of Raymond, Williams, Vere, Lowe, and Fletcher, transacting business at 81, Cornhill. Five years later they moved to No. 22, Birch Lane, and, in the next year, to No. 20, Birch Lane, the site they now occupy. In 1778 Sir Charles Raymond, Bart., retired from the firm, and established another bank at George Street, Mansion House, under the style of Raymond, Harley, Webber, and Co. In 1781 it became Raymond, Harley, Lloyd, and Cameron. The last seen of this firm was in 1789, when it was Thomas Harley, Cameron, and Son. Mr. Fletcher likewise retired, and the style in 1779 became Lowe, Vere, Williams, and Jennings, the latter name occurring only in that year. In 1786 the firm consisted of Vere and Williams only. They, however, took in some partners during the next year, as in 1788 their style became Vere, Williams, Son, Wilkinson, and Drury. In 1790 Williams became head partner, and in 1793 the name of Wilkinson is no longer seen, the style of the firm in that year being Williams, Son, and Drury. In 1799 the name of Moffat is introduced; and in 1801 an additional partner, named Burgess, was admitted. In 1810 the name of Drury disappears, whereupon the style of the firm became Williams, Son, Moffat, and Burgess. Between 1814 and 1818 their style was Williams, Son, Moffat, Burgess, and Lane. The year following, the names of Moffat and Lane drop out, the firm consisting of Williams, Williams, and Burgess. From 1824 to 1827 it was Williams, Burgess, and Williams; in 1828 Williams, Deacon, Labouchere, and Co.; and in 1842 it became Williams, Deacon, Labouchere, Thornton, and Co. Thereafter the style was Williams, Deacon, and Co., until April 16, 1890, when the following notice appeared in the Times:—

"Messrs. Williams, Deacon, and Co. announce that the Manchester and Salford Bank (Limited), with which they have been intimately connected since its formation in 1836, having determined to make London their head-quarters, the union of the two banks has been agreed to. The London business will be conducted as heretofore, with the same staff, and under the same management. The style of the bank will be Williams, Deacon, and Manchester and Salford Bank (Limited)."

It now consists of the following partners:—

Robert Williams.

John Deacon.

William Samuel Deacon.

Robert Williams, jun.

William Fickus.

John Francis William Deacon.

A memorable literary reminiscence is associated with this firm.

In Sir George Trevelyan's life of his distinguished uncle is recorded, under the date of March 7, 1856, an entry at once interesting and important: "Longman came, with a very pleasant announcement. He and his partners find that they are overflowing with money, and think that they cannot invest it better than by advancing to me, on the usual terms of course, part of what will be due to me in December. We agreed that they shall pay twenty thousand pounds into Williams's bank next week." The cheque is still preserved, as it should be, as a notable curiosity among the archives of Messrs. Longmans' firm. "The transaction," writes Macaulay, "is quite unparalleled in the history of the book-trade ; and both the people at Smith, Payne, and Smiths' who are to pay the money, and my friends who are to receive it, have been much amused. I went into the City to-day to give instructions, and was most warmly congratulated on being a great moneyed man. I said that I had some thoughts of going to the Chancellor of the Exchequer as a bidder for the next loan."

Macaulay was, we learn, a great favourite with his bankers, of whom Mr. Henry Thornton, indeed, was an old college friend. The latter on one occasion, at the historian's request, explained to him at some length the distinction between the different classes of Spanish Stock ; Active, Passive, and Deferred. "I think," said Macaulay, "that I catch your meaning... Active Spanish bonds profess to pay interest now, and do not. Deferred Spanish bonds profess to pay interest at some future time, and will not. Passive Spanish bonds profess to pay interest neither now nor at any future time. I think that you might buy a large amount of Passive Spanish bonds for a very small sum."

Williams, Sir John,

Who was styled the King's Goldsmith, and Master of the King's Jewels, lived in Elsing Spital. Stow records a fire at his house in 1541, when many of the King's jewels were burned or "imbeselled."

Williams, Thomas, 1677. (See WILLIS.)Willis, Percival, and Co.

This firm is descended from a goldsmith of the name of Thomas Williams, who, according to the "Little London Directory" of 1677, was keeping running-cashes at the Crown, in Lombard Street ; but from the parish registers we learn he was there previous to 1670, the house being afterwards numbered 76. We find by the London Gazette of 1694 that he was still at the Crown ; and on August 16, 1697, the following advertisement appeared in that paper :—"Whoever has any plate or jewells in the hands of Thomas Williams late of Lombard Street, goldsmith, deceased, are desired to fetch them away by Michaelmas next ; otherwise they will be disposed." In the following year we find that Benjamin Tudman was at the Crown ; he died 1712 ; and in 1701 Benjamin Tudman, jun., was at the same house. When Mrs. Tudman died in 1707, she was described as the wife of Benjamin Tudman, "Goldsmith and Bancker in Linnen" (Register of St. Mary Woolnoth). I have never met with this trade before, and enter it here as being remarkable.

The next item that can be ascertained about this house is that in 1708 it was conducted by Messrs. Tudman and Child, whose names we observe upon some of Messrs. Child and Co.'s cash-notes, witnessed by Thomas Greene, who subsequently was admitted into the firm. In 1710 an advertisement appeared for a cash-book of Tudman and Child, which had been lost. This was probably a pass-book. From the same source I find the firm in 1713 was Messrs. Stephen Child (a son of Sir Francis Child), Thomas Greene, and Mathias Eades. In 1718 Mr. Child appears to have resigned, as the firm was then Greene and Eades. In 1733 it was Greene and Tysoe. In 1741 their signature was witnessed by W. Willis. In 1752 the style became Tysoe, Willis, and Reade ; in 1755 Willis and Reade ; in 1774 Reade, Moorhouse, and Co. ; in 1778 Moorhouse, Willis, and Reade ; in 1787 Willis, Wood, and Co. ; in 1792 Willis, Wood, Percival, and Co. ; and in 1814 it became Willis, Percival, and Co., which was the style of the firm until February 28, 1878, when they unfortunately stopped payment through the failure of some Greek house, after having been in existence over two hundred years. At that date the firm consisted of Samuel Tomkins, Samuel Leith Tomkins, and Henry Willis.

Willitt, James,

Goldsmith, 1697, at the Three Black Lions, in the Strand.

Wilson, Joseph,

Goldsmith, 1688, over against St. Dunstan's church in Fleet Street.

Wilson, Joseph,

Goldsmith, 1697-1710, at the Plough, in Lombard Street, formerly occupied by White and Churchill. Probably Joseph Wilson of Fleet Street, recorded in the previous entry, is the same man.

Wilson, Michael, 1701,

At the Sun, in Little Lombard Street.

Wilson, William, 1713-25,

Was located over against St. Clement's church in the Strand. He was styled a banker. It was announced in the "Historical Register" of May 13, 1725, that he had shot himself through the head with a pistol.

Winterbecke, Michael Van,

Goldsmith, circa 1632, of St. Michael, Bread Street.

Wodewarde, William,

Goldsmith, in 1454 was appointed engraver of the dies, for money to be made of gold and silver, as well in the Tower as in the town of Calais, at a salary of £20 per annum (Ruding's "Annals of the Coinage of Great Britain").

Wood, Richard,

Goldsmith, 1675, at the Black Swan, Holborn.

Wood, Thomas,

Goldsmith, Sheriff of London in 1491. He built Goldsmiths' Row in Cheapside, which was then considered to be a magnificent series of houses, between Bread Street end and the Cross in Cheap. Stow thus describes them : "It containeth in number ten fair dwelling houses and fourteen shops, all in one frame, uniformly built four stories high, beautified towards the street with the Goldsmiths' Arms and the likeness of woodmen, in memory of his name, riding on monstrous beasts, all which is cast in lead, richly painted over and gilt : these he gave to the goldsmiths, with stocks of money, to be lent to young men having those shops &c." Wood Street, Cheapside, was named after him. Stow says : "His predecessors might be the first builders, owners and namers of this street." He was an especial benefactor to the church of St. Peter-in-Cheapside.

In the Great Fire of 1666 these houses were all destroyed, and the goldsmiths thereafter settled in Lombard Street.

Woodnot, Arthur,

Goldsmith, 1623, in Foster Lane.

Woodward, Richard and Thomas,

Bankers of Exchange Alley, Lombard Street. Their names are first met with on cash-notes between 1727 and 1730. They failed March 24, 1731. The following announcement is found in the Universal Spectator, March 27, 1731 :—

"On Wednesday about Four in the Afternoon, Messrs. Richard and Thomas Woodward, Bankers in Exchange Alley, stopped payment : Against whom a Commission of Bankruptcy is since taken out. Their credit was exceeding great, and the confusion occasioned hereby is inexpressible ; but 'tis believed, that on the Delivery of the last Flota's Treasure, they'll be enabled to make good all their engagements, they having lent great sums of money to Persons interested in the aforesaid Treasure."

In the Gazette of April 13, 1731, all holders of promissory and cash notes are desired to attend at

Guildhall on the 23rd instant to prove the same. In the Gazette of May 4 an advertisement desires that all creditors whose books are not settled and balanced would leave the same at the shop of the Woodwards, in order to have the same adjusted.

It is extremely probable that Richard Woodward was formerly at Atwell's, and after his failure continued the business, as in 1713 we learn from an advertisement in the Daily Courant that two tickets in the £10 lottery for the year 1712 had been lost, and were to be brought to Richard Woodward at Mr. Atwell's shop in Exchange Alley.

In April, 1734, they paid a third dividend of 5s. in the pound.

Wright and Co.

Many will remember very well the banking-house of Messrs. Wright and Co. It originated in a goldsmith's business carried on by Mr. William Wright as early as the year 1699. In 1708 the business was conducted by Mr. Richard Wright. On November 22, 1715, the loss of ten orders of the Classis Lottery of 1712 was announced in the London Gazette, and Mr. Wright offered five guineas reward for their recovery. On a draft dated 1729 I have seen the following endorsement:—“To be paid only to Mr. Anthony Wright, goldsmith, Great Russell Street, Covent Garden. Witness for Anthony Wright, H. Gyles.”

Another is addressed in 1754 to “Anthony Wright, Esq., at y^e Golden Cup, Common Garden (sic), London.”

When Anthony Wright moved from Great Russell Street to Y^e Golden Cup in Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, is unknown; but he appears to have turned his attention rather to banking than to goldsmithery. In the year 1759 his name first appears amongst the London bankers.

In 1775 he took his son into partnership; and in 1785 the style of the firm became Anthony, Francis, and Thomas Wright. In the course of that year Anthony Wright most probably died, as in 1786 the firm was Francis and Thomas Wright. In the following year Francis Wright retired from the bank, and Thomas Wright took into partnership Messrs. Selby and Robinson; the style becoming Wright, Selby, and Robinson. In 1816 it was Wright, Wright, Wright, Selby, and Robinson. This house was known as Wrights and Co. until November, 1840, when they stopped for a million sterling; and the Commercial Bank of London opened a branch on the premises, which continued until 1861, when the bank stopped payment. The following year the London and County Bank opened a branch in James Street, Covent Garden, in hopes of obtaining some of the old business; and, finding it successful, in 1864 they took possession of the old premises, 5, Henrietta Street, formerly the Golden Cup, where they have carried on their operations to the present time.

Wyken, Robert,

Young, Abraham,

11, Smithfield, 1815–21.

Young and Son.

The firm of Young and Young was started in 1795 at 37, in the Borough, by Messrs. Weston, Pinhorn, Golding, Mewsome, and Weston. Sir John Pinhorn severed his connexion with Messrs. Wilkinson and Co. to join Mr. Weston in forming this new bank. In 1808 the name of Golding does not appear. The style of the firm otherwise continued unaltered until 1817, when the Directory discloses that it had become Weston, Pinhorn, and Weston.

From 1818 to 1824 the firm was Sir John Pinborn, Weston, and Son. In the following year it became Weston, Young, and Bostock. In 1831 the name of Bostock disappears from the list, and that of Weston in 1847, when their style became C. A. Young and Young Junior. In consequence, it is said, of the death of his son, Mr. Young in 1849 relinquished the business, which was taken by the London and Westminster Bank, who opened a branch there. This was the first private bank that was absorbed by a joint-stock bank.

CLOSING OF THE EXCHEQUER IN 1672.

(The original in the possession of C. T. Praed, Esq.)

CHARLES R.

Our Will and pleasure is that you forthwith prepare a Bill for Our Royall Signature to pass Our great Seale in these words or to this effect.—

CHARLES THE SECOND by the grace of God of England Scotland Ffrance and Ireland King Defend of the faith &c^a To all to whom these presents shall come Greeting Whereas since the time of Our happy Restoracōn We have been involved in great Forreigne Warrs as well for the Safety of Our Governmen^t as for the vindicacōn of the Rights and privileges of Our Subjects. In the prosecucōn whereof we have been constrainyd for some years past contrary to Our Inclinacōns to postpone the paym^t of the moneys due from us to Several Goldsmiths & others upon Talleys Struck and Orders Registered on & payable out of Severall Branches of Our Revenue and otherwise And although the present Posture of Our affaires cannot reasonably spare so greate a sum as must be applied to the Satisfaction of those debts Yet considering the great difficultys which very many of Our Loving Subjects (who putt their moneys into the hands of those Goldsmiths & others from whom We received it) doe at present lie under almost to their utter ruine for want of their said moneys We have rather chose out of Our princely care & compassion towards Our people to suffer in Our owne Affaires then that Our Loving Subjects should want Soe seasonable a Relife, And having seriously considered of the way & means to effect this Our present purpose We could not find any more effectuall & less prejudicall to Us in the present posture of Our Revenu^t then by granting to each of them the said Goldsmiths & others to whom We are indebted as aforesaid respectively and to his & their respective heires & Assigues an annuall sum or paym^t answerable in value yearly to the Interest of their respective debts at the rate of Six pounds 3⁴ Cent 3⁴ Annum for all such moneys as are due unto them, The consideracōn whereof induced us to command Our high Trear of England to cause all the Accompts of the said Goldsmiths to be stated and made up by Richard Aldworth Esq^r (one of Our Auditors) to the first day of January One thousand Six hundred Seventy Six Which having been accordingly cast up and Settled, it appeares thereby that there is due & owing by Us unto Our trusty and wellbeloved Subject Edward Bakewell of London Esq^r y^e Sum of two hundred ninety five thousand nine hundred ninety foure pounds sixteen shillings and sixpence. In satisfaction whereof according to Our intent in these presents expressed We have resolved to grant unto him the sum of Seventene thousand seaven hundred fifty nine pounds thirteene shillings & Eight pence 3⁴ annum Out of that part of Our Revenue of Excise which was granted unto Us Our heires and Successors for ever by an Act of Parliam^t made in the twelveth yeare of Our Reigne Entituled (An Act for taking away the Court of Wards & Liverys & Tenures in Capite and by Knights Service & Purveyance and for Settling a Revenue upon his Ma^v in lieu thereof Know Ye therefore that We for the consideracōn aforesaid and in Satisfaction or Lieu of the said debt or sum of Two hundred ninety five thousand nine hundred ninety four pounds Sixteene shillings & sixpence by Us owing to the said Edward Backwell Esq^r. and of Our especiall grace certaine knowledge & meer mecon Have given and granted & by these presents for Us Our heires & succ^r. doe give & grant unto the said Edward Backwell Esq^r. his heires & Assignes one Annuall or yearly Rent or sum of Seaventeene thousand seaven hundred fiftynine pounds Thirteen shills and Eight pence of lawfull money of England to be yearly had received & taken by the said Edward Backwell Esq^r. his heires and Assignes for ever Out of the Rents Revenues Profits Perquisites Emoluments and payments reserved arising accruing or coming or that hereafter shall or may be received arise accrue or become due or payable unto Us Our heires & succ^r out of for or by reason of the duty of Excise upon beer ale & other Liquors within our Kingdome of England Dominion of Wales or Towne of Berwick upon Twede by virtue of the said Act of Parliam^t. The said sum of Seaventeene thousand seaven hundred fiftynine pounds thirteene shillings & Eight pence $\frac{7}{4}$ annu to be payd Quarterly at the foure most usuall feasts in the yeare (that is to say) at the feasts of the Annuntiacōn of the blessed Virgin Mary the Nativity of S^t John Baptist S^t. Michael the Archangell and the birth of Our Lord God commonly called Christmas by even & equall Porcōns In trust for such of the Creditors of the said Edward Backwell Esq^r as within one yeaire next ensuing the date hereof shall upon notice of these presents deliver up their securitys & accept of Assignem^m of Proporcōnable parts of the said yearly sum of Seaventeene thousand seaven hundred fiftynine pounds thirteene shillings and Eight pence for satisfaction of their respective debts (according to the true intent and meaning of the Covenant in that behalfe herein after conteyned for so much as their proporcōnable parts shall amount unto, and in the meantime shall not sue or prosecute the said Edward Backwell his heires Exec^r or Adm^r for such their debts, and the residue and overplus of the said yearly sum of Seaventeene thousand seaven hundred fiftynine pounds thirteene shills and eight pence to remayne & be to and for the proper use and benefit of the said Edward Backwell his heires and Assignes without any Trust or acco^r whatsoever The first paym^t of the said sum of Seaventeene thousand seaven hundred fiftynine pounds thirteene shills & eight pence to comence from the feast of the birth of Our Lord God 1676 And We doe for Us Our heires and succ^r authorize direct and appoint Our High Trear Chancellor & under Trear Chamberlaines & Barons of Our Excheq. and the high Trear & Com^r of the Treary Chancell^r under Trear Chamberlaines & Barons of the Excheq^r of Us Our heires and succ^r that hereafter shall be and all other Officers & Ministers of the said Court and of the Rec^r thereof now being or that hereafter shall be, that they and every of them in their respective places do from time to time upon the request of the said Edward Backwell his heirs or Assignes respectively performe all Acts necessary for the constant & due paym^t of the said yearly rent or sum of Seaventeene thousand seaven hundred fiftynine pounds thirteen shills & eightpence to the said Edward Backwell his heires or Assignes as the same shall grow due & become payable & of every such part & parts as the said Edward Backwell his heires or Assignes shall grant or assigne to any person or persons from time to time according to y^e Trust & agreem^t in that behalfe herein conteyned And as occasion shall be Levy or strike or cause to be Levyd or stricken in the Receipt of the Excheq^r of Us Our heirs and succ^r from time to time Tallys of Pro or Assignement or other Tallys as the case may require and as shall be desired upon the Com^r. ABRAHAM CHAMBERS, GOLDSMITH.

At different dates from July 25, 1683, to December 8, 1692, Abraham Chambers is described as citizen and goldsmith of London. He died before September 28, 1693.

In 1688 and 1689 he is mentioned as a goldsmith over against St. Dunstan's Church, in Fleet Street.

James Chambers, also a goldsmith of London (1698), appears to be his brother. The wife of Abraham Chambers was named Hester. She died before $\frac{1}{4}$ Mar. 1707. They had a son Abraham, born about 1680, and a daughter Hester.

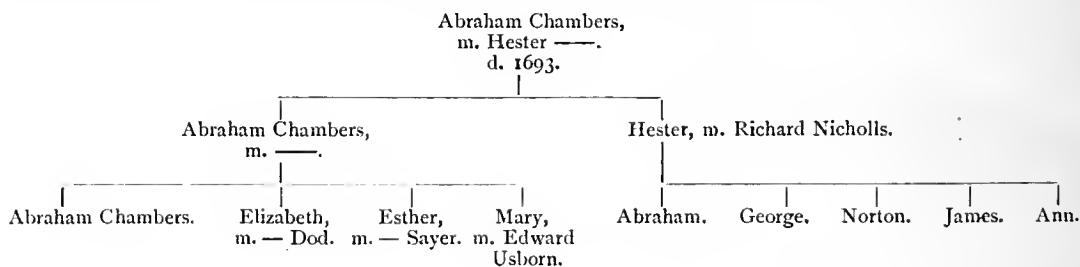

Hester Chambers married Richard Nicholls. On July 17, 1728, she is described as the widow of Richard Nicholls, late of the parish of St. Clement Danes, goldsmith.

She had four sons, Abraham, George, Norton, and James, and a daughter Ann. She died in the year 1728.

Abraham Chambers, her brother, is described from April 25, 1704, to November 11, 1724, sometimes as of the parish of Whitechapel, sometimes as of London; but in all cases as gentleman; on $\frac{1}{2}$ February, 1726, and July 17, 1728, as of London, goldsmith. He died before December 11, 1733, leaving an only son, Abraham, and three daughters; Elizabeth, who married — Dod; Esther, married — Sayer; and Mary, who married Edward Usborn.

Abraham Chambers, the aforesaid only son, is described December 11, 1733, and until his death, as citizen and goldsmith of London. He died in 1756.

In 1747, 1748, and 1749, he is mentioned as a goldsmith at the Falcon, in Fleet Street.

(UNINDEXED).

Atwell and Company.

Goldsmiths, were at the Griffin, in Exchange Alley, in 1687. The house was afterwards known as No. 1. This firm probably succeeded Messrs. Cook and Cary.

Barbut, Joseph.

Goldsmith, of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, was married on October 6, 1690, at the age of twenty-five, to Susan Guerande of the same parish (Bishop of London's Registry).

In 1717 we find there was one I. Barbitt, a large plate-worker, residing in New Street, Covent Garden, who was probably the same person.

Barnard, John.

Goldsmith, time of Henry VI.

Bartholemew, Thomas,

Goldsmith, 1695, Fleet Street.

Beevan, John.

Goldsmith, 1672, at the Black Spread Eagle, Lombard Street.

Bekkyswe, Thomas,

Goldsmith, time of Henry VI.

Bernes, John,

Goldsmith, 1422, was appointed to make money weights for the gold coinage.

Birkhead, Nicholas,

Goldsmith, King's Head, Holborn, advertised in the London Gazette, June 1, 1693, that he "hath left off his trade and desires all Persons who have any goods in his Hands to fetch them away by the 10th July or else they will be exposed for sale, he is now living over against the White Hart at Knights Bridge."

Booke, Fulk,

Goldsmith, 1686, King's Head, Cheapside.

Bostock, Nathaniel,

A goldsmith of Pall Mall, became bankrupt in 1720; afterwards he set up as a Broker in Exchange Alley in Lombard Street.

The London Journal of July 27, 1728, relates that the above-named was murdered and robbed at Lambeth, upon the Causeway between the Thames and the Archbishop's Palace. "The last place the deceased was at was the Antwerp Tavern near the Royal Exchange, where he said he was going to meet some bad people, and asked the man of the House to go along with him, but he could not; he had about him a good number of bonds, and desired a Pin, with which he pinn'd up his pocket. He had that day observed a Fellow dogging and watching him about the Alley; as he was counting over about £3000 in Bank notes, he said to those about him, Do ye know that Man there? They said No; I believe he is some Rascal, reply'd he, for he has watch'd me a good while. He is supposed to be returning home about 11 of the clock, when he was murdered; for about that hour two Boys in a Boat near that Place heard a Man cry out, and beg most vehemently to have his Life spared. Upon which they called out Murder, but no Help at all was near. Saturday morning early, his Cloaths, his hat and wig were found upon the Place, all bloody, and cut in several places, and the Wall was besprinkled with Gore."

Boteler, Robert,

Goldsmith, time of Henry VI.

Bowdon, Edward,

Goldsmith, time of Henry VI.

Brasey or Brassey, Thomas,

Goldsmith, was at the Lamp, in Lombard Street between 1692 and 1696.

Butler,

Goldsmith, 1673, the Anchor, Cheapside.

Cayne, Andrew,

Goldsmith, 1696, Bishopsgate Without.

Chapman, William,

Goldsmith, 1681, at the Rose, Tower Street.

Colle or Colney, Stephen,

Goldsmith, time of Henry VI.

Cordial,

Goldsmith, 1687, Rose and Crown, Cheapside.

Cory, Thomas,

Goldsmith, 1689, near Fleet Bridge.

Davy, Oliver,

Goldsmith, 1474. He bequeathed money to the Goldsmiths' Company.

Days, Thomas,

Goldsmith, 1687, Queen's Head, over against St. Margaret's Church, Southwark.

Dorsett and Co.,

Bankers, of 68, New Bond Street.

"Lately Sir Herbert Mackworth's bank, at Swansea, forwarded by the mail coach from thence to their banking-house, in London, 2000 guineas ; they were packed up tightly in strong brown paper rouleaus, and inclosed in a small hamper. As far as Bristol they were carried safe, but there in shifting and dividing the luggage, it fell to the lot of this little hamper, as it was judged too heavy for the mail-coach, to be put into that part called the rumble-tumble of another coach belonging to the same proprietors, which sets out the same time as the mail, but does not travel quite so fast. When the coachman came to unload at Thatchem he found some loose guineas in the bottom of the rumble-tumble, on which he immediately called Mr. Froment, his master ; they searched, and found the contents of the hamper worked out—383 guineas were all that could be gathered in the bottom of the rumble-tumble, the rest were all distributed on the road ; by this time it was night, and it was in vain to go and look for them : However, a tradesman's rider came in, and he was bragging of his good luck, for that he said he had lost on the road, a few days before, 30 guineas, out of a hole in his pocket, he had now had the good fortune to pick up 29 on that same road ; on which they were immediately challenged as the property of Sir Herbert Mackworth : What, said the rider, shall I have the ill-luck to lose, and never have the good luck to find ? Besides, how do I know they are not the identical guineas I have lost ? There is no swearing to a guinea. Accordingly he kept the treasure, and said he would justify it in any court in the kingdom. The remainder was never seen nor heard of, but it is supposed fell the fortunate prey of the poor Irish haymakers, with swarms of whom every part of this road at that time abounded."—From the Yorkshire Journal, June 28, 1788.

Ellysmer, Robert,

Goldsmith, time of Henry VI.

Everard, Charles,

Citizen and goldsmith, 1658-1700, son of Charles Everard, late of the Unicorn in Lombard Street, who died in 1665. From a deed in the possession of Messrs. Martin and Co. he appears to have had a house in Exchange Alley, known by the sign of the Palsgrave's Head, which had been built by Alderman Backwell.

Exnyng, Harry,

Goldsmith, time of Henry VI.

Faukner,

Goldsmith, 1681, the Angel, Charing Cross.

Foden, John,

Goldsmith, 1692, near Furnival's Inn, Holborn.

Gilpin,

Goldsmith, 1698, the Golden Anchor, in Cheap-side.

Green, John,

Goldsmith, 1689, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden. He was advertised to pay a reward for a silver tankard that was supposed to be stolen, August 22, 1689.

Grosvenor, William,

Goldsmith, of the parish of St. Mary Woolnoth, Lombard Street, 1657.

Hale, William,Banker. The following is extracted from the London Journal, September 14, 1728 :—

"Mr. William Hale, formerly Partner with Sir Stephen Evance, a Banker, in Lombard-street, having, by some indirect Means, possessed himself of a Frank for a Letter signed by Tho. Gibson, Esq., one of the Representatives in Parliament for Marlborough, who lives in Lothbury, erased out the Word Free, and over the Name drew a Promissary Note for 6400*l.* payable to one Watson, which he sent last Saturday to Mr. Hoare and Company, Bankers, in Fleetstreet, and they gave him their own Notes for it, and the same Day he got them exchanged at Mr. Alderman Hankey's, and at Mr. Brassey's the Banker's, for their own and Bank Notes, with which he Yesterday bought some India and South-Sea Bonds. Yesterday Afternoon, Mr. Hoare's People sent the Note to Mr. Gibson, who was much surprised at the Sight of it, having never given such a Note, and not knowing the Person 'twas made payable to ; but observing, by Help of a Candle, the Word Free erased, the Fraud was discovered : On which immediate Notice was given, to prevent Mr. Hoare's Notes circulating ; and it being found what Numbers and Dates the Bank Notes which had been given him at Alderman Hankey's and Mr. Brassey's bore, they went to the Bank to stop Payment, but found about 650*l.* had been received in the Morning : Soon after a Person came to the Bank to receive two of the aforesaid Notes, each being for 200*l.* and he being stopped, carried them to a Coffeehouse where Mr. Hale waited for him, and where he was seized, and most of the Money or Value found upon him, and he is since committed to Newgate ; the young Man he employ'd to fetch the Money from the Bank, is secured in the Compter."

Hethe, Symken,

Goldsmith, temp. Henry VI.

Hill, Robert,

Goldsmith, in 1686, in Lombard Street.

Jenkins, John,

Goldsmith, 1697, Essex Street, Strand.

Jennings,

Goldsmith, 1688, Roe Buck, against Salisbury House, Strand.

Jennings, William,

Goldsmith, 1686, in Pall Mall.

Kelk, John,

Goldsmith, time of Henry VI.

Kendall, Roger,

Goldsmith, time of Henry VI.

Lewis, Hugh,

Goldsmith in Little Britain, was hanged at Tyburn, April 26, 1653, for receiving and concealing stolen plate.

Lovett, Nicholas,

Goldsmith, of Southwark, time of Henry VI.

Masters, Thomas,

Goldsmith, of Milk Street, died March 1, 1636.

Mills, John,

Goldsmith, 1687, the Leopard, over against St. Clement's, Strand.

Mory,

Goldsmith, 1693, the Naked Boy and Bunch of Grapes, near Hungersford Market.

North, Hugh,

Goldsmith, 1698, Strand.

Orr Orchard, John,

Goldsmith, 1697, the Rose and Crown, Little Lombard Street. *

Parker, William,

Goldsmith, 1692, the Angel, near Temple Bar.

Pels,

Goldsmith, 1687, near New Exchange, Strand.

Pepys,

Goldsmith, 1687, Golden Falcon, West Smithfield.

Peter, Simon,

Goldsmith, 1694, of Smithfield, advertised for a silver stewpan that was lost.

Phelpe, John,

Goldsmith, the Crown and Pearl, Strand. In the London Gazette of July 29, 1697, he advertised for all persons who had left Plate, Jewells, or any sort of goods pawned with him, to redeem them before October 1, or they would be sold.

Port, William,

Goldsmith, time of Henry VI.

Porter, William,

Goldsmith, was one of the wardens of the Goldsmiths' Company in 1443.

Preston, Richard,

Goldsmith, time of Henry VI.

Pulford,

Goldsmith, 1696, at the Spring Clock and Crown, corner of Admiralty Offices, near Whitehall.

Roberts,

Goldsmith, 1691, Golden Ball, Newgate, advertised for a black boy, who had run away from his master.

Roberts,

Goldsmith, 1697, near York Buildings, Strand. *

Rothley, William,

Goldsmith, and a warden of the Goldsmiths' Company, time of Henry VI.

Sedgwick, Francis,

Goldsmith, 1685-88, Cross Keys, Fleet Street.

Shaler, John,

Goldsmith, 1674, Unicorn, Fleet Street.

Shelley, Charles,

Goldsmith, Panton Street, advertised in the London Gazette, December 14, 1691, that a Hackney coachman had found a gold head of a cane, and that if the right owner comes for it, and gives a gratuity to Mr. Shelley and pays charges, may have it again.

Sommers,

Goldsmith, 1686, at the Golden Hind, in Fleet Street.

Strickland, Samuel,

Goldsmith, 1699, Katherine Street, Strand.

Toret, Henry,

Goldsmith, time of Henry VI.

Treherne, Philip,

Goldsmith, 1673, near Somerset House, Strand.

Wakyngknyght, Henry,

Goldsmith, time of Henry VI.

Walker, William,

Goldsmith, 1684-89, Black Lyon, near Durham Yard, Strand.

Wareyn, William,

Goldsmith, and a warden of the Goldsmiths' Company in the reign of Henry VI.

Wartops, Rowland,

Goldsmith, 1673, at the Lyon, in Lombard Street.

Weekes,

Goldsmith, in 1681, at the Black Lyon, near the Maypole in the Strand.

Wharton, Edward,

Goldsmith, 1694, Black Moor's Head, Charing Cross.

Wilcox, Thomas,

Goldsmith, 1681, the Crown, near the Savoy Gate.

Williams, David,

"French" goldsmith, 1697, at the Golden Ball, Pall Mall. He advertised for some plate stolen from the Dutch Ambassador. I have reason to believe that this man was the same as David Willaume, and that this entry in the London Gazette, November 8 1697, is an error.

Williams, Capt. John,

A goldsmith of Cheapside, died September 14, 1637.

HAIRLESS AUTHOR'S PAPER PAD.

"With Bad Paper, one's Beat is impossible."

The Author's Hairless Paper-Pad (Issued by the Proprietors of The Leadenhall Press). Contains, in block form, fifty sheets of strong hairless paper, over which—being of unusual but not painful smoothness—the pen slips with perfect freedom. Easily detachable, the size of the sheets is about $7\frac{1}{2} \times 8\frac{1}{2}$ in., and the price is only that charged for common scribbling paper. THE AUTHOR'S HAIRLESS PAPER-PAD may be comfortably used, whether at the desk, held in the hand, or resting on the knee. As being most convenient for both author and compositor the paper is ruled the narrow way, and of course on one side only. Sixpence each: 5/- per dozen, ruled or plain.*

The Author's Hairless Paper-Pad Holder—suggested by Punch—is equally useful to the busy few who write when travelling, and to stay-at-homes who dislike the restraint of desk or table. It is intended that the wooden rim at the side of the Author's HAIRLESS PAPER-PAD HOLDER should be grasped by the left hand, the right being free to travel over the whole surface of the paper from top to bottom. The height of Pad and Holder will be kept uniform if each written sheet is placed as torn off underneath the Pad, the base of which is now thick blotting paper instead of the old and useless cardboard. The ordinary sloped position when in use keeps Pad and Holder together.—One Shilling.*

- If to be forwarded by post, send 2d. extra for postage of single Pad, and 10d. for postage of one dozen Pads. The postage on one Pad-Holder is 2d., and one Pad-Holder and one Pad together, 3d.
